*Like leaves on trees the race of man is found;
Now green in youth, now withering on the ground.
Another race the following spring supplies;
They fall successive, and successive rise.
So generations in their course decay;
So flourish these when those have passed away.*

—SPEECH OF DIOMEDES, HOMER, BOOK VI.

*How the stately years march onward!
How the centuries increase!
How the cycles roll and gather!
How the lives of mortals cease!
Life is but a repetition—
For the man who lives to-day,
Loves and hopes like countless millions,
Who have lived and passed away.*

PREFACE

Few persons realize how much labor is involved in the preparation of a work of this kind. The collection and selection of the material is often the work of years. Many weary hours must be spent in copying faded records and deciphering weather-worn grave stones. Names and dates must be verified, necessitating frequent journeys to other places to consult reliable sources of information, all involving expense of time and money. Finally, good judgment must be used in separating the wheat from the chaff, and skill exercised in making the story clear and interesting. This is all the work of no lazy man.

My father, the late Joseph P. Beach, the author of this history, was a pupil at the Episcopal Academy in Cheshire during the years 1840 and 1841, and thus became interested in the town in his early years. Frequently, during his active business life, he made vacation trips to the scene of these pleasant school days, thus refreshing his memory of faces and places connected with them.

In 1869, when he retired from business, he became a permanent resident of Cheshire, and from that time to the end of his life much of his leisure time was occupied in genealogical and historical research. While gathering material for a paper to be read at the Centennial celebration of the incorporation of the town of Cheshire, he became especially interested in the early history of the place.

Declining many requests for the publication of this paper, he began the compilation of this more comprehensive history which, he knew, would be of more permanent value. With his faithful little horse "Dolly," he made frequent trips to consult the records of the town of Wallingford, with which Cheshire was closely connected during its early history; and he often journeyed to New Haven and Hartford to examine the colonial records of those towns and satisfy his desire for truth and accuracy.

For a number of years after the preparation of this history it remained unpublished, but when the Lady Fenwick Chapter, D. A. R. requested the privilege of printing it, my father willingly consented. It is now sent forth with the earnest hope that it may strengthen the purpose of the town to make its present history worthy of its past and that all who read it may renew their interest in old Cheshire.

INTRODUCTION

The delay in publishing this History was caused by finding among Mr. Beach's papers (which were turned over to me) several pages of manuscript with notes and data down to about 1840. As it had been Mr. Beach's wish to have this important period covered, and as it seemed unfair to him that so much of his labor and time should go unnoted, it was decided that the work should be carried on to that date, writing it out from these notes and memoranda. Necessarily this took time, as much copying and verifying of old records was necessary.

Mr. Beach's own work ends with the first paragraph on page 238, and while the remainder lacks his skillful pen and happy phrasing, yet we have tried to make it accurate, and we hope our readers will feel that we did well to add it.

Any additions or corrections discovered in the progress of the work will be noted at the end of the book.

CHAPTER ONE.

QUINNIPIAC COLONY—DISCOVERY OF SITE, AND SETTLEMENT OF NEW HAVEN—THE REGICIDES—COLONY OF CONNECTICUT.

“A History of the Town of Cheshire” would not be complete without alluding to the original settlement of the surrounding territory by those who came from England in the early years of the seventeenth century, and settled the Quinnipiack Colony, so called for many years by the people who came hither to establish homes where they should be free to worship God after their own forms and convictions.

It does not appear from an examination of historical and other records that the Quinnipiac Colony under the leadership of Theophilus Eaton and John Davenport had what may be called a “Royal Warrant” for taking possession of their “Plantation.” They sailed for New England many years after the colony of Massachusetts Bay had been established; and their first stopping place was near Boston at Watertown (now Cambridge) in Massachusetts, where they remained for nearly a year, resisting every inducement urging them to settle in Massachusetts.

In the fall of 1637 Mr. Eaton and others, in a pinnace or small sloop, left Boston, and skirting the New England coast, entered Long Island sound, sailing westward until they anchored off a “fair haven;” and subsequently sailed into a broad harbor which they found was overlooked by two high mountain peaks, now known as East and West Rocks. They explored the country sufficiently to determine that the present site of New Haven was a suitable place for the settlement of their “Plantation.” Then, after erecting some huts, consisting partly of logs, and partly of excavations in the bluffs (at present known as Water street, near Meadow¹) they left eight men to spend the winter, felling timber and clearing the land.

Early in the spring of 1638 Mr. Eaton and his company sailed from Boston, reaching Quinnipiac in a couple of weeks, where they held their first religious service under the shelter of a "large spreading oak." They next proceeded to erect houses, having previously purchased the land from the Indian sachems who were then in possession. These purchases occupied the greater part of the year 1638. The territory acquired by the New Haven Colony embraced a tract bounded on the south by Long Island sound, and extending from Saybrook bounds to Stamford and Greenwich, with an average width to the northward of twenty miles. Two or three years previously the Colony of Connecticut had purchased lands at the mouth of the Connecticut river extending up to Wethersfield, Hartford and Windsor, to the Springfield plantation in Massachusetts. The Connecticut colony under Mr. Hooker, had come overland with all their cattle and "household gear" to the present site of the City of Hartford. Their possessions extended southward twenty miles or more. Its southern boundary after all the negotiations with the Indians had been concluded, became the northern boundary of the New Haven or Quinnipiac Colony. The Indian titles being extinguished, and terms of "Peace and Amity" having been made; the settlers under Messrs. Eaton and Davenport proceeded to erect their "Plantation," taking a form of government based largely upon "the Word of God" which our ancestors recognized as the "true foundation stone of all government."

They formulated a "Plantation Covenant" which was agreed to and signed by one hundred and eleven persons on "ye 4th day of ye 4th month," called June, 1639.

Under this Covenant the proper officers of the Colony were appointed, and the machinery of government was put in operation after the manner approved of by the people of those days.

An oligarchy similar to that established at New Haven would not be tolerated at the present day, but in those days, with Indians all around them and a Dutch settlement at New York, it was not only a necessity but the only defence they could adopt for the well being of the community. Its laws were, no doubt, far more onerous than many of those restrictions put upon the people of the old country by the King of England and his courtiers; but as these pioneers governed themselves, and submitted cheerfully to the majority rule, obeying without complaint "all those in authority over them;" they were happy and contented.

From 1639 the colony of New Haven prospered. The city was laid out half a mile square, and sub-divided into nine squares (the central square being the present "Green") with "suburb lands" sufficient to give all the "free planters" "house lots" and farm lands, and also accommodate many persons who came from other "Plantations" to the New Haven Colony. These persons were "admitted" as "after planters" and by purchase many became "Free Planters," having obtained the consent of the "New Haven Courte" to buy out all the rights, titles and interests of some original "Free Planter." The new comers were given land as the commonwealth, by its magistrates or "Generall Courte" in town meeting assembled "saw fitt;" but generally with the proviso that the "Courte might repeal the deed of gift at its good pleasure if the persons were found to be undesirable inhabitants."

From England and from Massachusetts, many persons came to New Haven Colony. Its population increased rapidly. The first houses, generally built of either stone or logs, thatched with hay and straw, gave place to framed buildings, and we have abundant evidence that within five years substantial two story, full framed buildings were erected; that of Governor Theophilus Eaton being probably the largest, having many rooms.

A company went from New Haven to Milford, where they established a plantation in 1639. Another company planted themselves at Branford, another at Stamford, and others crossed the sound to Southold on Long Island. All these withdrawals from New Haven into separate plantations so weakened the Quinnipiac Colony that in 1643 they all reunited under one "Generall Courte" which thereafter governed them all under the name of the New Haven Colony.

Under this jurisdiction all the lands purchased from the Indians and all the English settlements were governed at New Haven, and there was assembled the General Court whose authority was paramount throughout that part of Connecticut lying along the sound from Saybrook on the Connecticut river to Greenwich; where the Dutch governor of New York state claimed jurisdiction.

The Connecticut Colony at Hartford, Wethersfield and Windsor, had been equally enterprising. They bought Indian lands, from the Connecticut river west to the borders of the State of New York; and northward to the confines of Massachusetts. This Hartford colony, however, claimed to hold its grant by purchases from different patentees, some of those noblemen who obtained from the king grants of land in America by furnishing Charles the First with money to squander among his favorites. This Royal Grant, at second hand, was deemed by the Connecticut colony a better title to its possessions than that of the colony of New Haven, which had no color of a Royal English title to the territory it had purchased of the Indians.

Nevertheless both colonies dwelt together in peace and amity. They united with the Massachusetts and Providence plantations by agreements for mutual defense against the Indians, the Dutch and the French, who had become somewhat troublesome on the northern borders.

This continued until, in 1660, King Charles the Second was restored to the throne of England. The head of his father, Charles the First, had been cut off by the sentence of a court convened by Oliver Cromwell and composed of prominent officers and magistrates who, after the restoration, were individually denounced in Royal Orders, as Regicides, and King Charles the Second sent out his "pursuivants" to capture any of them, wherever they might be found in his dominions.

Two of these men, named Goffe and Whalley, arrived in Boston in 1660, and early in 1661, they came to New Haven, where they were concealed by Mr. Davenport, and afterwards at the Judge's Cave in West Rock. Then they went to Milford, where the king's officers being close upon their tracks, they, not wishing to get Governor Leete and Mr. Davenport in trouble, boldly exhibited themselves in New Haven city. Escaping the same day, they concealed themselves under the "Neck" or North Haven bridge, over which the officers galloped in pursuit. The Regicides then left their hiding place and proceeded to Branford, ultimately ascending the Connecticut river to Massachusetts. It is well known to every student of history that the movements of these men, all of the time that they were in New Haven or its vicinity, was known to faithful friends. They were daily fed while in the Judge's Cave, and until their final departure they were concealed, if not by the authorities, it was at least by the unofficial encouragement of Governor Leete (successor to Governor Eaton), Mr. Davenport and others.

It is probable that this incident served to call the attention of the king's adherents to the New Haven Colony, and precipitated the annexation of the New Haven Colony to that of Connecticut at Hartford. The New Haven Colony, never having had a Royal Charter, was obliged to give up its independent existence, and in 1662 a Royal Charter was obtained by Governor Winthrop. After some resistance the New Haven Colony accepted the situation and became in 1664 a component part of the Colony of Connecticut. Thenceforward the "Generall Courte" was held at Hartford, and from that court issued all the laws that governed New Haven and other towns of the Commonwealth.

CHAPTER TWO.

THE NEW VILLAGE—KING PHILIP'S WAR—CHURCH SOCIETY—LAY-OUTS OF LAND—LIST OF PROPRIETORS.

The union with the Connecticut Colony having been perfected, and New Haven (no longer a colony, but now an important town), having been confirmed in its ownership of the Indian lands it had purchased, began to consider ways and means for providing land and employment for the large surplus population within its borders. To this end some of the chief inhabitants and magistrates held meetings and decided to "erect a village upon our lands lieing above ye great plaine."

As this could not be done without consent of the "Generall Courte," the following record of a session held at Hartford Oct. 10th, 1667, gives permission to the town of New Haven by the following resolution:

"Upon the motion of the deputies of New Haven this courte grants the towne of New Haven libertie to make a village on ye East River, if they see it capable for such a thing, provided they setle a villiage there within fower years from May next."

The New Haven townsmen now discussed this village matter in town meeting; eventually voting to appoint a committee, who were to arrange the preliminaries necessary for a village settlement. The New Haven town committee issued an "Agreement" for the signatures of those proposing to become inhabitants of the new village. This paper, much torn, may still be found among the "Records" in the Town Clerk's office at Wallingford.

"We, whose names are underwritten being accepted by the Committee of New Haven for ye intended village as Planters and desiring that ye worship and ordinances of God may in due time be set up and encouraged among us, as the main concernment of a Christian People, doe sincerely and in the fear of God promise and engage ourselves that we shall not neither directly nor indirectly, do anything to hinder or obstruct any good means that shall be used by ye said Comite, or others intrusted by them to promote the premises, by securing a Godly and able ministry among us to dispense to us the word of God, and when such ministry, or a Church of Christ shall be settled among us, we engage by no means to disturb the same in their choice of a Minister or Ministers or other Chh officers or in any other of their Chh Rights, liberties, or administrations, nor shall refuse or withdraw due maintenance from such Minister or Ministry. And farther we doe engage ourselves peaceably to submit to such settlement, and Civil order as the said Committee shall direct among us either by themselves, or some other as a Comite by them appointed, upon the place, until the said village come to be an orderly establishment within itself, and lastly we doe engage personally to settle upon ye place by May next, commencing next, come twelve month, if God's Providence inevitably hinder not, and to observe and perform all and every yet other Articles agreed upon."

It was signed by the following 39 persons, a sufficient number, in the opinion of the committee, to establish the proposed village, viz:

The names marked with a star are those of signers to the Agreement, who did not "possess their lotts," which "lotts" were assigned to other applicants. Subsequently a few of these original signers were received as inhabitants the same as some other persons who applied for "accommodations" after the town was firmly established.

The New Haven committee selected from this list four persons, who were to oversee the work of laying out the new village, and act as the agents of the New Haven committee in matters pertaining to the distribution of house lots and the orderly disposition of the land about to be settled upon.

It is not to be supposed that a committee composed of New Haven magistrates, and leading men would proceed in any other than an orderly way; and therefore they formulated the following document dated New Haven 31st of ye 11th month 1669 (31st of January, 1668).

"1. The Committee do consent to put the said village designe into ye hands of a competent number of persons fitly qualified for that work, provided, they reasonably appear and engage to undertake ye same upon their articles and further shall appoint some fit persons of ye said number to be a committee with full power to manage their plantation affairs, until the place come to be an orderly establishment within itself.

"2. For ye safety and well being of church affairs, for ye Ministry and maintenance, the committee do order yt ye s'd undertakers and successors, before (they are) admitted shall subscribe to the following engagement, vide He, or they, as afs'd shal not by any means Disturb ye church when settled there, in their choice of Minister or Ministers, or other ch'h officers—or in any of their Ch'h Rights, Liberties, or administrations, nor shall refuse nor withdraw due maintainance from such ministry, and until such Ch'h be settled, shall submit to such order as ye said committee shall make, for a Godly Minister to dispence ye word of God among them.

"3. That the said Committee to be appointed and their successors in receiving of Planters, shall have due respect to New Haven persons, being fit and offering themselves, so far as it can consist with the good of the place and capacity thereof.

"4. Lastly. These articles being accepted, the s'd company and all others admitted planters among them, shall enjoy their accommodations and lands, without payment of purchase money to New Haven, to themselves, their heirs, successors and assigns, forever, so far as concerns New Haven town's purchase within the village bounds, the said town of New Haven consenting there unto. And we do nominate,

Mr. Samuel Street,
John Moss,
John Brockett and Abraham Doolittle

To be a committee whom we hereby impower to manage all plantation affairs in ye said village according to, and in pursuance of the above written articles, and to see the same attended and performed by the planters, either, are or shall be by them the said committee, and also for to disposal and distribution of allotments in some such equal way as shall best suit the condition of the place and ye inhabitants thereof, and to use their best means they can for procurement of some able and fit man to dispense the word of God among them, and lastly, we do impower them, the above named committee to make choice of such other fit persons into the exercise of their power and trust with themselves, for their assistance, if any such shall appear among them, and the major part of the said committee, hereby appointed or intended, have full power to act in all the premises, as they shall see cause, in pursuance of the said articles and undertakings. In testimony whereof, and to all the said articles and premises, we, the committee appointed by New Haven, thereunto, have set to our hands.

William Jones	John Harriman
Matthew Gilbert	John Humiston
William Broadley	Abraham Dickerman
Jeremiah Osborn." ¹

The governmental machinery of the "new village" being thus arranged for by the assignment of the four supervisors or town agents, the other persons interested began to make their preparations for the settlement.

From all the information, which we of the present day can gather, by a careful perusal of public records, and an inspection of many other documents that have come down to us, with many letters and private papers now in the collection of the Connecticut, New Haven Colony and other Historical Societies we are enabled to understand why our ancestors considered the planting of their new village a "very great undertaking."

The town of New Haven had been established for thirty years. The country northward was still an almost unbroken forest, infested by Indians, howling wolves, fierce bears, catamounts, and other wild animals who made both day and night fearsome to all except the most courageous of the settlers. The Indians living in the vicinity of New Haven, had been so well treated by the former Governor, Mr. Eaton, and his associates, that they were as a rule, very friendly. Nevertheless, about the time the men who had signed the "Wallingford Agreement" were prepared to go forth into the wilderness, tribes of Indians (living far to the northward), who had habitually frequented the shores of Long Island sound, for the purposes of fishing, "powwowing" and gathering shells wherewith to fashion their "wampum" or Indian money, began again to infest the white settlements, causing friendly Indians to become restless and creating in the minds of the New Haven and Wallingford people a feeling of impending danger against which it was important to take the most ample precautions.

To this end arrangements were made for the enrollment of a guard, the fortification of houses, and so placing of their village that all of its inhabitants could be speedily gathered together at the call of danger.

A year or more was thus occupied, the road toward Hartford, which had been but little more than an Indian trail leading through the mountain pass at the Hanging Hills, was carried over the hills to the eastward and widened. It now assumed the dignified title of the "Colony road," and became the chief highway and one of the most important avenues of communication with all of the New England colonies.

This road, which bordered upon the Quinnipiac river, gave convenient access to the plateau of land, "above ye great plaine," which had been agreed upon by the committee in charge of the Wallingford settlement. They located their village on high ground, about a mile from the river; and chose a locality that was certain to furnish all the elements necessary for a community willing to conquer the wilderness, work hard, and improve their condition. Those who signed the Agreement, were generally New Haven settlers with large families seeking a settlement for their children or dependents. Their descendants have since had reason to bless them for the exceptional wisdom these pioneers exhibited in selecting the site upon which the present Borough of Wallingford now rests.

The bounds of the new village were defined:

"Att a Courte of Election held at Hartford May 12th, 1670, as follows:

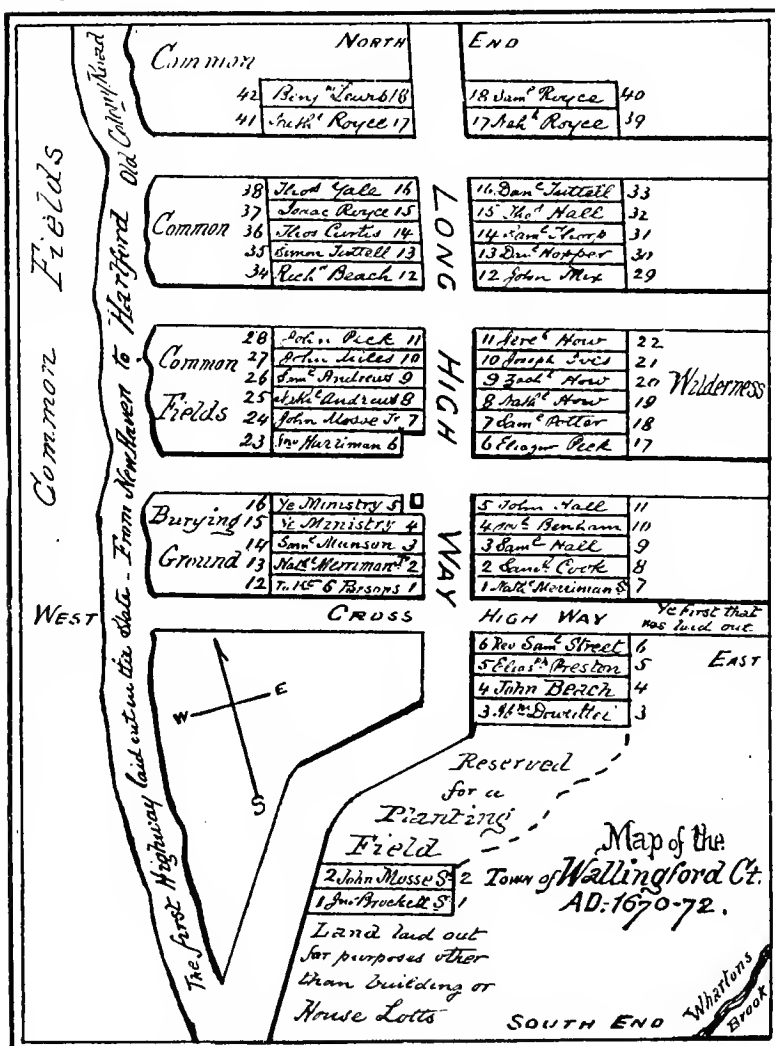

"This Court having been moved to state ye Bounds of ye New Village that is settling upon ye plains as you goe to New Haven—Do grant that ye Bounds shall come from the little Brook at the south end of the great plain to ye Northward Ten Miles, and from the said brook southward to Branford Bounds and on each side of the River five miles—thatt is five miles on ye East side and five miles on ye West side of ye River provided that ye said Village be carried on and made a plantation without any relation or subordination to any other town and provided the Bounds hereby granted to ye said village do not prejudice any Bounds formerly granted to any Plantation or particular person or do not extend to ye north any further than to reach the old road to New Haven yt goeth over Pilgrims Harbor.

"And this Courte orders yt ye Plantation shall be called Wallingford."

Two years later the following addition was made to the boundaries of Wallingford:

"May 9th, 1672. At a General Court at Hartford

"Itt was granted that Wallingford should extend their Bounds to the westward of their former grant 'too' miles their whole breadth provided this grant shall not prejudice any grant made by this Court to any person or persons formerly of any part of that part of land."

The committee, Messrs Samuel Street, John Morse Senr, John Brockett and Abraham Doolittle, showed themselves fully competent; from the time of their appointment until a number of settlers had built sufficient houses, fences and other accommodations to protect themselves in their new village, these men continued to work for the success of this enterprise.

An inspection of the records made at this time informs us that "forty-two house lots," and an equal number of River lots; "upon the river called 'New Haven East River' are laid out to severall of ye inhabitants." It is also shown by the records that of the original subscribers to the "Wallingford Agreement" ten or more did not "possess" their allotments, and their "house lots were granted by ye comtee" to other persons "with ye River lott belonging to ytt."

The committee and surveyors had carefully laid out these house lots, and all the persons accepted as inhabitants up to the month of April, 1671, drew lots therefor. Their names and the house lots each one obtained will be found in the map, which is a reduced copy of a map, originally drawn upon a page of an early book of Wallingford Records.

The map here given, bears the names and numbers drawn by all "Inhabitants accepted by ye comtee," and who "possessed lots" from the 31st of January, 1668, to the 15th of February 1671-2 when it was voted "Thatt no more house lotts be granted, except upon ye west side of ye River."

At the present day it is interesting to note how carefully the "Comtee" planned the lay out of their settlement.

"BEGINNING att ye south part of ye hill, upon ye East side of ye Great Plane, commonly called 'New Haven Plaine'; they laid out two house lots; next a piece of land (containing some forty acres) was left 'for a Planting Field' and then four more house lots were laid out. The record says 'These six lots having some land lieng (lying) at ye end of them towards Whartons Brook; it is agreed by ye Comtee that yt be distributed to the aforesaid persons (meaning the six who obtained these lots) as part of their other outlands, Hieways excepted.'

"Next to ye aforesaid home lotts it is ordered that thear shall be a highway crosse ye hill from East to West of six rodde broad; and from thence a Long Hiway of six rodde broad on ye top of ye Hill to runn Northward, and on each side of itt to (two) ranges of house lotte of six acres to a lott, and these lotte to be distributed."

It was subsequently decided that there should be two ranges of House lotte: "five lotte on ye East side, and five lotte on ye west side of the Long High way. Then a cross Hiway six rodde broad across the hills from East to West. Then two more ranges of six house lotte each on each side of the Long High way. Then another cross hie way of six rodde, and two other ranges of house lotte, five on ye East side and five on the west side; and soe to have another highway East and west, and more house lotte, on the Long Hiway northward as the townsmen may see occasion."

It was also "Ordered by ye Comtee for ye town of Wallingford, yt (that) no person or persons whatsoever that hath any lands granted to them within the Libbertyes of ye said town, shall have liberty to sell, let, give or any way allynyate itt or any part of yt, from himself to any other to bring in him or them to be inhabitants therein without ye consent or approbation of ye Comite now intrusted during ye tyme of their lives, or afterward, without ye consent or approbation of ye inhabitants of ye said town, or such as by them be intrusted with ye management of those affairs."

Two of these lotte were set apart for "Ye Ministry," and one lot for "ye use of the first six persons," probably meaning for other town purposes if it should be required; as four of the "first six persons" were in authority as committee men.

It was agreed that the town rate or taxes should be laid upon such sum of money which each settler should declare he was willing "to pay rates for" and the "Ranks" were settled as follows:

II "Ye Hiest (Highest) Rank shall paye on £100.00.00.

M "Ye Meadle Rank shall paye on £75.00.00.

L "Ye Loest Rank shall paye on £50.00.00."

For the land Divisions it was "voted Thatt there shall be allowed for the first division of lands; to each planter, taking in House lotts, River lotts, and all sorts of land. To the loest ranke 40 acers, to the meaddle ranke 60 acres, and to the hiest ranke 80 acres, and soe to keep for ye present."

There is no doubt that this orderly arrangement of House lotts, and agreement for the division of lands, was in a great measure due to Mr. John Brockett and Mr. John Moss, who had, some years before, explored the region; and Mr. Brockett having been the surveyor of the outlands for the New Haven planters, was well qualified to lay out satisfactorily the lands of the new plantation.

In the spring of 1672-3 so many persons had erected houses and fenced in their allotments that the authorities in New Haven concluded the inhabitants of Wallingford might safely conduct their own affairs; therefore the committee resigned in May, and thenceforward the community was governed by its own "Comte" or Town Meetings, at which the people elected their own officials, and a record was made by prominent inhabitants pledging themselves to "carry on ye town in an orderly manner."

At the same meeting the town chose John Mosse, Senr., John Brockett, Abraham Doolittle, Sr., Nathaniel Merriman, Sr., and John Hall, Jr., a "committee to approve the admission of new planters." About this time the New Haven people, mindful of their own interests, and fearful lest the growth of the new village should encroach upon their own reserved territory, appointed a committee to meet with a like committee appointed by the town of Wallingford; and settle the boundary questions which had been troubling both town and village for some time.

The document agreed to by this committee is as follows:

"I. By the Comtee for New Haven underwritt that Wallingford Bownds on the East side of the East River shall be from Brandford line Northerlie to Wharton's brooke where it crosseth the north branch, of the said brooke, and thence at the brooke runne into ye East River.

"II. That New Haven shall runn two miles and a halfe northward from the Foot of the Blew Hills¹ on the Mill river, upon that river, and the line from a stake there to the foote of the ¹Mt. Carmel.

Blew Hills on the East River; and from the sayd Two mile and a halfe stake along our reare west and by north to the ends of their bownds.

"Which issue they, the committee for Wallingford, consented too and accepted, and this to be a issue in Love and Peace."

"Memorandum thatt the committee for New Haven doe consent that the meadow between the Mill River and East River northward above the Blew Hills shall be Wallingford as to the bulk of itt, and Libertie of draweing itt as they shall see cause as though the line agreed too should cutt through itt."

The following year a committee was appointed by New Haven to lay out the bounds of the New Village, and their report was duly entered upon the land record book of Wallingford, as follows:

"We whose names are under written being appointed to lay out the bownds of Wallingford According to the Generall Courtes grant. We did Runn from the East River commonly called New Haven River, upon an East and by South line, five miles very nere Pishtapague ponds, and from there upon a North by East line untill it meets with Middletowne South bownds; and on East by South line until it meets with Middletowne West bownds. And on the West side of New Haven river, upon a West and by North line seven miles.

"As witness our hands this sixth day of November, 1674.

JOHN WILFORD,
NATHANIEL WHITE."

The report of these surveyors having been accepted, new inhabitants from New Haven, Hartford, Boston and other settlements applied for "accommodations," and permission to live in the town. The town committee having examined the credentials of these applicants reported them to the town meeting where they were either accepted or rejected as the case might be.

There was also a vast difference made between those who purchased parcels of land from residents in the town, and those who held a proprietorship in not only the land already divided, but in all the undivided lands. If the town permitted an outsider to buy land and become an inhabitant, it jealously guarded itself against allowing that purchaser any share in the subsequent divisions of the town lands which were held in common by the original Proprietors, or their heirs; and to this end they voted—"That not any man shall have power to sell his accommodation to another man, and leave the town until hee have dwelt upon itt three yeares, and after three years he may sell or lynyate^r itt to any such as the town shall approve of."

The early records contain many town votes admitting persons to full town privileges by reason of their purchasing the former right of some other proprietor; or admitting new planters who were needed in the town because of their ability as blacksmiths, millwrights, shoemakers, and knowledge of other trades. Such men were not accepted, however, without first ascertaining all about them, whether they were religious men, of good moral character, and had always comported themselves in an orderly manner in the "parts from whence they came," and they were especially careful that all new comers should agree to the "due maintainance of the ministry," the rate being levied according to the "Rank" taken up if the person was accepted.

It was voted "Thatt those thatt hold lots in ye town of Wallingford and are not Resident upon ye place and do not pay their rates within one month after demanded shall be liable to forfeit thayre lots."

Soon after the boundary lines were settled in 1674-5 news spread through the New England towns that the Indians under King Phillip were attacking the settlements of Massachusetts, where they burned a number of towns, and massacred many of the inhabitants.

In anticipation of trouble with the Indians a Town Meeting was held in Wallingford August 27th, 1675, at which the following order was promulgated:

"In respect of ye present danger of ye Indians itt was ordered that the Inhabitants secure themselves and the principal of there goods by fortyfying about two (2) houses, which houses are to be Mr. Samuel Street's and Lieut. Merriman's, and that this work of fortyfeing be sett upon ye 28th day of this instant by ye whole town; and followed until it be effected and whosoever fails to pay a fine of 5 shillings. Also that every man bring his arms and ammunition complete upon ye Sabbath day thatt he may be able in a fitt posture to do service if need require.

"Thatt the select guard serve as sentnals on ye Sabbath; the rest of the town ward 4 men every Sabbath and two every week day and be warned by order from ye constable by the watch and called and that they begin to ward when the ward breaks up and hold on till ye watch be set again. Thatt they begin and end att ye dawning and shutting in of ye day, and that both watch and ward come to ye constable yt their arms may be viewed if they be according to law. This untill further order, provided notwithstanding the select Gaurd is not hereby freed from warding on the week days. It is also ordered that the Drum beat at the setting and breaking up of the watch."

This vote, authorizing fortifications, furnishes abundant evidence that this Indian trouble was more serious than anything of the kind that had preceded it; and the inhabitants of Wallingford did not rest until they had not only fortified the two houses ordered, but they also erected heavy fences or barricades at important points. The houses that had been chosen were probably the largest and best built of any existing at that time. They were built of hewn timbers, strongly framed, and covered with sawn boards, but most probably thatched with rushes, hay, or straw, as was nearly every house built about this time. The windows were small, and may or may not have been filled with glass, a very expensive material in early times. It is well known that our ancestors used oiled cloths, and papers, instead of glass, when they could not obtain the latter, and we may well believe that very few Wallingford houses had more than one or two window frames filled with even very small panes of glass.

The fortification of a house was accomplished only by the expenditure of a vast amount of labor. All the able bodied men, and no doubt some of the women, too, were mustered into companies. "Sergeant Andrews, and Corporall Hall were appointed to call forth hands and teams," sufficient to bring in from "ye wilderness" the "palissadoes" that were to be "cutt and pinted" by another squad of men detailed for that purpose.

These timbers were from six inches to one foot in diameter, and from sixteen to twenty feet in length. They were planted close together in a trench from three to five feet deep, entirely surrounding the house to be fortified, the pointed ends uppermost. This enclosure had a strongly framed gateway of logs with loopholes and arrangements for speedily opening, closing, and barring every entrance on the shortest notice of danger.

The Governor's Council at Hartford had ordered strict precautions to be taken, for defending the several towns; prescribing the number of men, to be on "ward" or guard; and this was the reason the work of fortifying had been pushed forward so rapidly. "Att a town meeting held in Wallingford 28^h September 1675. Itt was ordered and agreed, hoping itt may be no offence to ye Honble Council. Thatt as in other towns they have a stated number appointed for warding considering the necessities of occasions and inability to hold to ward on ye 4th inst of ye town every day. We also have presumed also to make some abatement for ye present until more danger appears, or our superiours see cause to reduce us to our former injunction."

There is no evidence that the "Superiours" at Hartford, found much fault with the Wallingford people whose records inform us that every care was taken to protect themselves from any incursion of the enemy. At the close of each day, when the drum was beaten the people repaired to the fortified houses, there to remain at rest until an hour before the dawn of day, when the guard was changed, and increased in numbers; that being the time the Indians usually chose for attacking a settlement. At sunrise, if there was no alarm, the gates were opened, and those who had spent the night within the fortifications, drove forth their cows and cattle and went about their usual avocations.

The "guard," divided into suitable squads, consisted of every able bodied man except the minister, the two deacons and one or more of the chief men. Every member of the guard furnished his own weapons and was obliged to keep them with plenty of powder and shot, in good order under penalty. The firearms consisted of "match locks," and "fire locks." If a match lock, they were to be "charged with a fitt proportion of match;" and from thirty to forty feet of match was considered a "fitt proportion." This "match" was made of cotton wick or threads soaked in rum and impregnated with fine powder. It was then tightly twisted, and wound upon a reel attached to the gun; a big mouthed long barreled affair requiring a "rest," which was carried by the soldier. This rest was a short, steel pointed wooden cane with a crotch wherein the gun was placed after the sharp pointed end of the "rest" had been thrust in the ground, before the man was ready to take aim. At a signal on the drum all the matches were lighted, and must not be extinguished until the order was given. These matches were so constructed that they burned at the rate of about six inches an hour, and were kept lighted so long as the soldier was on ward or guard.

The "fire locks" were perhaps better weapons than the match locks, but were not considered as certain to be discharged. A fire lock might also be used with a rest. The owner was required to provide "half a score" of flints "well fitted to his fire-lock," with "shott and powder for at least five shotts." He was also to supply himself with two "bandoleers" or wide leathern belts crossing each shoulder, to which his gun, powder horn and other accoutrements were secured. The other weapons used were swords and pikes. These latter were steel pointed lances, fashioned by the blacksmiths, and fastened to the end of poles from ten to twelve feet in length. The town furnished these pikes, and paid a man to care for them. They were usually kept in a long box at the meeting house, when not required for use by the guard. Training was an everyday affair, while an alarm existed, and severe penalties were exacted from all who did not appear, and practice with the pikes, swords and firearms, according to the orders of their superior officers. The guard was also trained in cases of fire, and every inhabitant was obliged to provide "some convenient piggins," or wooden buckets, to be always filled and ready for use if "from any cause" a fire should break out.

When the guard went out to battle with Indians, they usually wore a thick canvas coat heavily wadded with cotton wool, and "quilted fitt for service," as a defence against Indian arrows, and the town went so far as to "order" every man who went out into "ye wilderness" to have and to wear such a coat; and "ye tailors about ye town shall consider and advise how to make them, and take care thatt they be done without unnecessary delay."

This public care for the safety of every member of the community was no doubt considered onerous by the young and venturesome spirits, and we find numerous cases where severe discipline was meted out to offenders. They were whipped and placed in the stocks, for what we should consider very trivial causes, but in times of public danger, in the early days, our forefathers were stern and unrelenting. Any order they considered it was necessary to make in their public councils, commanded the obedience of all, until it was repealed, or its enforcement rendered unnecessary.

The condition of armed watchfulness continued until the fall of the following year; when, King Philip being dead, and the Indians who had committed so many ravages in the Massachusetts and Connecticut valleys had been so severely chastised, it was believed the danger was about over; so in town meeting Oct. 2d, 1676, "Itt was agreed thatt all the labor thatt has been bestowed upon ye fortifications, shall be warned, and no account be made about them."

In other words, the people were to consider themselves amply repaid for their labor, by the protection they had been afforded; and that as all had engaged in the defence, no one person should claim any pay for the services he or she had rendered for the public defence.

We are not to assume that our ancestors during all this time had neglected their individual or town affairs. They arranged for the improvement of the breed of their "cattell and sheepe and hogs." Their horses were allowed to run in the woods and it was ordered "thatt whosoever shall bring in horses out of the woods, and after they have taken out whatt they see cause, do not drive back the rest a mile onward of the walk from whence they fetched them, shall be liable to pay all damage that may arise through their neglect." They also ordered that the owners of "cattell should pay for any damage done by those beasts," and that "two men whom the town shall appoint" should determine, "what Hoggs shall be yoked and ringed, and what hogs have no need soe to be." They determined also in their town meetings the "plantings," and who should be of the planting companies sent to the common fields, to sow or reap the grain; and in all things paternally overlooked carefully all public matters, and generally also many of the private concerns of the townspeople.

The Indian troubles recalled to the planters of Wallingford the necessity of regularly establishing a church and building a meeting house. They had been worshipping in different houses, where John Harriman, a layman, preached to them for the first two or three years. Then they invited the Rev. Samuel Street to settle and become their pastor. He had been serving in that capacity for several years but the meeting house which was "voated" had not yet been erected. The Indian wars, and other heavy expenses for defenses, had prevented the planters from building a suitable house for the worship of God. Now, however, it was determined at least that the church itself should be established, and as nothing could be done without the consent of all the inhabitants, this important matter was settled by appointing the "pillars" or persons who were charged with the details of the establishment.

This record, which reads as follows, is here inserted, as an example set by our ancestors, of the reverent way they proceeded in all their religious enterprises.

"Att a lawfull and full meeting of ye inhabitants of ye towne of Wallingford, and upon ye 15th Day of ye 2^d month (April) inst., 1676, itt was ordred and enacted by ye towne, that as there had been conference about establishing a church of Christ in ye aforsaid towne and allso a solemn day set apart and celebrated by ye towne unanimously, to seek God's guidance in so great a work, they have now allso all freely and unanimously concluded, if it be the will of God that there shall be a Church of Christ gathered, and to walk according to ye Congregational way, and have also all freely and unanimously left ye management of ye same in ye hands of ye persons whose names are underwritten, thatt if it be ye will of God to incline their hearts, so many of them as may be a competent number for that great work, may in his time lay ye foundation.

It does not appear that this church formation resulted in any very active efforts being made to provide a house of worship; although men were chosen to fix the site, determine the size, and procure materials, it was five years or more before a structure "28 foot long, 24 foot broad, and tenn foot between ye grown sill and wall plate" was erected. The inhabitants were poor, they could not command sufficient means to pay for the mechanical labor required, and the lands they had already laid out and had under cultivation barely afforded them a scanty subsistence.

They now determined to make a second division of their lands, and at the town meeting of December 27, 1686, "The town agree to Divide and distribute in our 2nd Division as followeth: Thatt there shall be a lott cast, who shall first make his choice and soe by lott shall all have their choice; as thus: The first choice shall take but halfe his proportion of land of his first division, and soe shall lay out to every man half his proportion of each man's first division, and then for the 2nd part of the 2nd Division. He that had his last lott, in the first part of the 2nd Division shall have his first choice. And soe the rest follow successively. This was a vote of ye Town. Ye Severall proportions or quantities of acres thatt falls by Right unto each Planter according to the Town's Agreement by which they would lay out ye 2nd Division, according to Ranks, Heads, and Estates is as followeth.

Sixty-six persons drew lots, and the land allotted to a Planter in the "Hiest" rank was 333 acres. To one in the "Meadle" Rank 222 acres, and to a planter of the "Loest" Rank 166 acres.

This 2nd Division disposed of nearly all the land north and west of the Long Highway to "Middletown bownds," and from the record made we learn that the Town of Wallingford has nearly doubled in population.

"At a meeting held on January 20th, 1686, a parcell or certain tract of land the town reserved for the admission of more Planters Lieng on ye west side of ye River Beginning at ye common Field by ye Mill,¹ and running westward until it comes over ye Broad Swamp and from thence on a North line to the River and so from thence to Nathaniel Hows Medow and then running along by the edge of ye Hill until they come over against the New Mill Hiways excepted, and twenty Rodds from the River excepted."

This reservation extended from the present Yalesville three or more miles westward, then North to the River and back again to Yalesville Mill. It covered all the Northwestern part of the town now known as Cheshire and Cheshire Street, with a part of the present territory of the town of Meriden.

Not long before this reservation had been made "It was voated Thatt Doctor John Hull of Derby and two of his sons be ad-meated Planters on condition hee and ye Town agrees."

After the 2nd Division had been made, these new "Heads" appear on the List, recorded as follows in a town meeting held May 5, 1687.

"The Town granted to Doctor John Hull of Derby and two of his sons, as a part of their first Division, the whole being two hundred and three score acres. Each of them six acres for a house lott a little above ye common field, leaving sufficient hie-ways, and soe much joyning to it as will make three score acres Also twenty acres on the back side of the Round Hill, part of it in the common field and 40 acres in the lower end of the Broad Swamp. Also 100 acres at the beginning of the Bare Hills on both sides of the Brook."

"The allotment of five hundred acres of land to Dr. John Hull and his two sons was followed the next year, 1688, by the Townsmen and Recorder being impowered to issue the matter about Doctor Hull's Divisions of land we doe agree that he may have liberty to take up 520 acres 2nd Division land to him and two of his sons in any unlaidd out land that lies for the 2nd Division, excepting that tract of land reserved for ye receaving of more Planters and we leave itt with Ensign Thomas Yale and Thomas Curtis to regulate them in their 40 acres which they have to take up, and if they see cause to give them liberty to take some of their 2nd Division land in that tract of land reserved for admitting more Planters."

The Falls Plain Division of land came next, sixty-five lots being laid out February 19th, 1689, at "ye head of ye Falls Plaine."¹ They were laid out for "home lotts" "on a Hieway tow (2) rods broad" and a quarter of a mile long, "two tiers" of lots. Those on the east side extended from "ye hieway to the River," and the lots on the west side extended "to ye Hills." Each lot contained ¹South Hanover, Town of Meriden.

NOTE—The following action was taken by the town, which looks as if they had decided to have a little village of their own, at the bend of the river, where Hanover is now located.

"Att a Lawful Town Meeting Feby 19th, 1689-90 The town voted thatt the Falls Plain shall be cast lots for and laid out according to the written platform or Map::The lots being cast each man's lot is as followeth:: Feby 19th, 1689-90.

"The town voted thatt the Destribution of ye Falls Plain shall be according to ye List of Estates in ye present List::and Heds to be allowed att ten pounds per head:Male and Female."

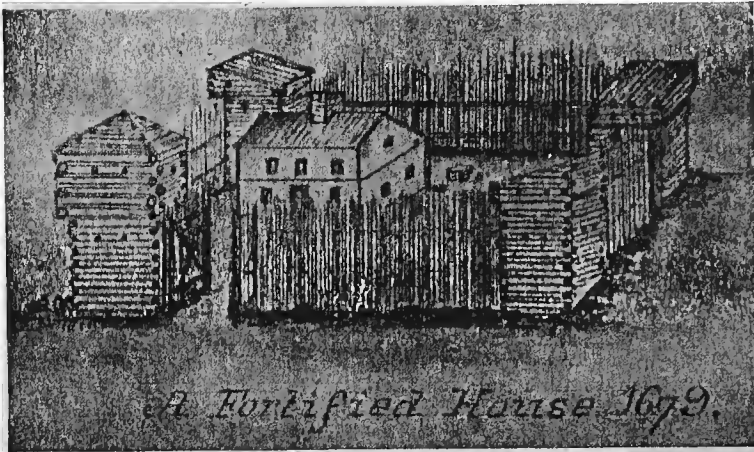

The map contained memoranda evidently correcting errors, which have been eliminated from the map here given. The surveyor made very close calculations. He widened or lengthened the lots as he laid them out, so that as near as possible every lot contained about the same quantity of Land.

It does not appear that any who drew lots in the Falls Plain built houses there or turned them into "home lots." The "hieway" became later a "Country road."

from $3\frac{1}{2}$ to 4 acres of land. This division is now known as Hanover in the south part of the town of Meriden.

Scarcely had this division been made when the French and their Indian allies from Canada began to make war upon the English settlements of the Connecticut valley, and within two weeks the town ordered a fort to be built around the barely completed meeting house. This war lasted eleven years, and while danger was always imminent the planters of Wallingford, by reason of extra precautions escaped having any of their townsmen cut off by prowling bands of Indians, and carried into captivity to Canada. Many incautious persons in neighboring towns were thus either massacred, or carried off; and in view of such depredations the town "Voated that settlements beyond ye Blew hills might not be made except ye persons desiring to goe, goe in Companys of eight or more men, with propper arms." It was also declared "thatt men who goe to ye west farms¹ shall not goe until an hour after sunrise, and shall come back an hour befoar ye sun shall sett;" "and shall bear armes."

While the French from Canada were harassing the English settlements, another division of land was made by the town of ¹Cheshire.

Wallingford called in the records the "Cleared Plain Division." It distributed some land along the river, and north of the present town towards Yalesville where a new mill had been erected.

For some years before this, sundry planters having land allotted to them in the several Devisions had obtained "liberty of ye town" to exchange with each other their near at home outlands, for other land they deemed more desirable for cultivation. They would "goe in parties of eight" with "propper armes into ye wilderness," and finding a suitable spot for their purpose, would plant corn, cut hay, fell timber, and do other farm work, protecting themselves at night in rude log forts, if they found themselves at too great a distance from the town to return there before sunset. Previous to the troubles with the French, a number of these small parties had explored the neighborhood of Wallingford, and the records inform us that the earliest of these expeditions was to the westward of the Blew Hills, across the "New Haven East River" to the valley of the Mill River, "thatt goeth toward ye New Haven bownds."

This region was appropriately named "Ye Fresh Meddow" and was favorably known, as early as 1676-1680 to the adventurous planters and their brave full grown sons who assisted them in gathering hay and cutting pipe staves in this part of the Wallingford settlement. Later it was called the "West farms," and surveyors Curtice and Yale were authorized to "lay out" lands to such persons who chose to take up their 2d Division land, for similar allotments in the undivided lands on the "west side of ye Great River over by ye West Rocks."

A "lay out" of land did not permit the planter to locate himself and his family upon the land thus "layed out" to him. It simply gave him a prior right to the particular spot he had chosen as suitable for him or his sons to cultivate and improve when the war clouds should have passed over.

A copy of one of these early "lay outs" finds an appropriate place in these pages from the fact that it was issued to Lieut. Samuel Hall, grandfather of the Rev. Samuel Hall, the first pastor of the church in Cheshire. It is as follows:

"Layed out for Left. Samuel Hall his second choyce of his second devision and it Lyeth adjoining to his first choyce so yt now both are one piece."

"Beginning at a white oak tree standing on ye East side of ye river called Nuhaven Mill River about 25 Rodds from ye River half a mile above Scots Rock: from thence Westward 132 Rods to a stone yt lyeth in ye line between Samuel Cook and ye said Samuel Hall¹ and from thence Southward half a mile above Scots Rock² and from thence westward 132 Rods to a stone yt lyeth in ye line Between Sam^{ll} Cook and ye above said Sam^{ll} Hall and from thence southward half a mile to a black oak Tree; this tree standeth westward from ye square line 42 Rodds. From this Tree Eastward 85 Rodds then gets away South 120 Rodds to a chesnut tree and then Eastward 80 Rodds to ye first square line yt cometh from ye first station. It is on ye East side of ye Mill River—for by reason of ye crookedness of ye river ye East Line crosseth ye River to ye Weast side of ye River 40 Rodds before we come to ye Southeand of our measure so we sett off from ye streight line 16 rods to a chesnut Tree yt stands on ye

²"Scots Rock" mentioned twice in the foregoing "lay out" is located in the south part of the town of Cheshire (somewhat more than half a mile north of the New Haven line on the farm of the late Alonzo Brooks). It was known by that name at the time of the settlement of Wallingford.

When the men from Hartford settled at Farmington, prominent among them was one Thomas Scott, father of Edmund Scott. The Colony of Hartford chose him in 1639 "to goe and explore ye countrie" at Farmington "and other parts to ye southward and westward." A son of this Edmund Scott, one Joseph Scott (who had frequently accompanied his father from Farmington to New Haven, through this region), was exploring the Tunxis Valley in 1666, and being captured by Indians was for a time held for ransom in the neighborhood of this rock. Afterwards men from Farmington came down by the Indian trail (then called "ye New Haven path") and encamped at the rock described to them by Scott upon his return from captivity. Thereafter Scott's name was always mentioned when this rock was alluded to and his adventure was no doubt well known to the Wallingford surveyors when they laid out land in this neighborhood.

East side of ye Mill River so yt the South end of this farm is 96 rodde wide and holds yt bredth 40 Rodds northward thence East to ye streight line againe so yt this farm lyeth for two hundred and thirteen acres more or less there is allowances for necessary highways.

“By Thomas Curtiss Survaer.

“Aprill ye 4th, 1688.”

It will be observed that the foregoing lay out of land to Left Sam^{ll} Hall, was adjoining his “first choyce” of land in this part of Cheshire; and, as he was a “Middle Rank” man he must have had something like three hundred and sixty acres “layed out” to him upon the Mill river.

A year before this—1687—Samuel Hall’s brother, John Hall, had one hundred and eleven acres of land laid out to him, “upon a plaine, above ye rock,” commonly called “Scot’s Rock.”

Other “West Farmers” are mentioned as having more or less land laid out to them in the south part of the present town, but this example of the way it was done will explain the mode of procedure in the distribution of common lands to the proprietors of the town of Wallingford.

In like manner, but three or four years after the “Fresh Meddoes” were frequented, land was laid out to planters who had gone up the river to the Northward of the “Falls Plain Division,” but we have no record of any settlement at the “North Farms” until after the war with the French and Indians. In fact, the paternal government in Wallingford would not permit such sparse settlements either there or elsewhere until they felt confident that their settlement would not be molested.

In 1694, the French and their Indian allies had been very active in the northern part of New England, committing many depredations, but after burning several towns, and slaughtering many defenceless people, were so badly whipped by the English in Massachusetts and New Hampshire, that they retired into Canada, and transferred their operations to the exposed settlements of the English in Northern New York. Connecticut became comparatively safe, and in consequence our people could develop the lands in their township, undisturbed by savage or French foes. Accordingly, at a town meeting held April 24th, 1694, "Sargeant Thomas Curtis, and Ebenezer Clark were chosen to goe and perambulate ye bownds between New Haven and Wallingford on ye west side of ye river to the end of our bounds" and at the same meeting the town empowers "ye Deputys to search the public records (at Hartford) to know whether the grant of the 'Generall Courte' to Wallingford Township, or ye grant of Waterbury Township, be ye eldest, and to make return to ye town."

The Waterbury grant was several years later than that of Cheshire, but the Hartford Court claimed the Farmington Indian purchases, and had laid out to Waterbury some land that Wallingford had, in 1685, bought from the Indian sachem, who was then making trouble about it in the Northwestern corner of "Wallingford town bownds." For some years these boundary questions kept cropping up, occasioning in some cases quarrels and bloodshed, until the Generall Courte took such matters in charge and called out surveyors to authoritatively settle all such vexing questions.

It was some of these boundary troubles that delayed the "laying out of their lands" to those who had received allotments in the Second Divisions. After the surveyors had done their work and given their certificate to the planter, the latter had to get two of the "Townsmen" (men in authority), to sign his "lay out" of land, before it could be recorded upon the "Land Record Book." It frequently happened that after a "lay out" had been made by one of the surveyors, the other surveyor would be asked to "lay out" some land for another planter. This last surveyor, not being aware that another surveyor had been over that ground, would run his lines sometimes so that his "lay out" would cut into, or surround the land laid out to the Planter employing the first surveyor. It is not to be supposed that our ancestors were so rigidly moral as not to take advantage of their neighbors, indeed we find frequently to the contrary; and in these surveys, it often happened that men had land "surveyed" to them, knowing that another man had been in those parts, and had had laid out to him an especially fine plot of ground. Then would follow a dispute to be settled either in town meeting or by a Committee. As our ancestors never took from each other anything that was out of their reach, the records sometimes indicate that there were Planters in Wallingford who had a very long "reach." As a rule, however, they most always gave up any unlawful possession, and the business of clearing up the wilderness and preparing the ground for tillage went rapidly forward from the time that the two men were chosen to "goe and perambulate ye bounds" on the west side of the river. The "widoe" Doolittle had been given 25 acres of Second Division land, and by town vote April, 1694, she was "to take itt up on ye back side of ye blew Hills joyning to New Haven line—nott to come within a quarter of a mile of ye west end of ye river lotts, and ye timber is to be common." The widow, no doubt, soon had company on the west side of the Blew Hills, for March 26th, 1695, the town voted "two substantial bridges." One of these was located at Yalesville; and the other at "Goat poynt"—"or at Sergt Doolittles castway, at ye best place between ym tow." On the 30th of March, 1697, "The town chose John Parker and John Hitchcock to settle what highways are needful to ye Fresh meadow, and ye Mill River yt runs to New Haven Mill."¹ Within three months after this appointment, one of these men, John Hitchcock "asks liberty" from the ¹On the land Records of Wallingford the first evidence to be found of a grant of land within the present area of Cheshire is the one to John Moss, Senior. He was the venerable pillar of the church, and one of the four men chosen by the New Haven committee to manage the affairs of the village when it was first established. He had also been active and efficient in the public business of the town and it is probably because of his many services that we find the following record:

"1677-8. The townsmen grant 77 acres to John Moss Senior acros ye 'Tenn Mile River'

Abraham Dowlittel,
Thomas Yale,

Test: Joseph Houltte, Recorder."

Townsmen.

In this same year John Moss had been appointed and "impowered to 'joyne persons in mariage,' administer oaths, etc., and was thereafter entitled to be called 'Mister.'"

Mr. Moss was then an old man. The author of the Family History says town, "to exchange thirty acres of land, in small parsells, for thirty akers of land on the west side of the river, former grants and hieways exsepted. In testimony hereof I have set my hand. John Hitchcok June 11th, 1697."

In attending to the business of settling what highways were needed on the west side of the river both John Parker and John Hitchcock had discovered that it was a region of great promise, and they took care to get some of it, as soon as they could secure surveyors to lay it out for them. Their neighbors found out this good thing, too, and it was not long before a small number of planters were located at the "West farms," and those farms were so popular that on April 28th, 1701, "The town declared by a vote that they would not dispose of or grant any more land, till the thurd Devision of land is layed out." They also, "sequestered all land not already layed out in the bounds of the 1st Division on ye west side of ye River."

This action on the part of the town resulted in preventing other planters from settling in the south part on the west side of the river, at this time, particularly, as at the same meeting they voted they would have a "two rod highway with ye woods beloe Dr. Hull's field, for ye towns yuse." This gave an outlet in a northerly direction on the west side of the river, and as the troubles between France and England had been settled for the time being, the Planters were now left at liberty to abide wherever they chose to locate their houses.

It now seems evident that there had been an influx of new planters and inhabitants into the town of Wallingford, most of whom, with the sons and relatives of the original planters were seeking favorable locations on the west side of the river, undeterred by such an incident as is told in the following:

"Wee, whose names are here under written, being pannelled as a Jury to view ye Corps of John Baker, doe give in our verdict of the Mosses: "The place of his death is not reported. If he did not die at Wallingford, his death may have occurred at Jamaica, Long Island, at the residence of a daughter." His descendants are noted for their longevity, and there is an unauthenticated statement that Mr. John Moss died in Wallingford at the age of 103 years under oath that we find nothing upon him that might be the Cause of his Death, but Providentially Drowning.

"Abraham Dowlittle, Sr., Nathaniel Royce, Samuel Brockett, Eliasaph Preston, Samuel Andrews, Jr., Abraham Dowlittle, Jr., Samuel Hall, John Atwater, Isaac Curtice, John Hitchcock, Eleazur Peck, Roger Tyler."

The poor man who was so "providentially drowned" was possibly a victim of the imperfect modes of crossing "ye river." The fording places were frequently dangerous. The boats were either canoes or roughly built flat scows, while bridges had not yet been erected sufficiently strong for teams to pass over. We know that frequent freshets must have occurred, for the committee in charge of the bridge building is warned "to see that ye timber got out for itt, att mill, is not carryed away by ye flud."

The records of this period of the town's growth now indicate that the tide was setting towards the northwestern reservation, for on the 28th day of April, 1701-2, the town voted:

"Thatt, they would have tow draft ways, one the weast side of ye river, one out by Bengeman Hulls, one to run to weastward to the south eand of the Brod Swomp, ye other at ye north eand of ye brod Swomp."

This last road opened up the present Cheshire street, and was followed up by later permissions to build cartways to the farms of various planters.

At the same town meeting, April, 1701-2, "The town voated they would have a hiway on ye weast side ye river from ye meadle bridg somewhear by Goodman beaches in ye most conveniants place, over to the farms to the Eastard of the West Rocks—for foot persons and saddled horses, this way to be tow rodds wide where it is not already laid out."

By this vote the farmers on the west side of the river obtained increased facilities, with a direct road from the "Meadle" bridge at the town of Wallingford over to the farms in the valley of the Mill river to the eastward of the "West Rocks," at that time the very appropriate title of the present town of Prospect. This road will now be recognized as the highway coming from the eastward and continuing across the hill, a little to the south of the present Congregational church in Cheshire. By subsequent votes it was widened and cartways from it granted to "ye particular persons praying for ye same," for more "convenient" access to their several farms at "ye fresh meddoes" and "ye Mill River." In some cases land was granted on the "weast side ye River" to those who would maintain a "sqfishient hiway," the "timber to be common." In this way neighborhood settlements were encouraged at considerable distance from the parent town, and between 1701 and 1706 there was a considerable increase of population on the west side of the Blue hills. Then the town voted (Sept. 16th, 1706) to replace the old bridge (Humiston's probably) by a "horse bridge over the river in ye most convenient place." Jacob Johnson and John Parker were chosen "fence viewers for particular enclosures on ye weast side of ye River," and in 1707 Nathaniel Hitchcock was chosen "surveyor of Hiways for the weast side ye River," and at the same meeting it was voted to go on with the work of the "Meadle bridge," and appointed "a Comite to look after the getting out of timber." On the 30th day of December, 1707-8, the town voted:

"Thatt there shall be a twenty rodd hiway from the hieway that was stated to John Cooks, Joseph Ives, and Benjamin Beach's in the most convenient places,"¹ and at the September 1708-9 meeting "voated" an addition to this highway "through our bownds, four or five rodde wide, joyning New Haven line."

This road began at the Meadle bridge and took a west by south line directly over to the settlements at the West Farms and the "Fresh Meaddoes," about three miles south of the present center of the town of Cheshire.

At the 27th "December" meeting 1709-10, same year, "ye town voted that the hiway on ye weast side of ye River that goes to Stony River, thatt takes off ye south weast corner of Docttur Hull's land and the addition that Capt. Yale has laid out for itt, at the North East corner shall be as now the town has stated itt."

¹This was the highway that had been voted in 1692, and had been the most traveled road to the West Farms, where the persons named and others had been located for some ten years, or since the close of the Indian troubles.

These several "town votes" opened up that part of the town of Wallingford lying between the Quinnipiac River, and the "West Rocks" or Prospect.

The highway voted at the town meeting of December 27th, 1709-10, gave an impetus to the settlement of Cheshire Street and the North Farms, which now began to rival the settlements at the West Farms, and on the Mill River or southern end of the town. The records show that about this time the surveyors were busy "laying out" land to men whom the town voted "as desiring to improve itt." They gave preference in all cases to the "hairs" and grown up sons of the original proprietors; and in every vote admitting new inhabitants, they were very careful to specify the footing upon which these new men were placed. They jealously guarded their titles of proprietors to the lands they had obtained under the terms of the "Articles of Agreement" with the New Haven Committee of 1669-70, and they applied to the May Courte of 1712 sitting at Hartford for a "deed of release, and quit claim" of and in the lands to the Proprietors of and within the town of Wallingford. The Courte granted the petition and such a deed was executed to them by the "Honourable the Governour and the Secretaries signing and sealing the same."

This was an important act, conferring as it did the land title given by the New Haven Colony, and settling for the time, some vexed questions in regard to the right of an "Inhabitant" to claim a share of land whenever the several "devisions" were made.

To obtain a clear idea of how these disputes arose, it will be in order to mention the case of William and Mary Tyler.

It appears that on the 23d of April, 1705, they sold "102 akers" of Second Division land "called the Lothrop farm," lying one mile from the New Haven Mill river and "eight acres" adjoining "layed" out on the east side of this farm. It was well understood at the time, that William and Mary Tyler did not convey a "Proprietor's right" in selling this land. It was only a small portion of the land that had belonged to some of the numerous Lothrop heirs and the title by which it passed into the possession of the new purchaser is clearly set forth by the vote taken ten months later. "Att an ajurned town meeting the ninth January, 1706-7, the town admeated Thomas Broox an inhabetant upon thatt land he purchest."

We have a list of 23 other persons admitted as "Inhabetants"; some of whom claimed rights in Land Divisions, which were never allowed; and on June 16th, 1714, the Proprietors voted "not to admit the right" of William and Mary Tyler and others who had bought land. Later the Assembly at Hartford by enactments made from 1729 to 1735, settled effectually the land disputes between the town "Proprietors," and the town "Inhabetants," and the latter could no longer claim ownership in the undivided lands of the Proprietors.

On January 10th, 1709-10, the town Proprietors voted "that the List that was made for the year 1701 should be entered upon ye records because it was ye list that our Thurd Devision was layed out upon.

"The reason of entering this list was becas our thurd devision was laid out upon this:—an acar to every pound in this list, only prentis and servants Heads exempted."

The List of Wallingford Proprietors, as then given, and as it had been added to up to the date of February 12th, 1712-13, when the Town "voated thatt the Proprietors of Wallingford were the original settlers, and their hairs, and ye others thatt were admeated as Planters; and nott those admeated as Inhabetants by purchase, and so voated in Town Meeting."

That List, with the additions up to 1712-13 contains 154 names, and so far as can now be ascertained, represented every "Head" or his "hairs." It is as follows; those names marked with an O are those to whom was allotted the first House lotts and River Lotts in 1670-1672.

These "Heads" as they were called in the foregoing list, were not perhaps all of them alive at the date mentioned, indeed we know that some of them were dead; but they were carried on the books of the town because there was still considerable land to be divided, and every "Head" or "hair" was entitled to its share.

So many of the living "Heads" resided on the west side of the river in the year 1711-12 that the townspeople of Wallingford divided their trainband into two companies, and then applied to the assembly at Hartford to confirm the act, which it promptly did at the October session, as follows:

"This Assembly do allow and approve of the division made of the companies or trainbands in the town of Wallingford, and do establish and confirm Capt. John Merriman to be captain, Mr. Joseph Doolittle to be Lieutenant, and Mr. Samuel Munson to be Ensign of the West Company, or train band in said town."

The "West Farmers" were now well equipped with the means of taking care of themselves. They had fence viewers¹ and highway surveyors of their own, and the town drum was ordered to be beaten on the west side of the river, from North Farms to ye West Farms, "on thirdsday or friday morning, proclaiming 'Town meeting ye next tusday eight o'clock,' shall be soficient warning for time to come for town meetings," in short, those on the west side were a community in themselves for all practical purposes, except the onerous obligation of attending town meetings, and going so far for church services on the Sabbath day, under penalty of two shillings and sixpence for each omission, unless there was some "propper" or reasonable excuse.

They were also much annoyed by "ye townsmen" looking so closely after them, in the matter of "falling ye timber," and "encroaching upon ye highways." It was, they thought, a great hardship to be compelled to build fences in their sparse communities, and disputes were not infrequently settled by "knockdown arguments," which often ended in some public punishment being inflicted. They were also annoyed by the rates ("rats") levied upon them, claiming that their farms were comparatively wild lands, infested by wolves, and other beasts of prey, while in the town center other farmers were not subjected to the depredations of wild animals, who frequently stole their sheep and destroyed their crops. Under all the circumstances we must admire the patience and fortitude of our ancestors who had settled on "ye weast side of ye Great River," and had brought under subjection so large a part of the wild lands belonging to the Town of Wallingford.

Surveyors of hiways—"for tother side ye river"—Joseph Andrews, Irenus Benham, Elaphalet Parker.

The division of the Wallingford train band into the East and West train bands, did not necessarily imply that all the members or officers of the West company lived on the west side of the river. A number of men belonging to the West company lived, no doubt, within the present boundaries of Cheshire, but it seems quite proper to consider Cheshire as having its real beginning at this time.

CHAPTER THREE.

PERMANENT SETTLEMENT—DISCOVERY OF COPPER—ANOTHER DIVISION OF LANDS—SCHOOL AND CHURCH MATTERS.

It is not possible to obtain all the names of those early men who went out from the parent town of Wallingford and erected for themselves homes in the then wilderness of the present town of Cheshire; nevertheless, the records of Wallingford furnish at least a partial list of some of the pioneers who were at this time settled upon or cultivating land in the territory west of the Quinnipiac River, on the then undivided lands of the "Wallingford Plantation."

Nor is it possible to accurately determine who, of this number were the first to locate and build houses within the precincts of the present town of Cheshire. By reference to the several votes of the town of Wallingford, the names of various men are given, as having been delegated to lay out roads, look after timber, perambulate the bounds, and report generally upon the landed property in the western part of the town, which was about to be divided among the "Proprietors and their heirs," and some of these men became settlers on the west side of the river, and erected the earliest houses in Cheshire.

It will be understood that while there were quite a number of settlers upon these lands, and although the land had been "laid out," they were not yet in possession of legal titles to the same, notwithstanding their occupancy. They were, however, recognized as having the first right to take up their lands as soon as a division could be arranged.

We may consider the following list of these men as approximately accurate:

John Hitchcock,	Joseph Ives	Benjamin Beach
Samuel Cook Jr.	John Cook	John Hodgkiss
Joseph Parker	Francis Hendricks	Joseph Curtis
William Hendricks	Dr. John Hulls	John Parker
Joshua Culver	Matthew Bellamy	John Atwater
John Tyler	Thomas Matthews	Samuel Royce
Josiah Clark	Nathaniel Andrews	John Doolittle
Timothy Tuttle	John Merriman	Joseph Doolittle
Thomas Brooks	Thomas Welsheare	Joseph Tomson
Josiah Hodgkis	John Lothrop	John Moss Jr.
Ebenezer Johnson	Stephen Hodgkis

Reading across the page, these names are given in the order in which the men appear to have become permanent settlers from 1696 to 1711-12. The land records of Wallingford locate eighteen of them at the West Farms; eleven at the North Farms; one at West Rocks, and two a mile or more east of the present church.

The farmers at the south end of the town, during this year, 1711-12, were greatly excited by the report of one John Parker, that he had found copper and perhaps other precious metals in the vicinity of his farm. This report, like all of a similar nature in any community, created considerable of a stir, and the "Proprietors of Wallingford" took prompt measures to protect their interests in this valuable find of minerals. They instructed their Representatives at Hartford to secure from the Generall Courte such legislation as would confirm to them and their heirs the full benefit that might accrue to them by reason of said copper mines being discovered within the boundaries of their town.

It was soon ascertained that these finds of copper were on the west side of the River about four miles west of the town proper, and upon the western slope of the hills to the eastward of the "West Farms" and as it seemed quite likely the enterprising farmers over there would lay claim to everything in the shape of minerals, within the confines of the land that had been laid out to them, a committee was appointed, an investigation was made, and at the May session of the General Courte of 1712 the following legislation was enacted:

“Whereas, there is a Copper Mine lately discovered at Wallingsford, in the undivided lands, which appertain to a certain number of proprietors, being the surviving antient inhabitants of said town and the heirs of such antient inhabitants, proprietors, who are deceased, together with such other person or persons who are admitted by common consent and agreement of the proprietors among themselves to a certain proportion of interest and right in the said mines; and more such copper mines or other mines may be discovered within the township of Wallingsford, either in the undivided lands, or in the lands that are divided and belong to particular persons; all which mines whenever discovered do belong to the aforesaid proprietors by virtue of a covenant or agreement of the inhabitants of Wallingsford made and mutually concluded on among themselves, as also by virtue of a formal and lawful quitclaim from the Governour and Company of the English Colony of Connecticut in New England in America, under their common seal, settling and confirming the said mines unto the said proprietors and their heirs and assigns forever: And whereas the well managing and improving the said mines will be not only profitable to the proprietors themselves, but also may be of publick advantage; which publick and particular benefits arising from the improving of such mines may be greatly obstructed, by reason that several of the heirs of the deceased original proprietors are yet minors, and thereby not capable of acting, and some few others of full age and capacity to act may now or hereafter refuse to act with the rest of the proprietors in the improving such mines as aforesaid, and thereby such mines rendered unprofitable:

“For the preventing of such inconveniences that either do or may arise,

“It is enacted and ordained by the Governor, Council and Representatives, in General Court assembled, and by the authority of the same, That the proprietors of the major part of the interest and propriety in the said mines, that now are or hereafter shall be found within the limits of the township of Wallingsford aforesaid, being of full age and capacity to act, (although they should not be the greater number of persons interested in the said mines), shall have power and authority, at all and every time and times hereafter, to improve all the aforesaid mines, and manage all the affairs and business anyways relating to the said mines, for the benefit and advantage of themselves, and the rest of the said proprietors, that are either minors or dissenters unto such their managements; and the proprietors of the said greater part of the propriety and interest in the said mines may and are hereby enabled at any time or times hereafter, either by themselves or by their substituted attorney or attorneys, to lease out, demise, and let to farm, the whole or any part or parcel of said mines, to any other person or persons whomsoever, and for such term or terms of time, as well for such rents, incomes or yearly profits, or other considerations, as they shall think meet; and such their leases, bargains or contracts, so made concerning the said mines, either by the said proprietors of the major part of the interest and propriety in said mines or by their substituted attorneys or agents, shall be accounted, deemed and reputed good and effectual in the law, although the proprietors of the lesser part of the interest or propriety in the said mines should happen to be the greater number of persons and should be either minors or opposers of such improvements or of such leases, bargains or contracts, that at any time hereafter may be made concerning the said mines. Provided always, that such minors or others, incapable or refusing to act in the improvement or leasing the said mines, shall in no wise lose their interest in proportion of the profits arising from the said mines, because of their inability or refusing to act with the rest of the said proprietors.”¹

It may well be supposed that after the Proprietors had thus secured to themselves and their heirs all the legal rights belonging to them in the mines “lately discovered,” they worked their find for all that it was worth. We have no record that either at this time, 1711-12, or that two years later, 1714-15; there had been very much copper found or mined. We may, indeed, assume that the mining industry was not very profitable; as will be inferred from the following vote passed June 16th, 1714:

¹Colonial Records, pp. 315, 316.

"Ye proprietors agreed to give John Parker teen shillings in case sd Parker be forever hereafter quiet and contented with respect to ye mine money."

In 1718 some speculators from Massachusetts entered into an agreement to reopen the mines within eight years (on a five hundred year lease), and there is no doubt that they were prepared for mining operations on a scale which would determine the value of any copper ore that might be found concealed in the earth in the town of Wallingford. Accordingly the Court at Hartford appointed three commissioners for the town of Wallingford and four other commissioners (well known men) on the part of the court for the term of two years or during the pleasure of the assembly—with power to wind up the business if it was found unprofitable, etc.

Great expectations were indulged in by the Hartford court and the Wallingford people that these mines would yield large profits; and particularly confident was Mr. Matthew Bellamy, who sent, in October, 1721-2, to the General Assembly the following petition: "That as your petitioner is living within the township of Wallingford and living very near the place where the miners are at work where there is many of them and especyally will be many more and there being no other person within six or seven miles that can well find them entertainment except your Petitioner whereupon your petitioner with the next owners of ye mines prayeth your petitioner may have a lycense by an act of this Assembly to keep a hous of entertainment that so your Petitioner may without danger provide for and entertain the miners and others as need shall require and your petitioner to be under ye same penalty as other persons that are lycensed by the Assembly Courte."

This petition is about all the evidence we have that the mines in the south and east part of the present town of Cheshire were worked, with a force of men sufficient to bring to the surface any valuable mineral that might be found.

Matthew Bellamy was a relative of Joshua Culver, and being "a good weever," the town (as an inducement for Bellamy to settle in Wallingford) gave him in 1703 "twenty-five acres of land," later the town gave him "fifteen acres more;" to which "Goodman Culver" added "tenn more acres to my Cozen Mather Bellomy, in addition to what ye town gave him." This farm is described as lying upon "ye east side of ye Fresh Meadow brook, nere ye hiway;" and was bounded "East by ye East bank of ye brook, and west by Culver his land."

This locates Mr. Bellamy as between the brook and what is now Cook Hill to the eastward, where adjoining each other Samuel Cook and Joshua Culver owned considerable land. As Bellamy says in his petition that he was "living near the place where the miners were at work," it is reasonably certain that the mines were first operated in the southeastern part of the present town of Cheshire. It was probably to the northward and eastward of Bellamy's place where the copper was first taken out, and after that, explorations must have been general all over those hills until the final failure of Mr. Belcher in 1723 and 1724. There is no evidence that copper was mined in this region previous to 1711-12.

It is, of course, impossible at this date to ascertain exactly the location of the copper mine discovered in 1711-12 by John Parker, but there is good reason to believe that it was in the south-east part of the town of Cheshire upon the earliest "hiway," that of 1692. That highway crossed the Mill River, and continued some distance north, giving access to the region in the neighborhood of Scott's rock.

The mines may be more nearly located by a deed given in 1716 by Thomas Matthews, who sells to William Merriam his "house, fruit trees, fences, etc., bounded north by Hiway, east by Highway or common land, south part on John Parker his land and part of land I bout (bought) of John Johnson, Jr., also a piece I bought of Thomas Richason and it lyeth neare ye mines, 20 acres more or less, bounded by land formerly of Samuell Andrews, north and west by Goodman Clark and the other parts by town land." He also sells to Merriam a piece of 17 acres: "It lyeth north side ye hiway which lyeth north end of Goodman John Parker's farm on ye fresh meddow beginning at a stake, etc." and concludes: "It lyeth on ye west side ye mines on ye south side Thomas Richason, 68 rods in length, 20 rods in bredth."

There can be, therefore, but little doubt that the earliest discovery of copper was in the lower southeast part of the present town. The above description would appear to locate it, to the westward of the Cook's Hill road of 1697 and south of the road ordered in 1692. The exact locality cannot be determined without an exhaustive examination of the ancient records.¹

That the operations were abandoned within a few years is made evident by the following record of a "Proprietors meeting held in Wallingford june ye 23:1723."

"Voated and agreed yt where as Mr. William Patridge and Mr. Jonathan Belsher: Did formerly hire our mines as will appear by articles more fully described there in: said Patrig and said Belsher not performing ye covenants in said articles concerning said mines: the proprietors do authorize and impower Capt. John Hall of Wallingford in his Majesties colloney of Connectycutt in New England: to render and deliver up said articles on our part: and Demand and receive of said Patrig and Belsher or either of yem the Articles on their part reciprocally to be Delivered up according to ye covenants:

"::We ye said proprietors do impower the said Captn John Hall to act for us:: as he would for himself in such a case: and to impower such person or persons as he shall think fitt in this weighty affaire:—"

The proprietors of Wallingford, after this experiment in mining, appointed a permanent committee of five persons to "act in their behalfe in all matters and concerns about said mines;" and this committee, and "the proprietors by their voat;" a few months later chose a committee to sign new articles with Mr. Belsher of Boston, and others (living in England) associated with him. It would seem that this new company did not do much mining work; for we find upon the records a vote "that said ¹These mines should not be connected with the Golden Parlor Mining company, of twenty years later, organized in Meriden. That company mined for copper at "Ye Red Rocks" and thereabouts in the north part of the then town of Wallingford.

Belsher shall enjoy his half part of said mines: in case he pays tenn pounds yearly to ye proprietors of Wallingford"—and they will not take any forfeiture proceedings, against him "if he pays promptly."

Mr. Belsher probably did not pay for more than the current year and then we find another committee appointed to "manage ye whole affaire," make "new leases," etc., but no company appears as the successors of the previous mining concerns. Since these early attempts to obtain copper in the town of Wallingford, quite a number of individuals have periodically (up to the years within the memory of many persons now living) spent a great deal of money in expensive operations; all resulting in failures more or less disastrous, and it is not believed that the mines will ever be profitably reopened.

There is no doubt that the discovery of copper mines in the neighborhood of the "West Farms" gave a great impetus to migration from the town center to the region of "ye Fresh Meddoes" and it is ascertained that some ten or twelve years before this mining boom, frame houses were erected and neighborhood settlements made on the several roads layed out by "voat" of the town to the "West Farms."

It was at this period that the increasing numbers of inhabitants caused the Proprietors of Wallingford to "voat" another "Devison of land" which was a matter of great moment to the farmers on the north and on the west side of the river. The meetings were frequent and every precaution was taken in the "voats" to assure the Devison of this land to "ye Proprietors" and their "hairs." It was again distinctly affirmed that only "proprietors" admitted as such, should be permitted to have a "Lott in this Devison," and not "ye inhabetants, or ye other men, who owned land that they had purchest;" and that "one haire only shall pitch for one propriety."

A very necessary precaution; because, before this time, disputes had arisen as to the rights of heirs; the oldest boy claiming the right to a "pitch;" and when he got the land, taking a double share of it; and locating his double share on the most available portion without much, if any regard, to the rights of mother, brothers or sisters who shared with him in the "pitch."

On the 16th of June, 1714, The Proprietors of Wallingford "voted and agreed that they will have their land sited" (surveyed).

"Att ye same meeting ye Proprs voated and agreed yt ye Rule shall be for laying out this land to ye Loer Rank sixty acres. Ye Middell Rank ninety acres Ye Upper Rank six score acres (120 acres)."

Up to the year 1714 the Proprietors of Wallingford had allotted their land as follows:

To each High rank man, or his heirs, 476 acres.

To each Middell Rank man, or his heirs 357 acres.

To each Loer Rank man, or his heirs 238 acres.

This had been done upon a basis of 40 acres to the Lower rank, 60 acres to the Middle rank and 80 acres to the Highest rank.

At the meeting held on June 16th, 1714, this rule was enlarged but was substantially the same as in the former divisions; giving to the higher rank twice as much as to the lower rank, and to the middle rank one-half more than to the lower rank.

Att ye same meetin: Itt was "Agreed and voted yt ye land shall be layed out in teers half a mille course & one wide the first teer to flank upon ye North West line of the bounds & run from ye chestnut trees North Eastward until it comes to farmington bounds or corner & then a highway to run through: from ye one end of ye teere: to the other: & then theree shall be another parellall teere eastward of ye sd highway of ye same bigness of the former & then a highway againe of ye same bignes, length & bredgth with ye former: & so ye teer shall run in ye same order & highways between them all until all ye land is taken up yt is in ye maine body of land that lyeth together undivided & if there be not land enough in ye tract to give every proprietor his proportion according to agreement: then they shall have it out of other broken and undivided land.

"Agreed also yt ye lots shall be Drawn & cast in this order

"Beginning at ye south end of ye west teere & so run Northwd until ye teere is out: & then to begin at ye south end of ye next teere and so to proceed in ye same order until all yt teere be taken up & then if any Lotts be wanting they shall be taken up out of ye other Broken undivided lands as it may be convenient, Agreed also yt no rocks or land yt is the most of yt rock & so of no vallew shall be Divided, butt if any such fall in teers they shall not be mesured into lots that matter about ye rocks to be left to ye sizers: and after all ye land of ye teers are taken up if any lots are wanting they shall be layed out in this order to begin att ye south end of ye bounds nere the teere & run Northward—and turne about eastward into ye broken land as ye sizers and mesurers shall think convenient until all ye Lotts are layed out, agreed also that ye high ways shall be six rods wide, and all Dificultye about rocks or swamps or other impedyments that may hapen in ye high ways the suvaiers & sizers shall have power to regulate by turning the highway a little out of a streight corse as it may be convenient, Agreed also that there shall be a hundred acres of land reserved for such use as ye proprietors see cause to put itt to near ye middel of ye second teer.”¹

“At the same meeting the proprietors chose Sargt Robart Roys & Sargt Saml Hall with ensigne Joseph Curtice to be sizers & measurers of this land and any two of them to act with ye surveir of his quarter.”

“The survey in ye laying out ye land shall take care to set out proper hiways to ye lands they shall hereafter lay out.”

“Att ye same meeting it was votted & agreed that ye committee that are to settle highways shall have power to Despose of ye proprietors lands to make recompense for what they take of any particular mens property in lands.”

“At ye same meeting William Tyler and others Demanded of ye Proprietors a right in ye undivided lands: and to come in for a Devision with ye Proprietors in ye Devision now to be layed out.”

¹The land here voted to be surveyed, comprised what is now nearly half of the town of Prospect, and nearly all of the western half of the present town of Cheshire, more particularly West Cheshire and Mixville.

"Votted by ye Proprietors that they will not admitt thare claim nor allow yem to have any devision amongst us because we judge they have no legal or equitable right."

"Mather How forbids any laying out of land untill they have had a tryall."

The claims of Mr. Wm. Tyler, John Tyler, Edward Fenn, Hugh Chappel, Mather How and "ye hairs of Doctor Hull Decest" was based upon their belief that notwithstanding they had sold some of their Proprietary lands; they were still entitled to full rights in whatever land still remained to be divided. The difficulty was settled at a subsequent meeting, at which it was "voated and agreed" that the persons above mentioned "shall have halfe a Devision in all oure undivided lands that yett Remain to be layed out. Itt is to be understood that they shall have proportionally according to what Rank they are of::And this agreement to be a finally ishew about lands:past, present and to come."

"And Capt. Thomas Yale was chosen moderator att ye sd meeting::at ye same metting ye proprietors drew or cast lotts & they fell as followeth—

In this drawing for lots, it will be observed that the total was sixty-one "Propriety rights," then existing as represented in the list that was entered upon the Wallingford book.

By a comparison of this list, with those of 1701 and 1712-14, we perceive that quite a number of original and early proprietors had sold out or abandoned their rights, and their names are no longer found. We may therefore accept this list as that of all persons representing every legal proprietary right in the town of Wallingford.

Another list made ten years later (1724) is identical with this one, and at that time the "Rule of two, three and four" was voted—so that each Head or "Propriety" received, as follows "ye high rank 40 acres," "ye middle rank 30 acres," "ye Lower rank 20 acres."

It was this division of land that enabled the farmers who were already upon the ground to obtain legal rights to their acres, and set about "mending" their farms by exchanging with their neighbors, or applying to the surveyors for more of the common lands that adjoined the farms they occupied at this time, and to which they also desired better highway facilities.

Other persons from Wallingford, New Haven, now Hamden and North Haven, Milford, Derby, Farmington and Waterbury, came in as either "Inhabetants" or purchasers land, so that this "west side of ye Quinnipiac river from New Haven line" on the south to "Farmington bounds" on the north must have received an influx of population that called for the constant supervision of the townsmen and magistrates to control and provide for. The record of the meetings for the following three years is mainly filled with minute directions disposing of strips of land, broken lands, rocky parcels, and with regulations against the unlawful cutting of timber and the encroachers on the public lands and "hiways on ye west side ye river." Committees of prominent men were appointed to settle numerous land disputes between individuals; and the Reverend Samuel Whittlesey of Wallingford and the Reverend Joseph Moss of Derby "being proprietors of Wallingford, were impowered to appear before ye Generall Court at Hartford on the 3d day of May 1715-16 to answer ye proprietors of Waterbury consarning certain lands they claimed, against ye proprietors of Wallingford," etc. In due time the Reverend "Deputes" argued this case at Hartford, and the petition of the Proprietors of Waterbury was "ejected" as related in the record of the Court's proceedings. This settled a long standing controversy and virtually gave Wallingford possession of all the land originally conveyed by the New Haven grant and by the subsequent grant of the Hartford Court in 1672.

The farmers on the West side of the river now had another grievance; and they carried their trouble over to the parent town asking for relief. The town "voated yt all ye children yt go to schoole shall pay tow shillings a head, and all ye rest of ye money due to ye schoolemaster shall be payed out of ye town Treas-urey." There were twelve "dissenten" to this "voat" all "west side" men and they must have discussed the matter to a late hour for they "agreed and voated thatt no voat shall pass or be putt after sun sett in town metting."

There had been considerable friction in the town meetings, and this last vote was an indignant protest against keeping the North farmers and the West side farmers at the town meeting so late that they could not get to their homes before dark.

At the next town meeting held December, 1715, "The following memorial" was presented

"Wallingford December ye 19th 1715: The request of ye farmers on ye west side of ye river, to ye town of Wallingford Humbly showeth yt we your Neighbours have for sum considerable time many of us dwelt remotely from sd town & under great Disadvantage as to ye great Duty of Edicateing of our children & god haveing in his great goodness much increest our Number we Desire yt ye town would grant us our proportionable part of that money yt we help to pay in order to ye Edicating our children & ye time we are alowed we will keep a schoole according to Law & ye Bounds we Desire assigned is west from ye rever as high as Timothy tuttle & timothy Beach's & we hope yt you will in your wisdom & compassion consider & grant our request in consideration whereof we your frinds in ye name of ye Rest.

John Hodkis
Jacob Johnson
Joseph Parker
John Doolittle."

"The above request was voated & granted for this year according to ye date above specified by ye town of Wallingford and Capt Yale, Jacob Johnson & Nathl Curtis were chosen a Committee to see what is ye farmers proportionable part of ye country mony; that live within ye bounds above mentioned."

These bounds extended about four miles west from the river—about a mile east of present church. Timothy Tuttle lived near the west end of the road "to ye south of Broad Swamp" (the present road to Yalesville). Timothy Beach lived on the lower road, about three miles west from the river and three miles south of Tuttle's.

This matter of schools had been previously brought up in town meeting and the majority living near the town center had always had their own way about it. In September, 1711-12, Henry Bates had agreed to be "scool master" for "fifty acres of land and £50 money a year," but at the December meeting it was "voated they would not give ye scoolmaster but £45 money." It is not known where this "scool" was located. It was evidently not convenient to the farmers on the west side; and then in 1713 the town voted "if children enter ye scool and goe six days he or they shall paye for ye whole year." The following year this was modified so that "children who goe six days::paye ½ year Rats, on those living within a mile & half of scool house from 6 years old to teen." John Moss Senr and Samuel Culver were chosen "to look after ye scoolmaster to see yt he keeps his howers."

School differences continued to be agitated for several years; but the attitude of the town towards the outside farmers was not at all satisfactory to the latter; and accordingly some of the west side men preferred the following petition to the Hartford Court:

"To the Honorable Governour & general assembly now sitting at Hartford—

"The humble petition of the inhabitants of the west farms of the town of Wallingford humbly sheweth that by reason of distance from the town and difficultys in the way are under grate disadvantages to attend on the publick worship of God & also for Edicateing our children, these with other difficultyes monish your humble petitioners to address themselves to your honours for a ramidye; and humbly pray this honorable assembly to grant yt we may be a parish Cosiety by ourselves & have ye privildge of setting up ye worship of god among us and yt our bonds may be East ward to the first fences and West to the West mountain and north and south about six miles in length¹ or that a Comitee of indifferent wise and judicious men may be apointed and im-powered to inspect and inquier into our dificaltys and circumstances that as they in discracion shall think fitt or from other ways as this honourable court shall think best we may be furthered and priviladged with the advantage of the worship of god and good Edication amoung ourselves. So your humble petitioners shall ever pray.

"Upon this Petition—ordered that James Wadsworth esq of Durham, Mr. Nathl Yale, and Mr. Saml Bishop of New Haven be a Committee to view and consider the Circumstances of said farmers as to number of persons and estates—how capable they be of being a Parish, and what limits may be most suitable for said Parish, and make report to this Assembly in October next.

¹Here they ask for north and south six miles in length. From South Road the six miles would be as far as the road on the north of Broad Swamp.

Jonathan Law the assistant Governor issued May 2^d 1817, a warrant to one of the constables to notify "ye celectmen of Wallingford to appear at Hartford if they see cause." This warrant is endorsed as "served." Thomas Miles Constable.

The selectmen of Wallingford appeared and replied as follows:

"To the honorable Generall assembly in hartford now siting: whereas the west farmers of the town of Wallingford have sited us the subscribers to make answer if we see caws to a petition by them in tenor to be preferred to this assembly:—we answer first that we would be free from impeding those or (our) neighbours from ye most convenient injoyment of the means for themselves and childeren: yet we fear att present that they are not able to suport the worships of god amongst themselves as it aught to be; secondly we answer; that they desired of us that they might have opetunity to ask of the towne liberty to be a village which they had and when the towne had agreed to send a comtee to look into ye matter and confer on how far it might be reasonable the bounds should extend they opposed so hard as that they occationed a stay therein—

"3ly as to this thirde petition we object and say that if the bonds prayed for be granted it will be greatly detrimental to ye towne and severall inhabitants living in sd bounds who cannot be so well acomidated to attend ye worship of God by a village as in ye towne and we believe ye great wisdom and prudence of this assembly will never destroy a town to make a village: but desire and praye that the Representatives of or towne may be allowed to say what is further needful in ye case:

The committee, appointed by the Assembly, reported as follows:

"To the Honble the General Assembly siting in N. H.— October 1718.

"In compliance with your honers directions to us, we the subscribers have vewed and considered the State of the West farmers in Walingford, and finde there number of famillys to be about 45 (Including in yt numbr sum few new beginners that have not fammilyls) theire generall list of Estates, by the best account we can gaine is some few pounds above £2000 and amongst sd famillys there are twenty, or more, against breaking off from the Town; but are willing to stay with them, and we suppose that many of sd number will be most convenient to ye Town Societie and therefore upon the whole matter we think it best that said farmers continue still with ye Towne of Walingford as heartofore: espetially considering theire deveided State and the smallness of theire list:

This report of the committee to the Assembly was not satisfactory to those who wanted to be relieved of the burden of supporting and attending the church and school at the center. They again petitioned the town, and the town "voated Thatt it would here (hear) our neighbours on the west side ye river if they have anything to say about thare Difecultys about schooling and ye Metting House."

The west side people probably did make themselves heard in town meeting, for it was "Voated to make choyse of a Comtee in respect to ye farmers petision conserning ye school & to consider of that matter and chose Leftenant Roys, Howkins Hart, Sargt Hochkis Wy Ward, Samll Cook & Samll Munson thare Comtee."

There was considerable other business transacted at this meeting. They "voated to fence in a ram pasture":—and gave Docter Hulls "liberty to sett up a sider mill on the plaine near Isaac Mosse's house::and nott to have any right in ye land where he sett's ye mill:no longer than ye said mill lasts."

Isaac Moss lived on the North Farms. He was a son-in-law of one of the numerous "Roys" (or Rices) who were owners, at an early date, of farms in that part of the present town of Cheshire.

The committee appointed at the meeting held in the fall of 1718 at the next meeting handed in the following report, which the scribe copied upon the record—with a line below it explaining that it was agreed to by the meeting.

"In compliance with ye trust reposed in us by ye town to consider in what way the town school may be rendred benefitiall to ye whole, which according to our measure we have considered & are of opineon yt if the town school should be kept at three places itt might be more generally benefitiall, & therefore agree for this year that ye school shall be kept two monts over the river in ye most convenient place to accomidate the children to be sent—& one month about Saml Andrews'es & the farmers in each place to provide a house to keep ye school in: & the school at the farmes shall be under ye Regulation & inspection of the commite for the town schoole.

"Voated in town meeting"

The votes at the following Town meeting explain the further action of the town in this school matter.

January 10th, 1721, "The town chose a committee conserning the schoole for ye west farmers viz: Capt Hall Left Roys Sergt Hart thomas miles Gedion Ives & Joseph parker to consider what is just & right conserning there part or sheire of sd school; and bring report to ye town: & chose Jeremiah Hull & Joseph Benham collector for ye pole mony."

April 25th 1721-22. "The town voated the farmers on ye west side ye river & the north farmers shall have there proportionable part of our school & this act to stand untill the town see cause to alter it; and chose Sergt Roys & Howkins Hart & Joseph Parker to be joyned to the former committee about ye school to order ye matter conserning the farmers having thare proportionable part of the school & to regulate yt matter according to ye best advantage of sd school."

At an adjourned meeting Decr 11:1722-3 "The town voated that a farthing on ye pound shall be added unto ye town rate for ye benefit of teaching ye children that live at ye farms that cant comfortably come to ye town schoole & to be left to ye regulation of a committe namely Left Roys—Stephen Hotchkiss William Warder Jacob Johnson Gedion Ives & Saml Thorp Junr—they paying the pole money as children do in ye town."

At ye same meeting "The town by their voat granted liberty to ye farmers on ye west side ye river so many as shall subscribe etc to hire a minister to preach amongst ym for three months this yeare & voated to give them six pounds & voted to advance ye ministers rate six pounds."

These meetings furnish good evidence that at this time the farmers on the west side of the river were sufficiently numerous to obtain from the town pretty much all that they asked for.

The west side farmers had now obtained only partial relief. They determined to renew their attempt to be made a village. This time they did not apply to the Assembly, they went to their own town meeting, and after the usual number of adjournments from week to week, notice was given for a town meeting to be held on the 30th of April, 1723, and at that meeting the following vote was passed.

"At a town meetin in Wallingford April ye 30th, 1723:

"The town voated that there shall be a villiage on ye west side ye river and theire bounds shall be as followeth Beginning at ye south east corner of Saml Cook Junr his farm thence running a south line to New Haven bounds & from sd corner north ward taking in said Cookes farm & Mathew Belamys farm, thence a streight line taking in Joseph Thomas his farm: from thence Northward taking Atwaters John tilers and Docters Hulls their farms at broad swamp thence to thomas Mathews his farm over Stoney River thence in ye east line of his said Mathews his farm taking in Joseph Curtis his farm: & William hendrick his farm to ye north line of our bounds; this to be ye east line of sad village with the proviso, that whatsoever farm or lott being cut by said line runing a crost: shall be to ye town sosiety or to ye village according as ye owner chief inhabit."

After this action by the town, the farmers on the west side prepared to take care of their own spiritual and educational concerns, and no doubt asked the town to advise them.

The town voted that they should "sett up papers in 4 or 5 plases giving tenn dayes notiss." The reason for the passage of such a vote is not made clear on the record, but it was probably for the purpose of giving individual West Farmers time to decide whether they would belong to "ye town Sosiety" or to "ye villiage."

Then the first meeting of the West Society was held on the 3rd of May, 1723. It is known that Joseph Thomson was appointed clerk, but the moderator's name is not known and only this brief record is made:

"Att a meeting of the west sosiaty in Wallingford May ye:3: 1723:by thair vot they Agree to perticion to the generall asembly for a conformation of what the tound has granted us in order for a vilag."

"By thair vots they maid chois of Thomas Brooks, Joseph Thomson and John Hitchcock for a comtee to lay their petion before the generall cort:."

¹The records of the West Society appear to have been first kept upon pieces of paper, or in Mr. Thomson's private account books; and for this reason we have only the few brief record of "vots"—which were not probably written in the existing record book until Dec. 9th, 1728, when "the Sosiaty by their vot: agreed to give Jos. Thomson five shillings for entring ye vots into the Book of Records."

The Assembly met at Hartford on the 9th May 1723, and about the middle of the month the following action was taken:

"Upon the prayer of ye inhabitants of the westerly part of Wallingford do grant to said inhabitants" * * * * "such liberties, powers & privileges as other parishes in this Collony generally have & do enjoy by law etc, etc" * * * After defining the bounds (as they are set forth in the town vote of April 23d, 1723), the Assembly gave authority to run the line "to the north bounds of said Wallingford:" the act of assembly adds: "and so to ye west bounds of said town. Provided always that if the East line aforesaid shall run cross any farm or lotment of land, such farm or lotment of land shall be and belong to the old or new society in said town, as the owner thereof shall happen to live, belonging always to the society in which he shall dwell as aforesaid. And all the ratable estate within the aforesaid bounds shall pay towards the building of a meeting house, settling and maintaining an orthodox minister amongst them, with other parish charges in said society."

A careful measurement of all the existing maps available, from one published in 1780, and another published by state authority in 1812, we find that the bounds of Cheshire were approximately as follows when the vote was passed in 1723 authorizing a village on the west side of the river; the easterly bounds, as indicated by the farms mentioned, were about one mile to the eastward of the present town line. Assuming, however, that the bounds laid down at the time the town was incorporated in 1780, were substantially the easterly boundaries of the early parish. It included part of that part of the town of Meriden now known as South Meriden.

On the south, the bounds of Cheshire have been from the earliest record substantially as now laid out, the line being governed by the Northern slope of the "Great Blew Hill" or Mount Carmel until it reaches the valley between the mountain and the range called Cook Hill. Thence the first line ran to the northwest five miles, and by the vote of May 9th, 1672, this line was extended "too" miles, which brought our line to and included

Mount Sanford. It crossed the Mill River in the neighborhood of where Mr. Julius Rice now (1891) lives—his barns being in Hamden and his house being in Cheshire.

The westerly line of the new society then took a northeasterly direction, passing a little to the west of the present center of Prospect; continuing through that town in a northeasterly direction for about six miles, running something more than a half a mile into territory now a part of Waterbury, taking in, in its further course, a corner of the present town of Wolcott.

The northerly line of the new parish has not been materially changed from the bounds allowed by the Hartford Court of May 12th 1670, when the "New village" of Wallingford was in course of settlement. Hartford claimed as "Farmington bounds" the present town of Southington, and the General Court being appealed to by all parties in interest, the north line of Wallingford was occasionally changed as agreed upon, probably, by taking into consideration such natural boundaries as were shown by the mountains, valleys and streams in the territory through which the northern boundary line of the new parish ran easterly to its junction with the parent town of Wallingford, then the present town of Meriden.

Wallingford was very generous in granting to the West Farmers so much territory, reserving to itself barely one-half of the land granted to it in 1670 by the original New Haven owners and the subsequent act of the Assembly in 1672. This is probably due to the fact that the new parish began as a well grown infant, its inhabitants having absorbed a goodly portion of land long before the Proprietors of Wallingford had got ready to make their Third Division.

They had laid out and divided up everything within sight, of the village of Wallingford proper, up and down, and on both sides of the Quinnipiack river from ye "Great Plaine" and Mount Carmel to the Cat Hole Pass at "ye Hanging Hills." From Branford bounds and Pishtepaugh Pond on ye south and east and over the Bare Hills on the west of the village everything in the shape of wood land and farming land, was occupied by a population that was growing strong enough to cast off its leading strings, and no longer require the oversight it was the duty of the Wallingford authorities to extend over them, under the laws enacted by "ye Generall Courte" at Hartford. These people were, however, law-abiding. They strictly obeyed all the behests of their magistrates, and until it was deemed safe to go forth beyond the fences or stockades, the people remained where they could rally instantly, and seek the fortified houses, in cases of danger.

By the action of the Assembly, the West society were legally prepared to do business, and at a meeting held July 25, 1723, after electing Joseph Thomson their clerk "for the year insuing," by their "vots" they agree to proceed "to settle a plais for their meeting house"

They did not meet again until the 16th of September, 1723, when Timothy Tuttle was chosen moderator, and Thomas Brooks, Nathaniel Bunnil and John Hitchcock "a Comtee to manage ye affairs of the society for the year insuing." At the same meeting the following "vots" were passed—"To hire a monitor for 6 months," "maik chois of Thomas Brooks house to meet:—" "thair comtee to agree with a monitor to preech six monts:—" agree to hire Mr Hall to preech six monts:—

It now appears that the members of the West Society in Wallingford had failed to agree among themselves, as to where their first meeting house was to be placed. The majority were located in or near the West Farms, while those at the North Farms already had a meeting place across the river to the Eastward. The people to the eastward and westward were probably too few to more than dissent from the views of the majority. It was, therefore, decided by the West Society Committee to present the following petition to the General Assembly sitting at New Haven.

"To the Honorable Generall Assembly sitting at New Haven Oct. 10th, 1723, the West Society in Wallingford humbly shew:—

"That whereas by the Paternal care and Goodness of this honorable Assembly we have been made a distinct society, for carrying on the publick worship of God and having accordingly made some essays to fix the place for the setting the first meeting house for sd worship and finding our endeavours of that kind to be attended with some difficulties and dissatisfactions among orselves, we have unanimously agreed to address this Honable Assembly and do accordingly hereby humbly pray that a Commitee chosen and appointed by this assembly may fix and determine the place for building the first meeting house in our society accordingly.

(Signed)

Thomas Brooks

John Hitchcock

Nathl Bunnil."

The Assembly appointed Mr. Samuel Bishop, of New Haven, Capt. Samuel Clark of Milford and Capt. John Riggs of Derby "a committee to fix a place for the meeting house according to the prayer of the Petitioners."

If this committee reported in writing their report is not on file, and if they reported verbally that verbal report was not entered upon the minutes, therefore, no authoritative record is left as to the location of that first meeting house, which in all probability was a mile or more south of the site fixed upon for the present church edifice.

Six months later, the society voted to pay the expenses of this committee and therefore the "plais for ye meeting house" was determined by act of the Legislature.

The West Society held their next meeting Nov. 8th, 1723, and by their "vots" "agree to give a minister a coll for the work of the ministry::agree to give muster Hall a coll for the work of the ministree if the neighbouring elders will advis us so to do:: they maid chois of Sargt (John) Hotchkiss, Thomas Brooks, Nathl Bunnil, John Hitchcock & Matthias Hitchcok for a Comtee to agree with Muster Hall in order for a settlement for the ministree::

It would appear by the action taken in the General Assembly held at Hartford opened May 14th, 1724, that the amount raised by tax on the lists of the "West Society in Wallingford" was not enough to defray their expenses and so they applied for a permission to gather rates on unimproved lands "laid out" to proprietors not living within the precincts of the Society.

The following was enacted:

"Upon the petition of the West Society in Wallingford: It is granted and ordered by this assembly, that it may and shall be lawful for the society of the parish aforesaid to levy a tax of one penny per acre annually, for the space of four years next coming, upon all the unimproved lands that is laid out within said society belonging to proprietors not living within said parish, except lands of the fourth division; and an half penny per acre annually for the term aforesaid, upon all the unimproved lands (belonging as aforesaid of said fourth division); and all the money hereby granted to said parish to be improved for supporting a minister settled according to ye establishment of the government, and building a meeting house in said society. And the collectors of the taxes of the said parish are hereby impowered to collect the same of the proprietors of the said lands, in such manner and form as other collectors are enabled by the law to do, whether the said proprietors dwell in said Wallingford or in any other part of this government.

"And that the said parish for the future be called by the name of New Cheshier."

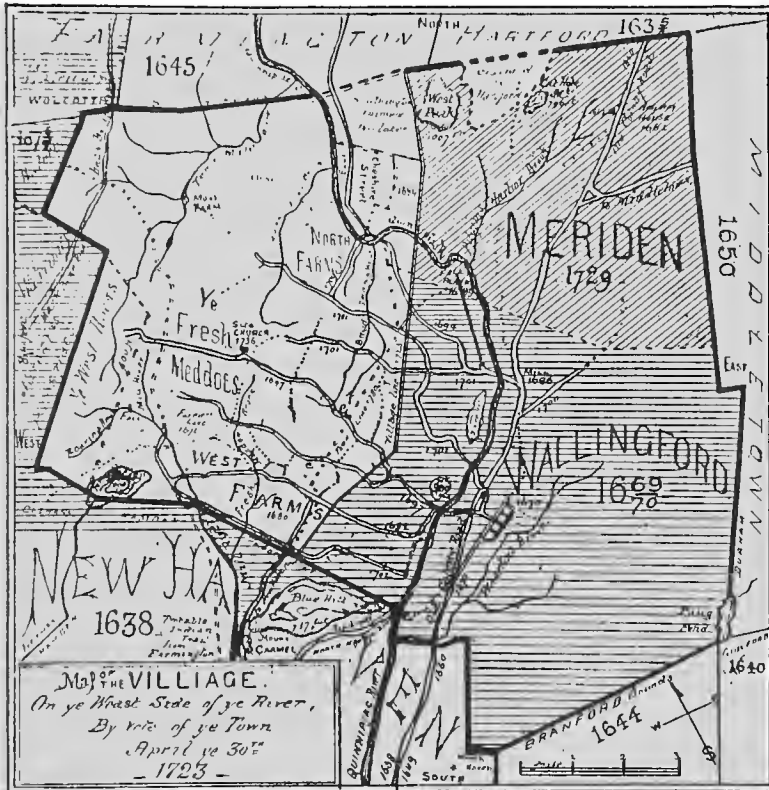

At the same session of the assembly it was enacted: "Upon the prayer of John Hotchkiss, for himself and the rest of the inhabitants in the parish of Cheshire, in the town of Wallingsford: This Assembly grants that a small piece of land lying between the original bounds of the towns of Farmington and said Wallingsford, and adjoyns to the said parish in part, and lyes west of the country road from said Farmington to said Wallingsford, shall be annexed to the said parish Cheshier, and the same is hereby annexed."

John Cook of Cheshier pleading "that his sons are by the Providence of God, all cripples, prays to be relieved for the future from paying publick taxes" and the Assembly relieved him.

"At the October session of the Assembly held in New Haven 8th of October in the Eleventh year of the reign of our sovereign Lord George of Great Britain &c King Annoque Dom 1724

it was Resolved

"This assembly grant liberty unto the inhabitants of the West Society in Wallingsford to imbody in church estate with the approbation of the neighboring churches and to settle an orthodox minister among them.

The map shows, enclosed between the black lines, the original town of Wallingford, with the roads leading to the present town of Cheshire. The dates are given when the roads were voted, but those dates do not fix the time of migration from the town of Wallingford towards the present town of Cheshire.

Many years before the roads were ordered, the "West Farmers" cultivated land in Cheshire, and the dotted line shows where they made "cartways" to the different neighborhoods.

The largest number of farmers located at the south end of the present town, and cultivated land there as early as 1676 (or five years after the town of Wallingford was established), subject to the restrictions put upon them by vote of the town.

The "North Farmers" went up the river as early as 1677-8, but the land there, having been "reserved for new settlers," the records do not show many farmers there, upon the west side of the river.

The earliest housebuilding was at "ye West Farms" and the earliest "lay out" of land was in the south and western part of the present town of Cheshire .

The "Fresh Meddoes" and "West Farms" were under cultivation long before the town had voted roads to them.

The "Village," and its bounds as established by the vote of April 30, 1723, is shown between the Waterbury bounds on the west, and the Wallingford line on the east.

In engraving this map, some of the dotted lines, representing local "hiways" have been accidentally cut away; one of the oldest of these "hiways" not shown on this map, went from the 1692 road, in a southwesterly direction to the boundary road between Wallingford and New Haven, and to the Mill River.

The "Backbone Road" ran through West Rocks to Farmington. The "New Haven Path," so-called by Farmington people, passed through "ye Fresh Meddoes," then followed Mill River to New Haven.

An "hieway" is spoken of in a deed of 1712-13 "that goeth north of ye Fresh Meddoe brook, to ye brow of ye hill;"— one of the boundaries being given as "John Hall, his land."

It would require but little faith to believe that the "hill" mentioned, was probably the hill upon which the town of Cheshire is now built; and considerable land in "New Cheshier Village" was owned by John Hall, of Wallingford (the father of Parson Samuel Hall). It was south and west of this "hill"—where we know by "lay outs" and deeds, Mr. John Hall and Samuel Hall (his father), had many hundred acres of land; part of which eventually became the property of Parson Hall.

CHAPTER FOUR.

FIRST CHURCH SOCIETY—DESCRIPTION OF HOUSES—THE SPELLING LESSON—LIST OF FREEMEN, 1730—MONEY VALUES.

The Act of the Assembly of May, 1724, which gave to the West Society in Wallingford, the name of New Cheshire¹ did not absolve the village thus established, from its allegiance to the parent town of Wallingford. It gave simply certain rights to set up a church and have a school located convenient of access to those who dwelt within the bounds established by the Act of the Assembly and the right to collect rates for the church establishment.

In other matters the town of Wallingford was the supreme authority; and the people of New Cheshire soon discovered that they were still obliged to attend the town meetings, pay their share of town taxes, help build roads and bridges, and contribute either labor or rates to all public works resolved upon by vote of the town. They were however, kindly permitted to construct their own "hiways" wherever they might be most convenient to them, the town always stipulating that "ye timber felled, should be common;" and there was no restriction upon "cutting firewood on ye undivided lands."

The forty-foot meeting house was probably completed in December, 1724, for there was a vote taken on "ye 1st of that month, to put on the time they have on to the meeting house;" and at the same meeting they "agree to seet the meeting house upon ye lists of 1723 and 1724, and consider Thomas Beach and Joseph Ives and John Cook for their age; they agree to seet the young men according to their age" and "to dignify the meeting house with the advice of Mr. Caner."¹

The seating of a meeting house was one of the most important affairs of the time; and was pondered over and discussed by ministers and officials with great gravity. First: all those who bore titles or had borne titles as Civil magistrates or military officers, were disposed of; then the rate list was taken up and high seats given to the men who paid high rates, down to those who paid low rates. Then came the single men and "sojourners" who were "accommodated" as occasion offered. The men were located upon one side of the church, and the women in the order of rank of their husbands or fathers on the opposite side. At times this seating business occasioned trouble, but the New Cheshire folks seem to have had less of it than those of neighboring churches; and if they did agree "to taik out all heds but won (one) in order to seet the meeting house," these were junior difficulties that do not seem very important to us at this time.

The year 1724 did not close until the 25th of March, 1725, of our reckoning; and to this date we should add eleven days, which would give us the 5th of April according to the way we, of the present day, compute the dates we find on all ancient records up to the year 1752, when the English Parliament enacted a law whereby the year (within her own possessions), should begin upon the first of January, and by a subsequent enactment struck off the eleven additional days. Bearing this in mind it is not unusual to find that the dates given in old records for certain events are sometimes a year before, or a year after the actual occurrence owing to the omission of the scribe to give a double date to the year; and persons not conversant with "Old Style" chronology frequently get their dates mixed. The records of the New Cheshire Society are best interpreted by reference to particular dates, and as they had voted on the 1st of December to put on the "time that they have on the meeting house" it was to get the edifice ready for some ceremony soon to occur. They had voted to fill the lower part of the meeting house with convenient seats "except a plais for a pue", and then they voted to appoint the second Wednesday of December to be the day for the ordination. Sargent John Hotchkiss, Stephen Hotchkiss and Timothy Tuttle were a Committee "to manage the affair of the ordination," and they "maid chois of Sargent John Hotchkiss to entertain the ministers."

¹Mr. Henry Caner was a master builder from Boston, who had erected Yale College and was then building for Yale Trustees another building. To "dignify" meant a pulpit erection and an arrangement for the seats or pews for the magistrates and titled men, for which the advice of such an experienced church builder was desired by the West Society—and subsequently Mr. Caner was paid by the rate collector for his valuable services "in dignifying ye meeting house."

The Rev. Samuel Hall was duly ordained, as he says himself, "by ye Rev. Mr. Chauncy and Mr. Whittlesey, and [ye church] declared to be according to ye establishment of ye Government, 1676." The two first deacons were Joseph Ives and Stephen Hotchkiss, and the name of "Deacon Meadow Hill" was probably at that time conferred upon a hill to the westward of the "meddoe," owned or bounded in great part by the land of these two deacons. Deacon Joseph Ives, who had come to Cheshire in 1696, owned the farm (a large one) he had resided upon for many years, on the east side of the meadow east of the hill, a part of which farm is now owned by Thomas Hull. Deacon Stephen Hotchkiss, in addition to land given him by his father at Hopper's Meadow, had purchased in 1712, a hundred acres of land on the west and north of the "meddoe" bounded "east by a four rod hiway and west by town land." He came to live in Cheshire about the time the church was established. Both of the deacons were located about two miles south of the present town center, and Deacon Meadow Hill will be readily recognized as that eminence to the westward of the residence of the late Burritt Bradley. Both of these deacons served in the church for many years. The aged Deacon Stephen Hotchkiss died in 1755, having served thirty-one years. His son, Benjamin Hotchkiss, was chosen Deacon in 1766 and held the office twenty-one years; a line of deacons fifty-two years long in one family—and it should not have been interrupted by the subsequent church and legal discipline administered to the latest of these two deacons.

The church establishment being disposed of, and the Assembly, at the session of May, 1725, having appointed and commissioned John Hotchkiss, Captain; Joseph Thomson, Lieutenant; Thomas Brooks, Ensign; "of the Train band at the parish of New Cheshier," the settlers turned their attention to matters more nearly concerning them, as they procured from the town liberty to establish a pound for imprisoning stray cattle. One of their most serious troubles was the encroachment on their highways and the cutting of timber on the undivided lands. Parties looking for desirable building material would come from the center at Wallingford to the woods on the west side of the river and fell timber growing in the twenty rod highways or on the public land and drag it off regardless of the protests of the men whose land adjoined the timber that was being taken. Then, too, the men of New Cheshire, where a number of new houses were being erected, were not always particular about where they cut timber. In consequence many town meetings were held, and frequent votes taken to prosecute encroachers, and the unlawful taking of timber from the public lands.

Some of the New Cheshire inhabitants were severely "fyned," and then some of the men from the east side of the river were put on "tryall," only to be let off with nominal forfeitures, pleading in bar the undetermined line of bounds between the "Old society" and the "New Society on ye west side of ye river." These difficulties soon became so serious that the proprietors held a meeting and ordered all owners of land to "either by grant or purchase renew their boundary marks, and where there is none, shall set them up by aid of ye survaer." They ordered this to be done by the first of May next "as the law directs," and they appointed a committee to "take ye law on any man who shall refuse, and on all who should encroach on either public lands or hiways." The assembly had passed suitable laws, which were, however, more honored in the breach than in the observance; and the well housed townspeople at Wallingford Center always turned out to vote for the prosecution of the outside farmers, while the latter almost invariably voted against the appointment of committees to take up or punish encroachers. The New Cheshire inhabitants wanted to be "let alone" by the parent town, and so they usually voted against any stringent measures. It is by an inspection of these votes and from other sources equally reliable, that we are enabled to give the following list of persons as either having houses or homes within the limits of the New Cheshire society at the beginning of the year 1725.

The town of Cheshire from its earliest occupation by those who first erected houses here, seems to have been initiated by a series of neighborhood settlements, and the first of these is known to have been at the south and east end of the present town, and to that part our attention is directed by the "voat" which, in 1692, ordered a road to be layed out to "John Cook's, Joseph Ives', and Benjamin Beach's." A year or two later we find that John Hitchcock, one of the men selected by the town to lay out this road, had "liberty to exchange" some of his home land, for lands on this side of the river, and in 1696 he had one hundred and eleven acres of land at "Hoppers Meadow," bounded South by Samuel Cook. Samuel Cook owned a large farm which later on included Cook Hill. John Cook was his son, to whom he gave land, bounded south by Benjamin Beach. Joseph Ives (afterward the Deacon) had land adjoining Cook, and Benjamin Beach was son-in-law to John Hitchcock. In 1697 the town gave Benjamin Beach "25 akers of land where he can find itt, nere Joseph Eives." From an old account book, that still belongs to descendants of Deacon Ives, we learn that the Deacon probably built a house and settled on his place some time in 1696, and as he married in 1697 there is good reason to believe his house was one of the earliest. We know that John Hitchcock had built a house in that part of the town, and also that his son-in-law, Benjamin Beach, who was married in 1695, had built a house near his father-in-law. Mr. John Hitchcock was frequently chosen by the town to serve it in various capacities, but, as he, in 1708, conveyed 78 acres of land "joyning to Samuel Cook, with appurtenances, in consideration of fatherly love, etc., to John Hitchcock, Jr.," we know this son continued at the south part of the settlement and no doubt lived in the house built by his father. We may therefore honestly infer that at least four houses were erected as early as between 1695 and 1700 in the south part of Cheshire, in a neighborhood near which, before the year 1713-14, a dozen or more other houses had been erected.

These houses were not log cabins; they were framed and substantial structures, not many of them perhaps of more than one story and a large attic, but sufficient for these newly married young men, viz., Cook, Ives, and Beach, while perhaps that of John Hitchcock was of two stories and more pretentious, as became an older man with a large family. It must be remembered that New Cheshire was the granddaughter of New Haven, which had then been established seventy-five years, and the New Cheshire settlers were most of them derived from that town, where house building had always been modeled upon those erected in England, and possibly very much better structures than some of the houses built across the water, because of a greater supply of cheaper building material.

Among the inhabitants of Wallingford there were many excellent carpenters, blacksmiths, masons and other workmen; and of these there were quite a number who had become settlers within the precincts of the Society of New Cheshire. Besides these, nearly every able-bodied man, old or young, could take a turn at some part of the work needed in the erection of a house. The skilled men laid out the frames, and superintended the pinning of them together. The less skillful nailed on the boards, and put on the shingles, which had long since, in Wallingford and other towns, taken the place of the easily combustible and rotting hay and straw coverings, or thatch, still used on dwellings in England. Months previous, the timbers had been gotten out in the woods, and drawn to the place where they were to be used, and where the boards were to be sawed and the shingles riven. The process for sawing boards was crude but effective. A rough frame work of logs was erected seven or eight feet high; and upon this logs were laid for a platform. Upon the platform was placed the log to be slit into boards. Two men armed with a long double-handed saw were required for the operation necessary for slitting. One man stood on top and the other on the ground below him. The top man was paid sixpence per day more than the pitman, and the two together would saw out in one day about one hundred and fifty white oak boards ten or twelve feet long by eight or ten inches wide. These men were paid the equivalent of fifty cents of our money for a day's work, their rate of pay being regulated by the "Generall Courte," which also fixed the price of boards at the saw pits at four shillings and sixpence per hundred, while plank cost only a trifle more. In the early days clapboards and shingles were sometimes riven from the log with sharp wedges, and to this day there is a house on Cook Hill almost entirely covered with this kind of "clabbords."

Cellars were almost unknown in these early times. Foundation stones were laid, and perhaps a pit four or five deep by eight or ten feet long was dug at one end of the house. This pit or cellar was to be entered after the house was floored, by a trap door in one of the ground floor rooms. Before the frame was raised a chimney had been built of rough stones plastered with clay at the bottom; where it was usually a mass of boulders eight or ten feet square, which rose up to the ceiling of the first story, divided into a huge fireplace, and ovens. The rest of this chimney was built of suitable stones held together by such tenacious lime mortar that masons of the present day have been heard to say the "secret of it has been lost." The lime mortar was no doubt made from oyster and clam shells at New Haven where there were many lime kilns constantly burning. These chimneys frequently stood for a year or two awaiting the frames that were to be put around them.

The floor beams being laid, thick oak floor planks were pinned to them with wooden pins. Then the frame went up to a height for the first story of seven feet, where another floor was pinned down. The rafters were now set up and pinned together, and bound with beams for a still higher attic if there was to be one. The roof boards were pinned on with wooden pins, and shingled, small wrought iron nails, costing one dollar a pound, being used. Six pounds weight of hand made nails were called "sixpennies," and there were always one thousand two hundred nails in the lot, which cost in our money $3.50, or nearly four nails for a cent. Of tenpenny nails there were 1200 to ten pounds in weight. From an account book kept in 1690 we learn that a carpenter was paid £3.12.00 ($10.80) for eighteen days' work, and in the same book there is a contract which reads: "this wrighting obligeth me: to get and shave four hundred good white oak clabords: five foot and five inches long: and of such a bredth: as will bare to lay out besides the lay: 5 or 6 inches:: the four hundred to be gott out of the two trees all redy falled." The same book informs us that the man was paid in rum at 40 cents (our money) a gallon, and he got three gallons and three quarts.

The house being roofed in and covered, the doors were made of two thicknesses of boards. The outer boards were vertical, and the inner boards placed at an angle of 45 degrees. The nails were then driven from the outside and clinched in such a manner as to make a diamond-like finish to the outside where the fancy, or rose headed nails, protruded. The front door was usually in two parts, opening outwardly, and when shut held by a wooden latch, lifted by a leather thong passing through a hole. At night these doors were barred and the latch string withdrawn. The windows of such "an house" were costly affairs. Glass in those days was imported from England, and sashes already made could be purchased. The Cheshire men preferred to get their glass and set it in their own way. The panes, six by eight inches, were sold by the score, or twenty panes for from four to six dollars. A score of glass was ordinarily used for each window sash, which was hung to the casing, and opened inwardly like a door. Sometimes two of these windows were used to make a wider opening, but this was not common, and only well-to-do people could afford such a luxury. The stairs were between the chimney and the front door, cased in paneled wood work, and not infrequently ornamented with what the builders called "cut works." The sides of the rooms were cased up horizontally three feet, and then vertically with either plain boards, or paneling. Sometimes an ornamental board ceiling would be put in, but the majority of these early housebuilders were satisfied with the beams and upper floor boards as sufficient ceiling to their lower rooms. There were usually three large rooms, and a big "buttery" on the lower floor. The kitchen, pantry and living room occupied one side of the chimney, while the "keeping room" or parlor, and a bedroom was on the opposite side of the house. Upstairs were two large bedrooms, and two smaller, with a garret space between the two latter. Hallways were very infrequent, and seldom were there any fireplaces in more than two of the lower rooms. The early housebuilders in New Cheshire expended for one of these dwellings about $300 of our money, paying in wheat at 90 cents a bushel; "Ry" at 65 cents and Indian corn at 60 cents, computed at the money value of the same in our day.

A two story leanto house cost about double, and a commodious barn that was "raised and bordered" upon "ye forth day of the week," in June, 1701, cost "two gallons of rum to ye neighbors; a roasted sheep; five loaves of ry bread; sum pies and £31.00.00 money." Less than a hundred dollars, to which should be added the labor of cutting and carting the timber, which was probably grown on the land where the building was erected. The paint may or may not have been homemade.

It was usually of a red or blue color, and in New Haven at this time any other color except weather-beaten brown, would have probably called for official discipline.

The next house to be built in this vicinity was probably that of Matthew Bellamy. After him came Josiah and Stephen Hodgkis, who had bought over one hundred acres each, and who were "admitted upon land they had purchest." Josiah Hodgkis' land was "joyning to Hoppers Meadow," while Stephen Hodgkis had land part of which was on Mill river and part "nere Hoppers Meadow." They built, or at least one of them, Josiah, the uncle of Stephen, built a house about 1706 or 1707. His brother-in-law, Thomas Brooks, owned land here but no building, as he appears a resident of New Haven for many years after. Joseph Thomson had land "on ye parsonage plain" wherever that may have been. It was "bounded south by John Parker." Timothy Beach was located a mile and a half north of this locality, on the road ordered in 1697, and nearly a mile nearer the town than the others. He had married one of Cook's daughters.

Joseph Parker had some land "lying east of Samuel Cook" (given him by his father), and he may have built, and it is certain that John Parker had a house on this side of the river as early if not earlier than that of Deacon Ives, but this John Parker was no doubt located a mile nearer Wallingford. Josiah Clark, Joseph Thomson and Ebenezer Johnson built between 1710 and 1714, and ex-miller John Lathrop, or a son of his, may have built a house "at the head of a small brook half a mile to the eastward of the Mill River." Joshua Culver was on the "east side of the Fresh Meadow brook," and William Merriam bought a house at the south end of the settlement in 1716.

Two miles or more north and a mile or more to the eastward of these dwellings, Timothy Tuttle erected a house about 1706, at the end of the road to the south side of Broad Swamp, and in the following year John Merriman adjoined him.

Two or three miles northeast of these last named men, we have ten or a dozen settlers, the chief of whom seems to have been Dr. Hulls, who is known to have always lived on his Wallingford home lot. His son may have put up a house at some early date, probably not before 1711. Abraham, John and Joseph Doolittle had land in 1710 "across a small brook that runs northward into ye ten mile river." John Atwater had land in 1698 on a brook running into Broad Swamp and is believed to have built in 1700. Thomas Matthews was on "Hunnepot Brook" "thence down streme to ye River." This was in 1716. Before this he had sold his "house and fruit trees" in the south part where he had lived (near John Parker's); to William Merriam. Samuel Royce, was, as early as 1698, at the north part of the town. His lands were bounded by "Hunne Pott" brook and by Abraham Doolittle (who owned land here in 1687). John Moss, Jr., owned in 1694, 100 acres or more on "ye Tenn Mile river alongside an irremovable hill." William and Francis Hendricks had land in 1701 to 1705 bounded on Dr. Hulls'. Joseph Curtis in 1723 had land bounded north by William Hendricks. John Tyler was in 1693 on the "west side of ye river, above ye brod swamp rode." On the west side of "ye Fresh meddoes," individuals owned considerable land, but had not built houses there previous to 1711-12. At all events there is no record.

The building of houses, particularly at the south end of Cheshire, had been actively prosecuted for at least five years before the church was established. John Cook had moved over to the West Rocks, where the road now comes down from Bethany. Benjamin Beach had sold his house in 1714-15 and gone with his family to Morris County, N. J. Thomas Brooks had built his house, and his brother-in-law, Nathaniel Bunnill, had bought of Matthias Hitchcock, "four or five acres more or less, nere Hoppers Meadow; bounded north to a poynt west on Decon Hull, his land: Eastward on Stephen Hodgkis' land: South on John Hitchcock his land." Elnathan Beach (who came from Stratford), had succeeded to some property that had belonged to his Wallingford grandfather. He was a nephew of Benjamin Beach. Elnathan had a wealthy brother in Stratford, who was a shipbuilder and an owner of vessels, and who was largely engaged in trade with the West Indies.

Elnathan Beach became interested in the shipping business with Captain Cook, of Wallingford, who was buying corn and pipe staves for shipment to Santa Cruz and other southern islands, receiving in return cargoes of rum, molasses and sugar. When in 1721-2 Elnathan Beach (then a young married man), came to Cheshire, he erected a storehouse on the plain or meadow "south of ye hiway that comes in from ye town." This warehouse stood for many years in the south part of New Cheshire, perhaps half a mile east of the present Ninth District schoolhouse, and a few rods south of the highway. There is no doubt he built his dwelling house near by, and a house that was torn down in that neighborhood some years ago, is reported as having belonged to Elnathan Beach. It was known as having once been the property of some of Elnathan's descendants.

There were about the time the church was built, sixty-five "heads" in the families living within the boundaries of the "Society of New Cheshire," and this fact makes it apparent, that the Legislature in conferring upon the village its name of New Cheshire, and its ecclesiastical powers, was satisfied that the inhabitants of the new society were abundantly able to carry on the work they had been entrusted with. The Assembly at the May Session, 1725, completed its work by commissioning "John Hodgkis, Captain; Joseph Thomson, Lieutenant and Thomas Brooks, Ensign of the Train band at the Parish of New Cheshire in the town of Wallingford."

The advent of Mr. Hall and the enjoyment of religious privileges brought to the new society ten or more heads of families from Hamden, who worshipped at the Church of the West Society at first by tolerance and afterward by permission of an act of the Assembly passed at one of its sessions held in New Haven; and we know that later on, some of these "heads" or their sons, became residents of New Cheshire.

The "Society of New Cheshire in Wallingford" having obtained permission from the Assembly to tax the non-residents, Thomas Matthews, Jr., and Ephraim Cook were appointed a committee "for inspectors to see how much land those men have that do not belong to the sositie that is ratable" and they voted "to pay a school in the sositie as they do in townd in Equall proportion;" and made choice of Matthew Belamy, Thomas Twiss, and John Hotchkiss "as a committee on schools" notwithstanding "Thomas Brooks and Mathias Hitchcock gave their desent against all that was acted at ye meeting." And it appears that they "voted that thos on the East side of the river shall have their proportion of the country money:: provided they lay it out for schooling::and to be under the inspection of ye scool comtee." This vote probably relates to the "North Farms" where there was a settlement at Cheshire street clamorous for school privileges. About this time—1726—there was a committee appointed to run the line between the old society at Wallingford and the Society of New Cheshire. This committee failed to act, for no line was run. A year later, the same committee was ordered "to proceed to run the line."

This division line was not run at this time for there was a record made four years later—1730—appointing a committee to "indeavor for an agreement where the deviding line should run." There is no report of this committee and the line doubtless remained substantially as it had been ordered by the general assembly.

In 1726 "The Society maid choise of Decon Ives, Decon Hotchkiss and John Hichcock, for a committee to agree upon sum convenient plaies for a burying plaies." Parson Hall in his notes writes "Anno Domini 1726::Ye first yt was buried in ye New Cheshier Burying place was ye child of Daniel Smith's."

A society meeting after this "Agreed with Ebenezer Johnson to dig the graves for the year insuing, for five shillings a grave." The next year they gave him six shillings and he was "to have seven shillings for every grave he should dig in ye three winter monts."

At the October session of the Assembly in 1726, upon the news of the Indian enemy coming down towards our frontiers: "Resolved, that there be forthwith thirty effective men raised in the towns of New Haven and Wallingsford, to march forthwith to Litchfield * * * Twenty of which to be raised in New Haven, and ten in Wallingford; and that a sergeant march with them directly from each of said towns, etc. * * * *"

Six men were sent from Wallingford, and four from New Cheshire, but their names have not been ascertained. They were gone some ten days, and the assembly ordered each man to be paid two shillings per day, and their officers were compensated according to their respective ranks; besides being complimented for the zeal and activity they had displayed.

This war scare, however, had its effect upon the people of New Cheshire, but the town voted no relief to them because of the expense they had been at in relation to a "common danger," and did not give them a share of the money that was received from the sale of some of the town's powder at two shillings and sixpence per pound. A sixth division of land was drawn for about this time, which gave to the "upper class" men forty acres, the "middle class" thirty acres, and the lower class twenty acres, and this probably made the farmers on the west side happy.

The meeting house by this time had been found too small and it was resolved to "build a galirey," and afterwards they "agree to buld the galleries in the meeting hous this summer" (1727-8). They probably did put in the "galleries," for they had another agreement as to the "seeting of the meeting house::firstly to have respect to Thomas Beech & John Cook & Thomas Twist and secondly: to leave the matter about the new comers to the judgment of the settors::and thirdly: then to goe by the lists having A respect to but own (one) head in every list." The negroes were accommodated on an end seat "in the galry," and it was "agreed to sing, that which is caled the regular singing::provided they obtain a vot in the church therefor."

The same year the society of New Cheshire voted "to build two scool houses," and "agreed to buld own scool house near the meeting hous," and applied to the town to have "a scool in the three summer months;" but the town voted that "the west side farmers" should have the school, "the three middlemost monts in the year."

It would appear from this action of the town of Wallingford that the act of Assembly creating the society of New Cheshire did not authorize them to have independent school privileges.

In this connection there has come down to us an interesting account of how the children of those times were taught; and we cannot but think that the tenacious memories our ancestors are credited with are in a great measure due to their school discipline. At the opening of the school the teacher usually placed an hourglass upon his table, and alongside of that, a bundle of birch rods. Prayer was then offered, and while the scholars (some of them more than half grown men and women) read the Scriptures, the "scoolmaster" occupied his time by making pens, which he fashioned from the goose quills each scholar brought. Sometimes instead of goose quills, the quills from an eagle's wing were taken to school and esteemed better for pens than the quills of the tamer bird. The pens having all been made, every one stood up and a verse or two was sung. Writing was the next brief exercise; for paper was a dear commodity; and only a few lines were written by each one; and not infrequently, three or more children of one family, wrote upon the same piece of paper which their parents furnished. This was followed by simple arithmetic, generally examples that were solved mentally, the "scoolemaster" being about the only "book" that was used. There were, of course "arithmetic books," but few of the scholars had them, and in most of the country schools the master, or "dame," were obliged to provide themselves with such textbooks as might be needed. By this time the hourglass was turned for the second time, and an intermission granted, during which some of the birch rods were used upon refractory pupils. On re-assembling the class in spelling was called upon to "toe the mark"—a line at a joint of two floor boards. Then a full sentence would be read, to which all gave their best attention. The first sentence was "A big bundell of long sticks."

The first scholar repeated the sentence, and then sung out, "great A, and there's your great A."

The next would say "b," and sing "There's your little b;" "i," there's your "i"; and there's your "bi"; "g" and there's your "b-i-g;" and there's your "big"; and there's your great "A," and there's your great "A big."

This was followed by another, who pronounced "b" and sung out, there's your "b;" "u," and there's your "bu;" "n," and there's your "bun;" and there's your "big bun" and there's your great "A big bun."

The next on the line said "d;" then sung, there's your "d;" "e," and there's your "de;" "l," and there's your "del"; another "l" and there's your "d-e-l-l," and there's your "dell"; and there's your "bundell"; and there's your "big"; and there's your "big bundell"; and there's your great "A"; and there's your great "A big bundell."

The scholar who followed pronounced the letter "o" and sung there's your "o"; "f.." and there's your "f"; and there's your "o-f"; and there's your "of"; and there's your "dell of"; and there's your "bun"; and there's your "bundell of"; and there's your "big"; and there's your "big bundell of"; and there's your great "A"; and there's your great "A big bundell of."

The sixth speller began "l" and there's your "l"; "o" and there's your "lo"; "n" and there's your "lon"; "g" and there's your "g" and there's your "l-o-n-g"; and there's your "long"; and there's your "of"; and there's your "of long"; and there's your "dell of long"; and there's your "bun"; and there's your "bundell of long"; and there's your "big"; and there's your "big bundell of long"; and there's your great "A," and there's your great "A big bundell of long."

Not to make this spelling lesson too long, the last scholar pronounced the letters, "s-t-i-c-k-s," and sung: there's your "sticks"; and there's your "dell of long sticks"; and there's your "bun"; and there's your 'bundell of long sticks'; and there's your "big"; and there's your "big bundell of long sticks"; and there's your great "A"; and there's your great "A big bundell of long sticks."

By this time the hourglass had again nearly run out; and the class was dismissed with a probable reminder to one or two of the scholars in the spelling class, that the birch rods would be again brought into requisition when the school closed. A short lesson on the value of different parts of speech usually followed the spelling; and if there was time, the "scoolemaster" or "scoole-dame" read to them a lesson in common geography, which they were to remember, and at the afternoon session this lesson would be the first thing taken up.

Each scholar was called upon in turn to relate what he, or she, remembered of the lesson read in the forenoon. If the first one blundered, he sat down; and the next took his place, repeating as much of the language of the lesson as had found lodgment within his brain. The brightest ones were permitted to stand; the dull ones sat down. Then the "scoolemaster" told each one of those standing up, what they had omitted; and notified those sitting down that they would have an application of birch rods for their supper.

The school usually ended by asking each scholar to answer one or more questions from the catechism, and all repeated the Lord's Prayer.

An education thus obtained was doubtless sufficient for all practical purposes; and if the scholars did not learn as much as the children do in our day, it was because the so-called "scoolemasters" were not always educated men, or capable of teaching even the elementary branches.

Blackboards and slates were frequently to be found in the schools; but this was only in the larger towns, and where parents were able to supply "lesson books" to their children. The "three middlemost monts" of the year was quite as long as the "New Cheshier" folks could afford to send their boys and girls to school; and it is remarkable how many of them, later in life, gave evidence that they had fully improved even these short terms of school attendance.

At this time the society of New Cheshier was yearly growing larger. Their minister, Mr. Samuel Hall, was a beloved pastor, and if his firewood was not furnished promptly, the delinquents were admonished that the committee would buy firewood for the minister, at "seven shillings and sixpence (or about one dollar of our money) per cord," and collect the pay in some "lawful way." There appears also to have been some trouble in New Cheshier because the parent town of Wallingford did not properly warn them of the town meetings, and fines had been unjustly imposed. This was settled by the town voting, "that for the futer * * * the Drum shall be beat as formerly: for ye old society::and for ye other societys ye celectmen shall send word a week beforehand to some one of them;that is of sad societys comtees:that there is to be a town meeting at ye time abousaid."

The "New Cheshier" men wanted a "cart brige whare the old brige stands," and they got it, "but they had to turn out & help build it." This was not all they got. The town, at a later date, "gave liberte to our neibours of Cheshier to build a pound at ye loer end of ye plais on their own cost and charge," and "chose Decon Hodgkis brander for Cheshier and chose John Hichcok pound keeper for Cheisher."

Here is the list of Freemen in Cheshire and Wallingford April, 1730, the best census we have of the men living at that time hereabouts.

At this meeting the complaints from Cheshire were fully ventilated and some relief granted.

"The number of ye names of the Freemen in Wallingford which was taken as they appeared at a Freemans meeting Aprill the last day 1730—are as followeth—"

It was perhaps some of these discussions that called the attention of young Benjamin Hall (then newly married), to the parish of "New Cheshier," where his elder brother, Samuel Hall, had been the ordained pastor for some five years. The father of Benjamin Hall, "Decon John Hall," owned considerable land on the Mill river, "above Scotts rock," and Benjamin Hall probably settled upon some of it. It was afterwards occupied by Jahleel Law (son of Governor Jonathan Law), and his house long since gone, was upon the road upon which William Heine-man now lives. The coming to New Cheshire of Benjamin Hall, about 1728, added to the community a man who was destined to be even more prominent than his reverend brother.

At first he appears to have been active in the settlement of disputes between claimants to scraps of undivided land adjoining their allotments, and which he accomplished satisfactorily with the aid of his "trusty friend, Elnathan Beach," as he calls him (who held an appointment from the town as "surveyor of hi-ways"). —

At this time Benjamin Hall and Elnathan Beach were probably the only two young men in the parish, with influence enough, and sufficiently wealthy in lands and money to stir up the community, and cause the inhabitants of the parish to petition the town for the redress of grievances. One of these complaints was the lack of a magistrate to perform the ceremony of marriage. Only magistrates could act, and in certain cases ordained clergymen of a plantation who were also magistrates. In 1702 ordained ministers could marry couples "in the town where he is settled." This law continued for eighty-one years thereafter, and it was not until 1820 that the word "settled" was dropped.

Such a law probably accounts for the fact that during his long ministry Parson Hall appears to have officiated at marriages only fifteen times, the first occasion being ten years after he became pastor. Then he married "Joseph Ives Jr to Mamre Munson."

He probably doubted his right as the pastor of a parish, and left to Rev. Mr. Whittlesey as "settled in ye ministry of ye town," or the magistrates to perform this service.

Frequent applications were made for the appointment of a magistrate to reside in the parish, but it was not until 1732-3 that sufficient pressure was brought to bear. In that year the parish of New Cheshire was honored by having, for the first time, one of its inhabitants chosen as one of the Representatives for the town of Wallingford in the Assembly; and Mr. Benjamin Hall was thus honored and served several years. That same year he was commissioned not only a Magistrate but Captain of the Trainband, with Benjamin Hitchcock Lieutenant, and Elnathan Beach Ensign.

The meeting house had, for a long time, been found too small for the accommodation of the attendants. It was "agreed to build some more seats." A committee was appointed, but before anything was done the smallpox broke out and carried off, besides women and children, some of the leading men of the parish. This visitation was made the subject of a sermon by Rev. Samuel Hall, which was afterwards printed, with a preface by the Rev. Mr. Whittlesey of Wallingford, in which he says the "doors of the House of the Lord in the parish of New Cheshier, had been shut up some months," and this sermon of the Rev. Samuel Hall was preached soon after the "Author had recovered of the Distemper." Many of the people had been prostrated, and we are informed through letters, and other writings of the time, that when the disease first broke out, the people were curious to see what the sick people looked like, "being afflicted with a sickness, the like of which ye men of ye town skilled in Physick, had never before known." Another writer said the people stood at the doors, and climbed about the windows to look upon the sick ones. After this came men of authority, who drove the curious away; and it was with difficulty thereafter that persons could be had who would willingly expose themselves to the disease.

This interruption to parish affairs, put aside for the time being all repairs upon the meeting house. With characteristic energy and thoughtfulness, Mr. Benjamin Hall carried a memorial of his own to the Assembly," in behalf of "sundry families" in Cheshire, "that have been greatly distressed with the small pox": "Resolved, that there shall be paid out of the publick Treasury, for the relief of said families, the sum of fifty pounds; which sum shall by the deacons of said Cheshire, with the advice of the minister; viz: Mr. Samuel Hall, of said place, be distributed to and among those that have suffered in said Cheshire with said distemper."

At an adjourned town meeting held in Wallingford, Dec. 26, 1732, "the town chose a comtee to look into ye matter of charge that did arise about ye small pox, that has ben amongst our neighbors at Cheshiere: and ajust accounts with all and every man or men that has don anything in that case, and the comtee are as followeth: John Merriman, John Hall ye 2d and Matthew Bellamy."

On further discussion "ye town voated that the account that did arise about the sick, etc., should be received; and layd a two penny rate to be collected out of this present list."

These acts of the Assembly and of the town indicate that the affliction had been a serious one, almost paralyzing the people resident in New Cheshire village, and but for the necessity of looking after their belongings, many would have returned to the town on the other side of the river. We know that in this time of trial, the Rev. Samuel Hall was ably seconded by his brother, Captain Benjamin Hall, whose influence with the townspeople, at Wallingford, was almost equal to that he held in the parish of New Cheshier, and these two, assisted by Elnathan Beach, Samuel Cook, and other active men, kept alive the ambition and incited to activity the despondent villagers.

In course of time the church was re-opened, those who had been scared away returned, and repairs to the meeting house became once more the important business at the society meetings: For several years they "voated" additions to the meeting house, or else they "agreed to build more seets"; but without doing much other work upon the meeting house, than was necessary to accommodate the people who attended at the church services.

The town proprietors of Wallingford about this time held a meeting and voted January 15, 1734, that they would make a seventh division of land and appointed the "former comtee to act," directing that the land should be distributed in the proportions of thirty acres to highest, twenty acres to the middle, and ten acres to the lowest trunk.

A town meeting was held on the same date, and a committee reported on a highway from Tansy valley (Tunxis Valley) to Mosses farm, "and they find there is a hiway, from ye gateway to said Mosses farm, only a little way::or a littell part of ye way::therefore ye proprietors impowered ye Comtee to do what is needful to settell said Highway." This action was brought about by the men settled at the North Farms, who wanted facilities for getting to Farmington and Waterbury, and also to accommodate many Waterbury and Farmington (now Southington) people, who had for some years been accustomed to get their wheat, corn, rye and other grain ground at Tyler's mill, which we now know as the Yalesville mill; and we learn from records made at this time, that this mill was resorted to by farmers living many miles away in the surrounding country. It was, in fact, the nearest mill where the farmers could carry their grain and be assured of having it ground within a reasonable time.

To accommodate the "outsiders," the town voted "regulations for ye miller," who was to "grind for ye towns people four days in ye week," and "for all others two days": "provided there is no grinding to be done for ye townspeople::then ye miller might grind for all who should come to ye mill." At this time, too, some attention was paid to "hiways" which the assembly had ordered to be "improved" in those parts that would give "all ye inhabitants equall facilities," for getting to and from their respective places of worship. The facilities of better roads, in addition to the last division of lands, probably was an incentive to the New Cheshire Society to set about improving their meeting house. After several attempts at agreement it was finally, "December ye 1st, 1735, by thair voat they agreed to build A meeting house:: and thair was above two thirds in the voat," and at the same meeting they appointed "Capt. Benjamin Hall to be thair agent to pray the general assembly to appoint a Comite to fix and ascertain the plais for the said society to build a meeting house upon." At the same meeting Mathias Hitchcock, Ephraim Cook, Benjamin Moss and John Hulls were chosen a "Comtee to measure ye bounds of said society in order to know whare ye senter thereof would be upon that road on which ye meeting house now stands."

At the May meeting of the Assembly, 1736, a committee was appointed to fix a site for the new meeting house, and at the session of the Assembly held in New Haven, October, 1736, the following action was taken: "Upon the report of Messrs William Wadsworth (of Farmington) John Riggs (of Derby) and Jonathan Allyn (of New Haven) being a comite appointed by the general Assembly holden at Hartford in May last to repair to the Parish of New Cheshire in the town of Wallingford: to view the circumstances thereof and satisfy themselves as to the most suitable place for the said parishioners to build a meeting house upon and make report, etc.: said Comite according to their direction, having attended said service on the 16th September last, and set up a stake with stones about itt: on the North East Conner of the Revd Mr Halls lott, near his dwelling house by the highway that runs North and South, and at the end of the Highway that comes in from ye East, which said place said committee report to be the most suitable place for the said parishioners to build their meeting house upon: This assembly do, therefore, accept the above-said report, and establish said place accordingly."

The site for the new meeting house being thus settled to the satisfaction of all concerned the New Cheshier society, Novr 16, 1736, "by thair voat Agreed to buld A meeting house 64 foots in length and 45 foots in wedth: and 24 foots between joynts" and appointed Sargent Edward Parker, Caleb Matthews, Jr., Benjamin Dutton, John Hulls and Joshua Hotchkiss a "Comtee to manage ye work of the meeting house." The Sosiaty voted "twelve pence in ye £ for ye new meeting hous." In the March following, 1737, they "Agreed to claboard the meeting house with sawed clabords: agreed ye meeting house clabords be of white pine, Agreed to give Mr. Cook five pounds a thousand for good whit pine clabords to be delivered at the plais for ye meeting hous at A convenient tyme." "by thair voat they agreed to rais ye meeting house gratis." "By thair voat Agreed to buld a territ" (turret) and before the meeting adjourned they "Agreed to warn Sociatys meetings by beeting of the Drum on ye tuesday night:: from Abraham Barnes to Captain Thomsons::and ye tuesday next insuing to be Sosiats meeting."

The building of the meeting house occupied the people for more than one year; then they sold what was left of the old building to "Decon Hotchkiss for £8," and afterwards released him from the payment, and at the same meeting they chose "Decon Joseph Ives, Capt Benjn Hall Deacon Stephen Hotchkiss, Mr. Elnathan Beach, and Mr. Samuel Cook a Comtee to seet, the meeting house," and they were also appointed a "Comtee with the joyners to dignifie the seets of the new meeting hous," and "consider those they thought needful for thare age":and "to seet all the young men that thair heds was payd for."

At this "seeting" no old men are mentioned for preference "on account of their age." The venerable Thomas Beach had removed to Meriden and his name is on the monument to the early settlers of that city. Mr. Twiss had been dead three or four years, and Mr. Cook had died that year.

To "dignifie the seats" in those days meant to put rows of seats on either side or in front of the pulpit, which would all be equal and as places of honor to those who should be assigned to sit upon them. It had been found that the high places (in the old meeting house), had not been sufficient for those entitled to sit in high places; and as the women were to be seated on their side of the house in seats as high in dignity as those of their husbands, it was important that enough seats should be so placed that all persons entitled to honor, might feel that no one of lesser dignity sat above them.

This "dignifying" of seats was extended to the young men and maidens, and even the boys and girls in their respective "galires" were, to some extent, "dignified" by the seats allotted to them.

Nearly every time the meeting house was "seeted" some person's dignity was disturbed. One entry reads "Decr 4th 1753, they agree that Mr. Jahalel Laws and his wife::shall have durenig this seeting::the same privilege as Richard Baldwin and his wife had::in ye 2nd pue north ye pulpit."

This most important matter settled; Mr. Hall's salary was made £150 per annum "provision pay at markit pris::or money:" and for a year or two the society collected the minister's rates, and received school money from the town, which had voted "the scoole should surcolate" by which vote the "north farms" had a school some part of the year, as well as the "west farms" (which had a school house of their own), and the teacher, was to be paid "in provision pay" as "might be agreed."

When the town, Feb. 9, 1741, "voated they would build and maintain a good substantial cart bridge over the Great River in Wallingford near Tyler's Mill::att or near the place where ye road now goeth over ye river near said mill"—Capt Benjamin Hall, Elnathan Beach, Samuel Cook and others in the central and south part of New Cheshier desired to be relieved of some of the burdens of taxation that would be laid upon them to defray the cost of the new bridge, which was of little or no use to them. Failing to get any satisfaction from the twon the Society's drum was beaten, and at a meeting held Dec. 1st, 1741, it was "Agreed to apply themselves to the townd that they might have townd privileges." Then they appointed "decon Stephen Hotchkiss, decon Timothy Tuttle, Capt. Benjamin Hitchcock, Sargt Caleb Matthews, Senr, John Galard, Capt Elnathan Beach, Lieut Samuel Cook, Capt Joseph Thomson, Sargent Isaac Moss, Ensign Edward Parker and Ensign John Hotchkiss a Comtee to make application to the town that they might injoy townd privileges." "At the same meeting they chose Colonel Benjamin Hall for thair Agant to pray the generall assembly that they have town privileges."

This application to both town and Assembly appears to have been acted upon only by the town of Wallingford, which appointed an imposing committee of eleven prominent men, whose report on the matter, if made, does not find a place in the proceedings; and for the time being the subject of town privileges was absorbed by other more pressing affairs.

In the following year Captain Elnathan Beach died, leaving to the parish a sum of money with which to purchase a bell for the meeting house and £100 in "money" for the use of the poor. This fund is still serving the purpose for which it was designed, and the memory of Mr. Beach's services is perpetuated by a handsome table tombstone in the burying ground.

It was now rumored throughout the English colonies that King George was about to declare war in which the men of New England would again be called upon to fight in an expedition against the fortress of Louisburg, located on the Island of Cape Breton, at the mouth of the St. Lawrence river.

Connecticut was called upon for a quota of men, and Wallingford furnished ten or fifteen, but it is impossible to distinguish among them any that went from the Parish of New Cheshire. They embarked at New London, and after many hardships by land and sea the fortress was captured on 28th June, 1745. It was built of stone; the strongest fortified place on the American continent and the French determined to recapture it. The following year they sent a formidable fleet to threaten the English coast settlements. Col. Benjamin Hall was chosen one of the Commissioners for Connecticut, "authorized and impowered, for and in behalf of Connecticut, to meet, and treat with commissioners of his Majesties other governments on the continent" * * * * "and with them in such meeting to concert measures for our mutual security, defence and conduct during the present war."

Colonel Hall, no doubt, ably represented his parish and town upon this commission, whose work did not end until 1748, and then there were so many claims for services rendered and hardships endured, that the colony was compelled to issue a new class of paper money worth on their first issue, more than the bills of "old tenor." "Provision pay" rose in value, and silver money was out of sight. Parson Hall's salary, for some time in arrears, was doubled, trebled and quadrupled. The "new tenor bills," although they were made a "legal tender" were not taken with any confidence that they would ever be redeemed. The "legal tender" clause in the Colony money was soon repealed by the English government, and so many new issues of paper money permitted, that the inhabitants of the parish of New Cheshier, in their business affairs, resorted almost wholly to a barter-like trade. In fact individuals did not hesitate to use their own paper. There was for a time in possession of the writer; one of these due bills on a small bit of paper, which reads as follows:

Wallingford May 2nd 1744

For value Recd I promis to pay—

Abm Stanley Four Shillings—00—

by the first of Novembr if not then paid

Intrist till paid. As witness my hand

Elihu Yale

On the back is endorsed "Recd two shillings 04^d by a form^r Order" and across one end is written "Elihu Yale" "his note" 0.04.00.0

£0.01.08.0

This balance was probably never paid, as Yale was killed or died at Cape Breton, on the French Expedition December, 1745. This note became one of the valuable papers belonging to the Stanley family connected by marriage with the Yales.

This is but a single instance of hundreds of similar pieces of paper being given by men in good circumstances, who frequently paid the "collectors of ministers rates," in paper of this character, for sums as low as "ninepence," and in one instance; a paper promise for "one shilling," had endorsed upon it a payment of "four pence in straw."

The issues of paper money by the many different colonies, for the payment of war material, or to replace damages done by the enemy, became so large, and were of such differing values in the several colonies, that the Connecticut Assembly more than once warned the people not to receive the bills of the Providence Plantation, and later on passed a stringent enactment against the circulation in Connecticut of the "bill sof credit issued by the Rhode Island and New Hampshire Plantations"; and no contract or purchase was binding within the limits of the Colony of Connecticut if it expressed that payment was to be made in the bills of credit of the Providence or New Hampshire Plantation.

The money troubles of Connecticut began about 1740, and continued until after the French War. Many different financial experiments were tried. An Act of Assembly would provide a system of finances, which the "King in Council" would interfere with, and so mix up values that it is difficult to arrive at the present day value of the various kinds of so called "money" in circulation in our Colonial days.

"Skin paye" or furs; "Provision paye" and "Lawful money" held their own purchasing power; while the "old tenor bills" and the "new tenor bills," being "Proclamation money" or the "fiat" issues of the Colonies; rapidly depreciated until in 1753 the Assembly voted to receive a certain percentage of the state taxes in "old tenor bills" at the rate of $8.50 for one dollar of "lawful money"; and $2.50 of the latest issue of "new tenor bills" were to be received on taxes as one dollar of "lawful money," (some of the other "new tenor" bills, had become "old tenor" by this time).

This "lawful money" was one ounce troy of silver; of the nominal value of $1.30, but in reality debased in the coinage to a present day value of about one dollar. The standard gold pound was divided into "golden guineas" and "golden ducats," or twenty shilling and ten shilling pieces. These were sub-divided into "sterling" silver parts, called crowns, half crowns, shillings and sixpences, with pennies and half pennies in copper. These coins were in circulation in all the colonies, and in some places where they were not readily obtainable, rose or fell in value according to supply and demand, Assembly laws to the contrary notwithstanding.

The inhabitants of New Cheshier were not "rolling in wealth," but every time any of them got hold of a silver or gold piece, no doubt they put it away where it would do them the most good when the tax collector came around.

The following table, translates the "Pounds, Shillings and Pence" of Colonial days, into the better understood currency of the present time. It is derived from existing records, and, leaving out fractions, is approximately an accurate statement of the fluctuations in the money market in the Parish of New Cheshier for twenty-five years.

Bushel	1730	1740	1750	1755
Wheat	$1.00	$1.66	$5.83	$6.33
Rye	.72	$1.00	$3.33	$4.66
Indian Corn	.40	.66	$1.33	$2.40
Pork, lb	.06	.08	.16	.36
Beef, lb	.04	.05	.10	.24
"A man's labor" per day	.66	$1.07	$3.00	$3.30
"Ye parsons pay—"	$333.00	$297.00	$250.00	$300.00
In £ old tenor	£ 100	£ 150	£ 600	£ 800

In 1757 Parson Hall was paid in "lawful money," and it took only £80, or $267 to discharge the debt. A year or two later, England repaid in "lawful money" a portion of the war expenses of the Colonies; and in consequence prices dropped until wheat could be bought for sixty-six cents a bushel and a man's labor be obtained for eighty-three cents per day. A considerable change from the years when a day's work would only buy half a bushel of wheat.

CHAPTER FIVE.

CHURCH SERVICES DESCRIBED—WAR DECLARED, 1753—COPIES OF ORDERS AND PROCLAMATIONS—THE STAMP ACT—TAX LISTS.

For several years, after the capture of Louisberg and other disturbances that followed, a comparative peace, with few rumors of war, gave the inhabitants of New Cheshire an opportunity to fix up their new meeting house with stone steps, and lay out "hiways" for the accommodation of church attendants from all parts of the parish.

In 1748 Capt. Samuel Cook died, leaving to the church a sum of £60 "for the support of the poor of the parish." We are not told whether it was in "money" or "old tenor" bills. It was credited as "money," and to our day has been doing the work its donor intended.

It was during these few peaceable years that a number of new houses were erected near the meeting house; and we have evidence in the account books of this time that quite a brisk business was done by the carpenters and blacksmiths, whose bills for joiner work and "nales" were made out in both "old tenor," and "provision pay." It was also "agreed to put on a good handsome painte on ye meeting house: in order to preserve ye same from ye wether."

The new meeting house we also know was well filled on the Sabbath. Our ancestors were "fyned" for non-attendance at church. The half-grown boys, living at remote distances were sent from home, early in the morning to light the fires in the "Sabba day houses," while the elders proceeded in more leisurely fashion, either on foot, or horseback. It was a fineable offence to ride fast, or run their horses on the Sabbath, and we may be sure the "hiways" were in no condition favorable to speedy traveling. The women and children rode on pillions, or cushioned seats strapped upon a horse, behind the saddle of the husband or father. Sometimes a two wheeled ox-cart brought the family to church if the roads permitted, and in winter wooden sleds were made comfortable with chair seats and an abundance of straw.

There was no fire permitted in the meeting house, and even in the coldest of weather the only warmth the women had, was a little footstove filled with coals; replenished at noon from the fire in the "Sabba day" house or "hors house" as it was sometimes called. One end of a rough little building, near the church, sheltered the horses; and the other end (fitted with a fireplace), accommodated one or more families who warmed themselves and their provisions between the morning and afternoon services.

We get a forcible illustration of the Sabbath day services of those days when we are told that the meeting began as early as eight or half-past eight o'clock, the tything men making a note of the absentees, and regulating the boys and girls—only very young children being with their mothers.

When Parson Hall came in, all stood up until he had mounted to the pulpit. Then the deacons seated themselves at a table on a raised platform in front of the pulpit. After them the dignitaries sat down, followed in proper order by the rest of the congregation. A deacon having placed an hourglass upon its appropriate stand, the first prayer was uttered, every man standing up. This prayer usually occupied from one-half to three-quarters of an hour. The scriptures were then read, and briefly expounded. A psalm was now "lined" out, either by the parson, or a deacon, to be followed by another prayer, not quite as long as the first one. The sermon came after the second prayer and other psalm. This discourse usually occupied an hour and a half—and during its delivery the tythingmen moved about the church keeping the boys in order, or the grownup people awake. The sleepy men were rapped on the head with the hard end of a long stick, and the women awakened by being tickled with a bunch of feathers, attached by a string to the other end of the tythingman's rod. These men held great authority. Their admonitions were always heeded and their fines were seldom remitted.

The Lord's Supper was usually administered every three months at a long table, the plates and cups being of pewter. Sometimes, in very cold weather the bread would be frozen to the platter, and we are told that frequently the wine would be congealed. It was the duty of the tythingmen to see that only "communicants" sat at the Lord's table. After this service, contributions to defray its expense were carried to the deacons' table by each attendant in due order of precedence. Some gave money, some gave their own due bills, others gave articles of clothing, or woollen yarn, while not a few laid bags of wheat, rye, peas or eggs, butter and other provisions on the deacons' table.

One of our good old judges writes in his diary, about this time "of an exceeding cold day when there was "Great Coughing in meeting," and "yet a new-born baby was brought into ye icy church to be baptized." It was an article of faith with our ancestors that their children should be carried to church for baptism, either the first or second Sunday after birth, even in the coldest of the winter months; and the judge who gives this account of these observances appears to have been highly pleased, when one of his own "fourteen children," "did not cry out, or shrink from the water in the freezing winter weather." Let us hope the babies were warmly clad and only the least bit of them exposed during the ordeal. The judge says "at preaching the minister wore a fur skull cap, a large thick kcloak and had mittens of heavy wool, and that men in church carried muffs and bundled their heads and necks in comforters; and that for three Sabbaths after this, the weather was so bitterly cold that Sabbath services were not held in the church."

The deacon, in the early days of our church, was usually ordained by being called up into the pulpit, where Parson Hall laid his hand upon his head saying, "I ordain thee to the office of Deacon in this church," etc., etc. Then the minister gave him "his charge." Then he prayed and the congregation usually sang part of a psalm. In some churches the deacons wore starched white linen caps; while in the meeting house, to denote their office, which was one of great dignity. In addition to their duties within the church, the deacons during the week, visited the homes of the church members to hear the children recite their catechism; and they reported to the tythingmen all offenses committed by either men, women or children, against the church discipline. These latter (called by the irreverent boys "holy snooks") seldom "let up" on those youngsters whose conduct in church was but little better than it was upon weekdays. It seems that at all times, and in all places, the tythingmen had authority to punish all infractions of ecclesiastical law, whether committed by young folks or grownup people, drunk or sober; and the whipping post in New Cheshier probably served often for the punishment of an offender. It does not appear that our church had a "stool of repentance," like the one erected in Farmington (in the central aisle), where offenders sat during meeting labeled with the name of some offense, such as "slander" or "pride," or "slothful attention to God's word," "being drunk," etc. But it does appear that Parson Hall, the deacons, and the tythingmen, were prompt in calling sinners to repentance. On conviction the culprits signed a written confession, and then came before the church and humbly acknowledge their transgressions.

The parish of New Cheshier was no exception to similar villages and other New England towns. Crimes committed here were either adjudged at Wallingford or summarily disposed of by our only magistrate, Colonel Benjamin Hall. As this great man was in demand most of the time on public business elsewhere, and our stock of magistrates was limited, frequent recourse was had to the parent town, with, if the court convicted, the almost certain recommendation that the delinquent "thief," "drunkard," or "prophane blasphemer," be whipped at the "post" or "ye cart's tail," "nere ye church of ye west society." Sometimes when "fynes" were inflicted, or church rates were not paid, and there was no property for the constable to levy upon, the delinquent's services were sold for a certain number of days or weeks to whosoever would pay the debts, for the shortest term of service; and the purchaser could compel the labor of the debtor by whipping or imprisonment.

The year 1753 was inaugurated by a notice sent throughout all the New England colonies that King George had declared another war against the French, who claimed jurisdiction over the Ohio and Mississippi Valleys. It was in this war that George Washington first attracted the notice of his countrymen. In fact he was one of the first persons to be sent by Gov. Dinwiddie of the Colony of Virginia with a message to the French commander at Venango (now Erie, N. Y.) demanding an evacuation of territory King George claimed as his own. It was in the fall of the year and Washington was nearly six months upon this journey, but he had learned enough of the hostile designs of the French to put the English colonies immediately on the defensive. Messengers were despatched to the other colonies warning them of the threatened dangers, and the Virginia Colony at once raised a large force, which under Washington as one of its commanders, marched in April, 1754, towards a point on the Ohio river (now Pittsburgh, Pa.), where the English had commenced the erection of a fort. When the Virginians arrived there, they found that the French and Indians had driven off the English and captured the works. Two days later the command of the Virginian troops devolved on Washington, by the death of his senior commander. He had only 400 men, while the enemy had 1,500. Washington fell back and erected a fort, which he called "Fort Necessity." This was attacked on the 3rd of July, and after a conflict lasting ten hours the French commander proposed an honorable capitulation and Washington marched out of his stockade, with the honors of war, and safely conducted the remnant of his troops to Virginia.

This first campaign served as an eye-opener to all of the English colonies, and Benjamin Franklin submitted to the colony commissioners a plan of Confederation, which was discussed and finally rejected. This left each of the colonies to protect themselves, with the help of the regulars sent over by the English Government. The Indians, incited by the French, had been committing depredations on the borders of Massachusetts and New York. The Governors of those states lost no time in requesting the colony of Connecticut to help in the defence against a common enemy. Connecticut responded by calling out 500 men, and voting the necessary money for their equipment. Arrangements were also made by the commissioners of all the New England colonies (of whom Col. Benjamin Hall of New Cheshier was one) for the consolidation of a force of ten thousand men to assemble on the frontiers of New York, at Crown Point, where a fort and other outworks were to be erected and garrisoned by troops from the respective colonies, under their own officers. Meantime the English colonies further south were making as vigorous arrangements, and were already skirmishing along their line of defence. The Connecticut contingent, largely increased under command of Colonel Phineas Lyman, erected a strong fortification at the foot of Lake George, N. Y., fifty miles north of Albany, at the head of Hudson river navigation. General Lyman held this post during the rest of the campaign of 1755, being frequently reinforced by new recruits who were sent from Connecticut to the front from time to time, to replace those who had been either killed or wounded.

Among those that went from the Parish of New Cheshier was the writer of the following letter, originally dated at Albany, N. Y., Sept. 20th, 1755, but eventually sent from Fort Edward, N. Y.:

October 24, 1755, honoured

Father and Mother these Lines Come to inform you that I am as well as is Common for me & I hope they will find you all well by ye goodness of God, but when I shall return I Cannot tell but I hope we shall be Disbanded and Sent home seeing we are not Like to perform our Intended enterprise. I have nothing Special to write Concerning the affairs of the army only Capt. Rogers of New Hampshire Came in from a Scout with a frenchmans Scalp 2 or 3 Days ago which was taken in Sight of Crown point.

I would be glad that you would See & git my wages of Capt Johnson before he goeth to sea if I cannot be at home soon enough &c I Live with Lieunt Camp Lieunt parker Ensign hull & the Commissary and Clerk wadsworth and Sernt Morse in the same house for Lieut Parker has been very sick but is mending. I have nothing more to write but to subscribe my Self your most dutiful and obedient Son and Servant Ephraim Preston

Ephraim Preston, who writes the letter printed above, was the eldest son of Captain Ephraim Preston, then in Connecticut on recruiting service. The boy, barely twenty-one years of age, evidently believing it a good thing, encloses in his letter the following recipe:

A Receipt to cure the bite of a Mad Dog, from Dr. John Crous of the State of New York.

Take the lower jaw of a dog burnt and powdered, one tea-cup full; sulphur of Venice* one half teaspoon full, and if you please one-third of a Colt's false Tongue, and a small quantity of Blood-Root, and Shoke Root; reduce them to a compound, and give the patient one-half teaspoon full in water.

In half an hour give the Filings of one-half Copper. Repeat the application on the following day

The above are sufficient portions for an adult to a child—give discretionarily

Use no sweet milk for two or three days.

If this recipe does not cure hydrophobia, it will at least inform us, of the present day, what the medical men of the past concocted for the cure of a mad dog's bite. It is reproduced here for the benefit of science.

In the campaign of 1756, Colonel Benjamin Hall issued the following order. We have no record of the Cheshire men who were sent to the seat of war at this time, but the order shows that New Cheshire bore its share of the burden, as well as some of the other towns and villages of Connecticut.

To Captain Ephraim Preston Captain of a military Company in the Tenth Regiment in the Colony of Connecticut.

The campaign of 1757 began under conditions of great despondency to the people of Connecticut. The New Cheshire inhabitants, in addition to being obliged to accept Assembly prices laid upon their produce, were taxed by the parent town of Wallingford as heavily as the townspeople who were better able to pay, but at the town meetings, the New Cheshier people could get little if any relief. An expedition was to be sent to the mouth of the St. Lawrence, and another was to be sent to Montreal, composed mainly of New England troops. By this time the Colony Regiments were being replaced by Regiments organized in the several colonies for the King's service, and bounties were offered to all who should enlist. That men from New Cheshier and Wallingford accepted these bounties and enlisted we have no reason to doubt, but have not been able to ascertain either their number or names. The story of the war at this time is best told by the documents which follow.

By the Honorable Thomas Fitch Esq Governour and Commander in Chief of his Majestys Colony of Connecticut in New England in America.

The New Cheshier Captain proceeded to Lake George where he was actively engaged in his military duties—under Lieut. Colonel Nathan Whiting of New Haven—who was in command of “Number Four” one of the Military Posts erected by General Phineas Lyman to protect the northern frontier against the unusually aggressive Indians who cruelly slaughtered the men, women and children in every exposed house or village; preventing the raising of crops, and carrying off all the grain and cattle they could capture. The following is one of Colonel Whiting’s orders sent to Captain Ephraim Preston, at this time :

No 4 May 9 1757

Capt Preston

You are hereby directed to leave your Ensign a sergt Corporal & 35 men below—viz the enst & 25 at Majs Bellows and must send the sergeant & 10 men to the great meadow to remain there till further orders to be employed for the security of the people in their business and to guard them at their work, give them orders to be carefull that the enemy get no advantage against them Maj Bellows will supply them with provisions, this number may be increased or they relieved soon yours

For the next two years there was nothing but war all along the line. The English had sent over many regiments of Regulars. They had by the help of men from Connecticut and Massachusetts again captured Louisberg and succeeded in forcing the French and their allies to a refuge at Quebec and Montreal. In these operations, many men were called into service, and over seven thousand from Connecticut had been either killed, wounded or discharged. In the village of New Cheshier there were a number of mourners. In New England there was a general apathy, and supplies were grudgingly voted by the colonial assemblies.

There is no evidence that the New Cheshire people were called upon to provide more than their quota of men to the troops required for the war, and we can readily believe that few or no volunteers went from the village. In fact all over the colony there was an equal want of loyalty to the crown or to the English Parliament whose enactments placed unusual burdens upon the people of the colonies. The blundering incompetence of the Generals sent from England to command the men raised in the colonies, caused much complaint, and it was only on compulsion men could be obtained. It was at this time that Colonel Benjamin Hall returns to the village, from his mission to New York as a colony commissioner, and issues the following order:

To Ephraim Preston Captain of A military company, in the Town of Wallingford.

In the tenth Regiment in the colony of Connecticut Greeting.

You are hereby required to cause warning forthwith to be given to said company, and All living within the Limits thereof, who are by Law obliged to show Arms, to meet on the sixteenth day of April next, at such Place and Hour of said Day, as you shall appoint, And you are then and as soon after as may be, to detach or impress so many able bodied effective men of such Company or such as may be found within the limits thereof, as are proper to be employed in the service of the ensuing campaign—as shall be found necessary to make up the Proportion assigned to said Company, including such as shall then be inlisted in said service: such as have been in any former campaign, to be taken (by Order of Assembly) rather than Others, unless there be some special Reason or Circumstance attending them or their affairs, other than their having been before in the service to exempt them.

And you are to order each Man by you impressed as aforesaid, to hold himself in Readiness, to join such company ordered to be raised in said Colony for the service aforesaid, as I shall direct, which will be to fill Capt Hitchcocks & Capt Clarks companies.

And you are to inform each soldier, by you ordered to join said Company, that unless he voluntarily enlist, or within the space of twenty four Hours after such Order, pay to you the Sum of ten Pounds, to be by you paid into the Treasury of the Town to which such soldier belongs, he will be holden to attend said service, and shall accordingly proceed therein, on the Penalty of the Law in that case provided.

And you are further to inform such soldier, that in case he voluntarily enlist himself into said company, within twenty four Hours as aforesaid, he shall be entitled to receive the same Bounty and allowances, as Those are entitled to, who, not having been in any former campaign, have enlisted in said service.

You are also required to send or deliver to me, a true Account of the Number and Names of the Men in said company, and within the Limits thereof, that are enlisted in said service, on the Tenth day of April next that the Number by you to be impressed, may be by me determined Before such Impressment be made.

Of a speedy and punctual compliance herewith, you may not fail. Dated at Wallingford the 28th Day of March Anno Domini 1759.

A little more than a month later, this New Cheshire boy was probably at the capture of Quebec which ended the campaign of 1759. Preston came home later, married and died in Cheshire. One of his sons settled in Cheshire, another in Wallingford, and the youngest in Prospect.

The capture of Quebec, which was expected to close the war, caused the French and their Indian allies to retreat to Montreal. They were re-inforced by a large army, and six frigates sent from France. Meantime the English had succeeded in winning over some of the Indians who thereafter materially assisted in the conquest of Montreal.

The news of the surrender of Quebec caused a great deal of rejoicing in the Connecticut colony. It was followed by the English government sending over to Connecticut fifteen thousand pounds sterling in specie as a partial payment to the Colony for its expenses during the campaign. Some of the obnoxious military enlistment laws were amended, and the colonists more cheerfully furnished soldiers for the Montreal expedition, which, it was believed, would be short, sharp and decisive.

Colonel Benjamin Hall had been made a Judge of the Superior court, and Col. Nathan Whiting was in command at New Haven. One of his very first acts was to issue to Amasa Hitchcock of New Cheshier (21 years old) the following commission:

NATHAN WHITING Esq:

Colonel of the Second Regiment raised in the Colony of Connecticut, in New England in America

To Amasa Hitchcock Greeting

By virtue of the Power and Authority to me given, in, and by the Colony of Connecticut; I do by these Presents (reposing special Trust and Confidence in your Loyalty, Courage and good conduct), constitute and appoint you the said Amasa Hitchcock to be the Third Serjeant in the Eleventh Company in the Regiment whereof I am Colonel.

For invading Montreal, and carrying War into the Heart of the Enemys Possessions; and to proceed under the supreme Command of His majestys Commander in Chief, in North America: you are therefore faithfully and diligently to Discharge the Duty of a Serjeant in said Company: for which this shall be your sufficient warrant.

Sergeant Hitchcock served in the expedition that was sent to the western part of the state of New York, and when he returned to Cheshire brought with him the following orders, which explain themselves, and prove that "Serjeant Hitchcock" deserved the promotion he soon after received.

Ashbel Humphreys Lieut

Commanding at West pass

Fort Stannix was a military post, at or near the present town of Rome, N. Y. Two weeks before Sergeant Hitchcock obtained at Onandaga Falls the receipt of Lieut Humphreys, Montreal and all the other French posts in Canada had been surrendered to the English. The French and Indian war was virtually ended on the day, Sept. 8th, 1760, that Amasa Hitchcock was ordered to leave Schenectady, N. Y., with his boat "loaded with three iron shod carts," and "proceed" to Oswego Falls.

A tombstone in the Cheshire burial ground informs us that Reuben Hitchcock of Cheshire was a soldier in the French war, and was killed November, 1759, while returning from Montreal, Canada. He was elder brother of Amasa Hitchcock.

¹Joel Clark was 1st Lieut. when E. Preston was captain at Crown Point.

While the French war was being carried on, there was introduced into this country, for the first time, articles of pottery ware to which the common people were almost complete strangers. Heretofore the table service had been entirely of pewter and wooden utensils; except perhaps among the wealthy, who could afford to have a service of silver. Even these grandees had to use chiefly the baser metal at their everyday meals, and only the well-to-do people owned a few coarse Dutch pitchers and Delft ware mugs, of which they were very careful; transmitting them by will to their descendants as precious possessions. A glass bottle, or a common red earthen ware pitcher, or jug, was highly prized and not to be seen every day in the homes of the people. Up to this period there was not, in all the American Colonies, a full table service of what we should call "china ware."

It was a new industry in France and England that began about 1740 to turn out dishes and tea pots modeled upon the very expensive Chinese articles. The first manufactures were coarse and plain, but cheaper and cleaner than pewter. They were soon handsomely ornamented and became the fashion so rapidly that in nearly every ship that brought troops or merchandise from England, there would be a consignment to one or more of the wealthy colonists of a Doulton, or Worcester dinner or tea set. The merchants, who sometimes had orders for single pieces, could only supply their customers by importing a full set, and selling to particular persons the different articles required. It will be understood that the people generally were not included among the customers who bought "china ware" in those days. The good housewives had to be content with washing their wooden trenchers, and polishing their pewter platters and flagons, or their copper tea kettles and milk pans, all the time perhaps wishing for the more easily cleaned pottery plates and bowls, owned by some of their wealthier neighbors.

It is on record that one young minister and his bride, received from her relatives, "at home in old England" a wedding present of a complete tea service. This was such an event in the parish that the women of the congregation organized a "surprise party" expressly to see and admire "them purty things her folks had sent all the way over here, just for them two to eat off of." The good wife who wrote this story to one of her grandchildren, added, "but next year your grandfather bought twice as many 'chiny dishes' for me, and they was a great comfort because it took no time at all to wash em."

China ware—or "pottery ware," was not an article of common use in the parish of New Cheshire, and it is very doubtful if any of the families possessed a full set until after the Revolutionary war, when a New Haven dealer advertised, on the 25th of November, 1784, that he had "Queens ware, well assorted, imported direct to New Haven." A month later when he had overhauled his crates, he advertises "English china, cups and saucers." After that he advertises, "A large assortment of coarse stone ware in crates," "large round bottles holding near two quarts; quart, pint, and half pint dittoes"; "with a discount to those who buy large quantities."

Five years later Samuel Dennis of New Haven applied to the Assembly for state aid to establish some pottery works, but his petition was negatived and the enterprise was abandoned.

China ware was too expensive for general use for many years after the Revolution, and leather pails, wooden bowls, pewter dishes, mugs and water pitchers of wood and copper, or brass, continued in everyday use until after the beginning of this century. One or two of the enterprising men of New Cheshier were famous in New Haven and elsewhere for the excellent wooden bottles they manufactured. They were esteemed for being so "light and handy" when New England rum or hard cider was to be carried into the mowing field or upon a horseback journey.

The war with the French, now virtually ended, had borne heavily upon the inhabitants of Connecticut, and in particular on the parish of New Cheshire, which paid almost as great a burden of taxation as the parent town of Wallingford. A large number of the French war prisoners had been quartered here and when the town could get no help from the Assembly they "impowered the selectmen to Proceed with the French People::as with other Towns poor::respecting binding them out:&c."a

King George the Second was dead, and his son George the Third, then 20 years old, was crowned in 1761. His accession to the throne of England may be said to have caused the Colonial Rebellion through the dissatisfaction of the New England colonies over "Orders in Council" and the arbitrary acts of the English Government in saddling upon the American Colonies the greater part of their expenditures during the late war, and besides this, taxing all the people in many ways contrary to the letter and spirit of the colonial charters.

In the Parish of New Cheshier there were no doubt as many grumblers as elsewhere. One of them, Ebenezer Fisk, had (in February, 1760, cited the Parish to answer a memorial he proposed to send to the next session of the Assembly. On the 8th of May, 1760, "The question being put to ye society whether they would apoint anny person to Represent them before ye honorable genaral Assembly to answer ye citation &c" * * * * "Ye answer was in ye Affirmative::by thare voat made choyce of Captn Benjn Hall Esquier and Captn Samuel Hulls to represent them:: * * * and shew our resons why and wherefore ye memoril of ye sd memorialee should not be granted."

At the May session of the Assembly, 1760, this affair was disposed of by the passage of the following act:

"Upon the memorial of Ebenezer Fisk, representing that his dwelling house and buildings where he now lives is situate on a tract of land called 'The Purchase,' between the original bounds of the towns of Farmington and Wallingford, on the west side of the country road that runs North and South which tract had been heretofore by Act of Assembly annexed to the Parish of New Cheshier, and under the regulation of the town of Wallingford: and that the same lyes adjoyning to ye south bounds of the said town of Farmington, and parish of Southington; that the same is remote from the place of public worship in the said parish of New Cheshier, and near the place of public worship in said parish of Southington; that other of the said 'Purchase' land lying Eastward of said road (much of which belongs to the Memorialist), is already within said parish of Southington and under the regulation of the said town of Farmington, and that it would greatly ease the Memorialist and be most accommodable on all accounts to him to have the aforesaid tract (whereon he lives) annexed to said society of Southington and to be under the regulation of the town of Farmington: * * * * It is therefore resolved by this Assembly that the aforesaid tract of land * * * lying Westward of the country road, and between that and the river called Tenn Mile River, in quantity about seventy acres, be the same more or less, be, and the same is hereby annexed to the said society of Southington, and the same land and all persons that do or shall dwell thereon shall be in all respects under the regulation of the town of Farmington, both with respect to duty and privilege, as though they had been originally within their grant and patent; and also shall be included within the limits of the South military company in the said society of Southington; any former order or act of this assembly notwithstanding."

This Act probably took away from Cheshire the tract of land where is now the village of Milldale, and subsequent acts transferred to Farmington the land between the west peak of the Hanging Hills and our present Cheshire street.

In this same year Joseph Moss (a great-grandson of John Moss, one of the pillars of the first church in Wallingford), gathered together some of his neighbors in the Parish of New Cheshier and read to them on the Sabbath day, and at other times, the service of the Church of England, expounding to them its doctrines. This was scandalous to many persons in the parish, but it does not appear that Mr. Moss or his followers were seriously molested in their worship. Three years before this, some Episcopalians in Wallingford had permission to erect a church near Pond Hill, "on the west side of "Mix's" lane: not to obstruct his Majestys Subjects." Rev. Mr. Dana and Rev. Mr. Hall do not appear to have opposed strenuously these church establishments, and as the worshippers continued to pay "Ministers Rates" of the orthodox church; "his majestys subjects were not obstructed."

Mr. Moss bought the land on which the Episcopal church now stands; and by the help of others erected a small building for church service. Afterward he bought additional land adjoining, which he deeded to the Wardens of St. Peter's Parish for

"£7.10.00" and "for love and good will to the Church of the ever blessed Redeemer." For many years thereafter he was the lay reader and clerk of the Episcopal church he had been instrumental in establishing.

The male inhabitants of the village at the date of the following tax list are probably all therein named as well as some not living in the parish, but who paid ministers rates for the New Cheshier clergyman.

The figures placed after each name in this list, is the amount in pounds upon which each person was assessed. The estates of the different individuals will indicate their wealth at this time. In all there are 270 "heds." Those who had served in the Army were not listed.

It was next agreed, in 1765, “to cover the fore side of the meeting house roof with cedar shingles and New Roof boards,” and “they made choyce of Samuel Beach for society’s clerk.” He was the son-in-law of Rev. Mr. Hall, had graduated at Yale College a few years before, and was a man of much ability. At this time the increasing infirmities of the venerable pastor occasioned the settlement as a colleague with him, of the Rev. John Foote of Branford. He was a recent graduate of Yale, and being acceptable to all concerned, the following year he married Mr. Hall's youngest daughter, Abigail, and continued thereafter as the associate of his father-in-law, until, in due course of time, he became full pastor of the New Cheshier church.

¹The “green” here alluded to is the triangular piece of ground where the Town hall now stands, and the new “scool house” was erected close to the road nearly opposite the present residence of Henry Beadle. It, or its successor, stood there within the memory of many perons now living. The late Mr. Bronson Alcott taught school in this building, or its successor.

It was about this time that the Town Meetings which were being held in Wallingford, were attended by all the prominent men of the New Cheshier parish, and there is no doubt they made their voices heard, and their influence felt on the important questions that agitated the people, not only of Wallingford, but throughout the Colony of Connecticut. The "Sons of Liberty" had been for some time actively engaged riding through the country and rousing the inhabitants of every town to the necessity of holding meetings and protesting against the arbitrary orders of the English King and his Council.

At the town meeting held in Wallingford on Monday, January 13th, 1766, the following vote in the handwriting of Mr. Samuel Beach is spread upon the minutes, headed

"YE STAMP ACT."

"WHEREAS it appears from Antient Records and other Memorials of Incontestible Validity, that our Ancestors with a Great sum Purchased said Township: at their only Expense Planted: with great Peril possessed: and Defended the same: we were born Free: having never been in Bondage to any: an Inheritance of Inestimable Value.

Voted and Agreed that if any of said Inhabitants shall Introduce, Use or Improve: any Stamp Vellum: Parchment or paper, for which tax or Tribute is or may be Demandable: such Person or Persons shall Incurr the Penaltie of 20 shillings to be recovered by the Selectmen of said Town for the Time being for the use of the Poor of said Town.

This order to continue in force until the next meeting of said inhabitants in Town Meeting."

At the same meeting votes were passed declaring that "the Disputes and Debates that frequently arise in ye Town meetings" regarding the action of the surveyors of the highways, "the Badness of the public roads," "encroachments on highways," etc., and instructing the selectmen to fix the limits of each surveyor, and annually prepare a list of suitable persons to serve as such, and appoint a committee to remove obstructions.

The next town meeting held on the 30th of January, 1766, declared that the "Method of Voting for a Town Clerk shall be by papers, with his name fairly written." A month later "voted that Each Society make a nomination of thare Town officers to be Presented to the Town in there Annual Town Meeting in December"; and that "the oaths be administered as by Law appointed." Two months after this it was "Voted to expose the Poor at Public Vendue:to who will do it cheapest by the Week Month or year."

It does not appear that at any of these frequent town meetings the Stamp Act resolutions were repealed, and we may infer that the disturbances at New Haven and elsewhere in the colonies were fully endorsed by the Wallingford people; until the obnoxious papers were finally sent back to England, and their sale in the colonies no longer authorized.

The following three or four years furnish us with abundant evidence that the inhabitants of New Cheshier Parish attended all the Wallingford Town meetings, and continued to manifest a decided opposition to every obnoxious measure of the English Government.

In common with other Connecticut towns, Wallingford opposed, through Captain Macock Ward, its only representative in the Assembly, the enactment at the January, 1767, Assembly, quartering upon the Connecticut Colony of two officers and one hundred and thirty-four of "his majesty's recruits from Germany." The rates fixed by the English authorities for the subsistence of these men being very low; the Assembly enacted that all persons on whom soldiers were billeted should receive out of the Treasury of the colony (in addition to the sum allowed by his majesty for their subsistence) enough "lawful money" to make the sum equal to five shillings (or 83 cents) per week for each soldier.

The Assembly cautiously worded their act so that it should prohibit the Hessians from carrying arms except on lawful duty; and stated that if these men might be quartered in New Haven, Wallingford and Branford without detriment to his Majesty's service; "His Honour the Govr. should give needful and specific orders to the authority of the towns according to law."

Wallingford and its parish of New Cheshier escaped this infliction, as appears by an account audited at the May session of the Assembly of 1767, directing the Treasurer to pay the towns of New Haven and Branford £100.07.04 "for billeting his Majesty's forces quartered there."

Among other specifications in the Act of the Assembly each of these foreign soldiers was to have either "five pints of small beer or cider" or, in lieu thereof, "half a pint of rum mixed with a quart of water," as his per diem allowance, with his other rations.

The inhabitants of New Cheshier were now probably so imbued with the spirit of "Liberty" that they determined to try again for "town privileges," that they might impose upon themselves whatever taxes an independent existence might require. Accordingly they presented to the December town meeting at Wallingford, the "memorial" which is given in the following record:

"At an adjourned Town meeting in Wallingford January 2d 1770 meet according to adjournment.

"Whereas the Inhabitants of the Parrish of New Cheshire in said Town by their Agents Presented a memorial to said Town in the words following viz: (said Memorial was presented at the annual meeting in December 1769)

At a special Town Meeting in Wallingford May 14th, A. D., 1770.

“On the memorial of the Inhabitants of the Parrish of New Cheshire in the town of Wallingford—to the Honorable General Assembly holden at Hartford May 1770, Praying that said Parrish be made into a Distinct Town of themselves and be called by the name of the Town of Cheshire as by their memorial Dated April 22d, 1770, and said Town being summons to appear before sd Assembly to shew Reasons if any they have why sd memorial should not be granted, etc.

“The Question was put whether the Town will do anything respecting said Memorial.

“Voted they would appoint an Agent for said Town on said memorial & accordingly chose Macock Ward Esq. to be their agent.”¹

At the session of the Assembly Captain Macock Ward succeeded in defeating the prayer of the New Cheshier memorialists for “town privileges.” There is no report of the final action, because at that session the Assembly enacted that all such pet-tions should be referred, and, when final action was to be taken it was to be done by a yea or nay vote on the committee’s report.

¹On the Wallingford records there is a vote Dec. 5th, 1738. “The town gave liberty to Mecok Ward to sett a klok in ye steeple:and if any damadge to ye belfre:hee will pay it and taik away ye klok.”

The memorial may have been adversely acted upon by the committee to whom it was referred.

The next year a Memorial from "Waterbury South Farms" (Prospect) to be made a parish was "agreed" to be opposed in town meeting and Colonel Benjamin Hall and Captain Cornelius Brooks were appointed a committee. The town denied the petition and the people on the "West Rocks" continued to attend church in New Cheshier, which parish now appointed Thomas Atwater "to colect the Church of England Ministers rate."¹

The meeting house being in need of repairs, it was "agreed" to put in new underpinning, "repair the Turritt sufficient to hold a bel," and it was voted to get a bell of 450 lbs. weight at the discretion of the Committee and they also "agreed that they which tune the Psalme Be seated in the front seat in the galrey," etc.

They may have bought the bell but did not set it up until 1776, when "Liberty Bells" were in demand all over the Colony. By a later vote in 1778 it was "agreed to ring but one bell at noon on ye Sabath."

It should be noted here, that year after year, from 1723 up to the hard times that were now beginning, the inhabitants of New Cheshier parish had not once failed to annually provide for their schools, which were in part sustained by the money received by the town of Wallingford as its share of the Ohio and Western lands sold by the Colony of Connecticut. The portion of this money allotted to the parish of New Cheshier, was most all held in bonds of the Western Reserve Corporation, but some of it was placed in Bank by the school committee who were annually appointed.¹ This money was usually loaned out to those who would borrow it, and for many years Mr. Samuel Beach was chosen to attend to that business.

In the spring of 1771 there had been many freshets and disastrous floods; some bridges had been carried away upon the river and much damage done, not only in Wallingford, but along Mill and Tenn Mile Rivers. "The so-called Johnsons, Royces, and Hough's bridges the town voated to repair or replace them." When the spring of the following year opened, Johnson's bridge "had been repaired by particular gentlemen," and as additional damage had been done to highways, the town "voated severally they would not rebuild Royses Bridge, but as to the Hough bridge and highway left it discretionary with ye selectmen." The New Cheshier people at the North Farms and on Cheshire street were probably pretty mad, until December, when the town "voated discretion to the selectmen" concerning "Johnsons Bridge & Royses bridge" and it was understood that some help would be extended to our "neighbours of ye New Cheshier Parish." It does not appear that the parish received much assistance; on the contrary the men were called upon to "turn out" and assist in the work necessary to be done all over town, before the winter storms should cause greater damage.

Meantime other troubles were being prepared to worry the hard-working people of the parish. A nephew of Rev. Mr. Hall (who was living in Wallingford), sent over the following proclamation accompanied by a tax list, the collection of which at this time must have been considered particularly unwelcome.

EXECUTION FOR THE RATE.

TO Amasa Hitchcock of Wallingford in the County of New Haven Collector of the Town rate for the Parish of New Cheshire in said Town of Wallingford for the year 1774.

Greeting—

“Dated in Wallingford Feby 8th 1774
“Caleb Hall Just Peace.”

This “Execution for the Rate” was probably the last document issued in Wallingford “In his Majesty’s Name.” There is no record that any delinquent taxpayer was sent to jail by the Collector.

This document is interesting reading at this time. It came to New Cheshier a month or two after orders had been issued for ascertaining the number of people living in the Colony of Connecticut.

The Wallingford record reads “The following is an account of the Number of the Inhabetants of the town of Wallingford on the 1st day of January 1774:the Orders for Numbering the People came from the King and Council.”

“the sum of ye old society	2130
“the sum of New Cheshier Parish	1933
“the sum of Merriden Parrish	0852
	<hr/>
	4915
“the sum Total of all ye whites	4777
the sum Total of all ye Blacks	138

The names of those persons who were taxed on the list for 1774 forwarded to Amasa Hitchcock with the "Execution" order, are here given, omitting the names of those New Cheshier inhabitants who will be found already recorded in the tax list "For ye Ministers Rate" of 1762. The two lists will give the names, no doubt, of the persons living in the parish just before the Revolutionary war began, and six years before the town of Cheshire was incorporated.

The figures denote in pounds the sum on which the tax is laid.

CHAPTER SIX.

OPPOSITION TO ENGLISH TAXATION—SLAVE OWNERS—CHESHIRE'S PART IN THE REVOLUTIONARY WAR.

In 1773 the Boston people had a "tea party" which brought upon the Massachusetts colony the infamous "Port Bill," a measure that caused indignation meetings to be held in nearly every Connecticut town.

At Wallingford a town meeting was held in 1774, at which it was voted, "In consideration of the sufferings of the people of Boston in the Common Cause of Liberty, that committees be appointed to collect subscriptions for their relief, etc." Eleven persons were appointed from Wallingford; six from the parish of New Cheshier, four from the parish of Meriden, and one for the Wallingford part of the Northford parish. These committeemen were instructed to send "their collections to the selectmen of the town of Boston to be disposed of at the discretion of said selectmen, for the benefit of the indigent sufferers by the Port Bill."

The Connecticut assembly voted favorably upon an invitation of the Colony of Massachusetts inviting delegates from all the Colonies to assemble at Philadelphia, on the 5th of September to deliberate upon plans for "mutual assistance," and "if need be resistance" to the increasing demands made upon them by the English King and his ministers.

This convention met on the day appointed. Twelve colonies were represented. It remained in session nearly two months, during which time they perfected a plan for Colonial Union, and adjourned on the 26th of October, 1774, to meet again on the 10th of the following May, "unless the desired redress of Grievances should be obtained."

The Assembly of Connecticut met in October at New Haven, and decided to submit the Articles of Association to the several towns, and in addition to passing an elaborate act for organizing troops for the defense of the Colony; they further ordered:

"Each military company in the colony shall be called out twelve half days and exercised in the use of their arms, between this time and the first of May. If any non-commissioned officer or private shall neglect to attend such exercises, he shall forfeit and pay for each half day, two shillings lawful money, to be divided equally among those on duty; and a premium of six shillings shall be allowed each soldier who shall attend on said twelve half days."

It should be mentioned here, that for more than five years previous to this enactment, the patriotic men, women and children of the Parish of New Cheshier, had, in common with the people in other towns, expressed in various ways their determined opposition to many of the laws the "King in Council" had promulgated.

When the tea was taxed, the women drank no tea. When the law came that imposed a duty upon English cloth, the men sheared their own sheep, and the women spun the wool into yarn. When imported Irish linens were taxed, the farmers planted the seed and hatched their own flax, which the women and girls wove into garments. When candles became a royal monopoly and were not permitted to be sold without making a payment to the King's attorney or agent, the women got on very well by dipping rushes frequently in hot grease, cooled them off, and thus accumulated enough candle light to find their way about after dark. For every article on which the King or his officials—who paid for the privilege—claimed a tax, the people of New Cheshier parish either manufactured it themselves, or invented a substitute. In this way most of the "Orders in Council" were nullified; and because the "Sons and Daughters of Liberty" were so active in the colonies, troops were sent over to enforce enactments which the order loving people found many ways of evading short of open rebellion.

Our New Cheshier ancestors being "properly warned," went over to town to attend "A Legal town Meeting of the Inhabitants of Wallingford, convened on the 29th Day of November Anno Domini 1774"—(omitting the number of years his most Gracious Majesty had been on the throne).

"The Articles of Association of the American Colonial Congress, being read, together with the Resolutions of the Representatives of this Colony thereon * * * Voted to adopt the same, there being but three dissentients in a full meeting.

"In compliance with the Eleventh Article of the Agreement of said Congress, the following persons were chosen as a committee for the purposes therein mentioned.

"For the parish of New Cheshier Captain Ephraim Cook, Captain Jesse Moss, Ensign John Beach, Mr. Timothy Hall, Mr. Eliakim Hitchcock and Mr. David Brooks."

For Wallingford, nine persons were appointed and two more for the Episcopal church. For Meriden four persons, and one for the Northford part of Wallingford.

Oliver Stanley, of Wallingford, and Deacon Samuel Beach of New Cheshier were voted the Committee on Correspondence.

Then it was "Voted not to countenance extravagance or entertainments."

After a vote of thanks to the Rev. Jas. Dana for his "patriotic speech" the meeting adjourned.

Important town meetings and generally all regular meetings were usually opened with prayer by one of the deacons or the minister. At this meeting the Rev. James Dana was probably called upon to invoke the divine blessing upon the deliberations of the townspeople.

The articles agreed upon in the Congress, pledged the "Delegates and the People of the several colonies they represented" to a policy of aggression which it was believed would bring about a redress of grievances. No article manufactured in England or the product of any of its islands was to be "imported, bought, sold or consumed" in the colonies. No rum, molasses, syrups, or wines were to be purchased by the people when brought into the colonies by English traders. No tea, coffee, pimento and other spices, sent by the English East India Company were to be used by the people. Slaves were no longer to be imported and the trade was to be discontinued.

The Eleventh Article recommended that every county, city, and town, should appoint a "Committee whose business it shall be attentively to observe the conduct of all persons touching this Association," and if they find any one violating its Articles, they were to make it known publicly, and thenceforth the people were to "break off all dealings with him or her, as foes to the rights of the colony." In other words they were to be a sort of Vigilance Committee, while the Correspondence Committee should keep the town posted upon what was being done elsewhere.

In the Connecticut Colony, the slave trade was never a very active one. The colony laws permitted the buying and selling of negroes, Indians and vicious white men and women. They also regulated their conduct, and punished slave owners who maltreated their servants. Very few persons were rich enough to own more than one or two negroes, and the birth records of New Chesier do not show more than twenty or twenty-five slaves in the parish. Rev. Mr. Hall had several: Elnathan Beach had owned three or four; Captain Cook had some, and so had the late Col. Ben Hall. Occasionally a notice would be put up on the sign-post in Wallingford that some "likely negros" would be sold at "public vendue," but this was an exceptional occurrence. As a rule, when the owner died, his negroes were given a chance to select their new master or mistress from among the heirs to the estate, and after they had done so, the slave was duly "prized" and "set off" to the person chosen for his, or her owner. If there was any punishment to be inflicted upon a negro, it was done by the authorities, or abated if the circumstances warranted such a course.

Soon after Rev. John Foote got married he went to Branford, and bought a little negro boy "to wait on his wife."

The original "bill of sale" is still in the possession of one of Parson Foote's descendants. It reads as follows:

I Enoch Staples of Branford in the county of New Haven for the consideration of thirty Pounds Lawfull Money Received to my full satisfaction of the Revd Mr John Foot of the Parish of New Cheshire in ye town of Wallingford in said county do in open market sell, make over & deliver unto the sd John Foot & his heirs & assigns a Negro Boy Slave aged about Eight years named Prince—& I the said Enoch Staples do by these presents bind myself & my heirs to warrand and defend the said Negro Slave for the term of his natural life to him the said John Foot & his heirs & assigns against all lawfull claims & demands whatsoever—

In witness where of I have hereunto Set my hand & Seal the 8th day of June anno Domini 1769.

At a sale of negroes about this time in New Haven, a negro man named "Lot" was sold for £135; a negro wench named "Hannah" brought £100; boy named "Saul" £65, and another boy named "Pharoh" brought £45. This black family was sold at low prices according to the latest quotations in the slave market, which in Connecticut seldom held open sales of the human chattels that were imported "direct from Africa."

Before the convention which was to meet again on the 10th of May, 1775, at Philadelphia, could be called together, certain acts of aggression on the part of the English officials at Boston had precipitated affairs and the whole country was in a ferment. The Assembly of Connecticut was promptly called together, and for the first time the town of Wallingford was represented by two men from the Parish of New Cheshier. They were "Mister" Samuel Beach and Captain Thaddeus Cook. The former magistrate, Colonel Ben Hall, had died in June, 1773, and Mr. Beach was appointed a magistrate the year following. The first session of this Assembly was held in Hartford early in May, and their enactments were worded in language that could be understood by the English government as meaning not only active resistance to the orders that had been issued by the "King in Council," but for entire separation from the government of Great Britain. It reiterated its official embargo on the sale of all English goods and products, and enjoined the greatest activity upon the part of the committees in the several towns for the exposure of every disaffected person, or the boycotting of all men and women who should refuse to aid the authorities in resisting the obnoxious measures of the English government. It promulgated articles of war, and voted to raise six regiments of colony troops, besides giving minute directions for the purchase of all sorts of necessary articles for the clothing, housing and subsistence of the troops, both at their homes and in the field.¹ It ordered the issuance of bills of credit, and proper punishment for all who should refuse to accept it in payment for army supplies. In short, the Connecticut Assembly enacted every law it thought necessary to place the colony on the defensive. It appointed Delegates to the Philadelphia Convention, to the New York and New Jersey Colony conventions, and then it adjourned to meet again whenever the Governor or the Deputy-Governor should call it together.

The New Cheshier Representatives for Wallingford came home and reported. A town meeting was held and committees of inspection appointed, Samuel Beach being authorized for the Parish of New Cheshier. His duty was to visit every inhabitant and make a note of everything that might be available as war material. He took an account of all the surplus cloth available for tents or clothing. The yarn the housewives had in stock; the extra stockings they had already knitted; the sheets and pillow-cases they could do without; the old or new rags that could be turned into paper; the kettles that might be spared, or temporarily used. All the extra knives and forks were taken account of; and a full list made of every female, old or young, who could spin the wool into the yarn needed, or who could weave the cloth, of which large quantities would be required.

¹Each soldier was to be provided with Beer, or a "jill of rum" each "fatigue day" and when they were not on active duty Rum and Beer was given out at the discretion of the officers "as they shall see cause."

The committees of inspection took an account of all the surplus hay, straw and grain the farmers had in their barns or stacked in the fields. The horses, cattle, hogs, sheep and chickens were listed; and in some instances bargained for on the spot, to be delivered when paid for by the authorities.

To these preliminaries we may be sure there were a few people who objected to giving in any account of their possessions, but they were speedily called to order by the "Vigilance" Committee appointed at the town meeting six months previous, and which was still attending to the duties imposed upon it. As a rule, the Church of England people, being accustomed to pray "for the King" did not take kindly to preparations for resisting his authority, and in not a few instances they were severely handled by the patriotic young men of the parish.

The inspection committees no doubt paid little attention to these objectors and performed their work thoroughly, probably acting with discretion, quietly getting the desired information. When they made their reports to the selectmen, those town officials took care that the knowledge they had obtained of the resources of the town and its parishes should not be made public. What a light it would throw upon the circumstances of the people living at that time in the parish of New Cheshier, if we now had one of those reports of the inspection committee!

The Philadelphia convention of all the Colonies, came together in May, 1775, and at this session the "CONTINENTAL CONGRESS" became the supreme power for directing the affairs of the colonies. While the plan of union was not altogether satisfactory, it was sufficient to unite the people, and every patriotic person at once became vigilant in the cause of Liberty.

Three or four times during the year the Connecticut Assembly was called together. It enacted almost every law required for the public defence, and some laws that might well have been left off of the statute books. The Governor and Committee of Safety were empowered to act in the interim and the assembly finally closed its sessions in December.

In the meantime the Massachusetts Colony, with its Committee of Safety, had organized a series of operations against the enemy, and military officers in the service of the various colonies marched into that state at the head of their respective troops. These forces were sufficiently numerous, twenty thousand in all, and fairly well equipped, but lacking a supreme commander, they fought the battle of Bunker Hill under circumstances which could not fail to lead to disaster.

Then Washington was appointed by Congress as commander-in-chief of all the armies, and proceeded to Boston where he soon brought the undisciplined troops into order, and efficiency, to be afterwards adopted by Congress as "a Continental Army." While this was going on, the Congress at Philadelphia prepared their celebrated "Declaration of Independence," to which is attached the signature of Lyman Hall of Georgia, who was born in Wallingford, a nephew of Rev. Samuel Hall of New Cheshier parish. A short time before this document was promulgated Congress had ordered the arrest "as a virulent enemy of this country," of Governor William Franklin of New Jersey (son of Benjamin Franklin, then the agent of the American Colonies in Great Britain). Governor Franklin was sent under guard to Governor Trumbull at Lebanon, where his parole was taken, and then he was brought to Wallingford. He remained a prisoner under surveillance here for some time, and was then allowed to reside in Middletown. At this latter town he became very disagreeable; wrote disrespectful letters to the governor, was locked up without pens, ink and paper and finally sent to Litchfield jail.

On the 5th of July the "Declaration" was read to the army at New York. That night, an equestrian statue of King George, located at the Bowling Green, was upset, and its nose chopped off by some of the "Sons of Liberty." Having found out that the image of the King was made of lead, the next night it disappeared entirely, to re-appear within two weeks in several bulky pieces at the residence of General Oliver Wolcott in Litchfield, Conn. The General, afterwards Governor, concealed the statue in his orchard, and with an axe he secretly chopped it up; conveyed the lumps into his kitchen, where his sons, and some other reliable patriots moulded the melted lead into bullets. There is a record in the Governor's handwriting of the number of cartridges made by the patriotic young women of Litchfield, whose names are mentioned, and whose labor was cheerfully given, during many weeks; affording them and their lovers all the fun and frolicking of a corn husking. The cartridges were made up in packages of a dozen each, and altogether 42,088 bullets were returned in salutes to his majesty's soldiers, frequently accompanied by remarks informing the enemy what a good king he was to furnish his colonies with so much ammunition!

We believe the young people of New Cheshier parish enjoyed themselves equally well in patriotic diversions. There were spinning bees, and knitting contests; and there is no doubt a variety of sports were indulged in which resulted in sending needed supplies to the army, and there is every evidence to show that not until this year was the "turret" of the parish church sufficiently strengthened to bear the strain of the 450 pound bell which was "voted" and perhaps purchased two years before.

On the 21st of January, 1777, a town meeting was held at which it was voted to supply "Tents" and other "Utensills for the army," and the selectmen were instructed to obtain whatever might be desirable for the use of the soldiers that had gone into the army. At this meeting it was also "Voted—that all Regular Prisoners that shall be stationed in Town: that the Famelys where they are kept: shall not allow them to goe about or abroad without License from the Heads of said Familys." To this vote is added "A true Record. Test. Caleb Hall Town Clerk." There was a special meeting held on the 31st day of March, A. D., 1777, of the town of Wallingford, which the record says: "was regularly convened in the Parish of New Cheshier." So far as we know, this was the first time in the history of the village that the Wallingford and Meriden people had been obliged to come over here to attend a town meeting; or be "fyned" the usual sum for non-attendance.

It was voted that the town would give a bounty to the soldiers already in the army, and they "Voted that Each Souldier that Engage in the continental service for the Quota of Walingford Shall be paid by the Town the Sum of five pounds Lawful money by the Year for three years unless Sooner Discharged : to be paid the Beginning of each year."

A committee was appointed to take care of the "soldiers families," and a pest-house was provided for the victims of small-pox then prevalent both in the army and at home. Taxes were laid to meet the necessary expense of these town votes.

At another meeting held in Wallingford soon after this one, it was "Voted That the Families of all those who are Convicted of Treason or Inimical to the States of America and the Heads of all the Families that have absconded to Lord How, they and their Family shall be removed to Lord How. "It was also "Voted that the selectmen of the Town Secure the Estates of all those persons that are Inimical to the states."

In Wallingford and in the Parish of New Cheshier there were some of these people. Abiathar Camp, the Church of England preacher, was warned out of town by vote, and the selectmen were instructed to see that "Camp Abiathar Immediately depart said town." Zachariah Ives (father of Rev. Reuben Ives), was under surveillance and there is exhibited a pass permitting him to go to Branford but to "return within eight days under penalty." James Benham said he was induced by designing men to enter the British service. He was pardoned on condition of taking the Oath of Fidelity, and was discharged after paying the costs of capturing and imprisoning him.

Then the Oath of Fidelity was administered to all the male inhabitants of the town and its parishes, and those who evaded taking it were made very uncomfortable.

On the 1st of October, 1777, the town "voted to comply with the order of the Governor and council providing cloathing, stockings, shoes, etc.," for the quota of soldiers in the Continental Army belonging to the town and a committee was appointed for the purpose. Jeremiah Atwater declined to serve.

Some of the items in the town accounts show that small sums of money were paid to sundry widow women who knitted stockings for the soldiers and other sums are mentioned for woollen yarn purchased for the "use of the town, to be improved for the soldiers." Leather was bought for a similar purpose.

At the inception of this war the assembly enacted the "Lawful money" should be gold reckoned at six shillings eight pence per ounce of silver. When they contracted for war materials the following prices prevailed:

Gun barrels, for the troops, each	£ 1.04.00
Gun locks, for the troops, each	£ 1.00.00
Gun stocks, for the troops, each	£ 0.06.06
Bayonets, for the troops, each	£ 0.06.00
Cartrich boxes, for the troops, each	£ 0.01.00
Ramrods, for the troops, each	£ 0.01.00
Leathern belts and hangers, for the troops, each	£ 0.01.06
Total	£ 3.00.00

Or about $10.00 of present money for an outfit.

Minute directions were given as to the construction of those articles. The length of gun barrels, the bore, the locks, stocks, ramrods, etc., were to be made as ordered in the schedules given out. The same articles when sold by the makers "to particular persons" (that is at retail), cost about one-third more. Afterwards a contract was entered into for "gun locks in quantities of fifty at ten shillings each, (each gun lock to have the name of the maker stamped upon it), and perhaps the prices were also reduced upon gun barrels, stocks, etc.

A considerable bounty was offered by the Assembly to all who manufactured "good" gun barrels, gun locks, bayonets, cannon, and other war materials, the state establishing its own powder mills and offering a bounty for sulphur and saltpeter. Non-commissioned officers' swords were sold for 85 cents, while a bayonet cost $1.00 in our money. A drum with sticks and belt sold for $4.35. A fife for the army cost 45 cents; axes for the army cost 80 cents; a large copper kettle $6.00; brass kettles $3.50; large iron kettles $3.00; small iron kettles $2.00; fry pans 40 cents; knives 20 cents each; skillets 60 cents. A "knappech" for the army cost 80 cents; an army blanket was $1.50; a large homespun blanket cost $2.50; a yard of "blanketing cloth" was 70 cents; a yard of linen cloth was 50 cents; and "whitened" or cotton cloth "tent cloth" was the same price. A "broad coat" for the army $4.25; a uniform coat $3; a "waistcoat," long flaps, $2.00; pair of leather "britches" $4.25; "cloath britches" or small clothes $2.50; mittens 25 cents; stockings, all long ones, 88 cents; pair of boots $2.50; shoes $1.00; making "a pair of britches" 85 cents; making uniform coat $1.00; making a "waistcoat" 60 cents; making a "broad" or overcoat $1.50. The pay for spinning was 15 cents a run; and for weaving 18 and 20 cents a yard. For knitting a pair of stockings the old ladies got eight pence or 12 cents; onions for the army 20 cents a peck. Powder per pound at the state mill was about 85 cents, and lead fluctuated from ten cents to twenty cents per pound. Cartridges were made by dropping a lead ball in the bottom of a roll of coarse paper, then filling the paper with powder, and twisting up the open end. When the soldier loaded, he bit or tore off the twisted end of a cartridge, poured some of the powder into the priming pan of his flintlock, and then dumped the rest, followed by the paper and bullet, into the barrel of his gun. This he rammed down and was ready for the enemy. Flints usually cost two pence each, and were inspected very closely and a premium of £10 was offered for saltpeter manufactured from materials found in the colony.

The prices here given have been reduced to the money of our time on the basis at which "provision pay" and "Spanish pieces of eight" or "milled dollars" were quoted. These silver coins were recognized as about the equivalent of an ounce of silver, generally reckoned at six shillings sterling, hard money value. "Congress money," so-called, was first issued in 1775. It was made a legal tender, but it soon began to depreciate, so that in 1780 £40 of it was only worth one of the "Spanish milled dollars." The state bills of credit, issued by Connecticut (under an act providing for a sinking fund), were of much greater purchasing value than "Congress money" in the town of Wallingford and the parish of New Cheshier, while the "state money" of the other colonies was at a discount proportionate to the amount issued and the understood chances of eventual redemption.

.For a year or two, the Wallingford people took the state bills readily at their face value, but by the time men were enlisted for "three years, or the war," the state money had dropped considerably below par; and the most stringent enactments of the Connecticut Assembly could not prevent its greater depreciation as compared with the ounce of silver or "provision paye."

In fact the gold and silver coins of this period were dealt in as "merchandize." The golden guineas, half guineas, and quarter guineas, very thin and of light weight, issued during the reign of George III. were bought and sold in the American colonies by weight. The silver coins used were also reckoned and valued in ounces worth more or less than the mint stamp, according to circumstances and the supply or demand.

On the 4th of December, 1777, the town of Wallingford held a meeting to dispose of "Eighty one and a Half Bushells of Salt, brought from Boston by the selectmen and set off to Wallingford * * *

"Voted, to divide ye parish of New Cheshier to have their parts by their List * * * Parish of Meriden by their List * * *"
Men were appointed to receive the salt, "every £1000 in the list" to be accounted "one Hed" in the salt division which Oliver Stanley was authorized to make. Two weeks later it was "Voted, The wives of the soldiers in the Continental service be clear from paying the Bounty rate for the soldiers."

"Voted, To sell enough salt to pay for bringing it from Boston and the remainder be distributed to Soldiers Familys and poor of the Town."

The Continental Congress had submitted to the Assembly of the Colony of Connecticut its "Articles of Confederation and Perpetual Union." This document was discussed at a "Regular" meeting and an adjourned meeting held in Wallingford January 20th, 1778. At the first meeting a committee had been appointed to consider the plan and report. This committee was composed of Samuel Beach, Reuben Atwater, and Timothy Hall, on the part of New Cheshier parish, and Samuel Street, David Hall, Caleb Cooke, Andrew Andrews, Deacon Ebenezer Cowles, and Deacon John Hough for Wallingford and Meriden. This committee, after due deliberation, reported at the adjourned meeting some "Instructions to Col. Street Hall and David Brooks, the representatives from Wallingford in the Assembly." These "Instructions," which were drawn up by Samuel Beach, one of the committeemen from New Cheshier, cover several pages of the town records. While it agrees in the main with the plan proposed by Congress, it "instructs" the representatives of the town to present its "Dissent" to the English article, which related to the method of "Levying taxes, and the proportion to be paid by the different colonies." The committee suggests to the Assembly a substitute, for the eighth article, and its report was unanimously adopted in town meeting, spread upon its minutes, and a copy ordered to be sent to the town's representatives at Hartford. It is noteworthy that the Wallingford "Dissent" was virtually adopted by the Assembly; and the Connecticut Representatives in Congress did not assent to all the "Articles of Confederation" that had been submitted. They were amended and re-amended until later on, the "Constitution of the United States" was duly ratified.

At this same town meeting in Wallingford, the vote on "Salt" was reconsidered, and a vote directs "the remainder of said Salt, be sold at public vendue"; also "Voted. That no man has Liberty to bid at said Vendue that is not an Inhabitant of this Town, and that has not taken the oath of Fidelity: and that no man shall buy more than halfe a Bushell of said salt."

At another meeting, in 1779, it was voted "that the selectmen should view the old Powder house and repair the same, or otherwise build a New One to put the Town stores in." The bounds between Farmington and Wallingford were to be perambulated, and New Cheshier men put on the committee; and then, at another meeting, it was voted to agree to the settling line between the "towns of Wallingford and Southington" which had been incorporated a town in October, 1779.

On the 26th of June, 1780, while the town of Wallingford and the parish of New Cheshier were holding other important meetings, the town "Voted, that whosoever Demands more for any Marchandize Labour, or any other article than He or They shall Demand in Hard Money, or shall refuse to receive or Pass the money lately emitted by the General Assembly of this state for any greater Discount than he or they would for Hard Money:: He or They shall be deemed as trampling on the Publick Faith and we will withdraw our Commerce from him and Esteem him unfriendly to his Country. Voted in the affirmative. Test, etc."

Such a declaration had seemed to be necessary by the difficulty in collecting taxes, which were exceedingly onerous. Constables were allowed extra pay when they succeeded in gathering in any of the overdue rates, and many complaints were made against the laws passed by the Assembly "fixing by law, the market prices of the very necessities of life"; which were impressed by the authorities for the use of the soldiers, who were thus protected from any very great disturbance of values, while the speculators or "inimical persons," accumulated stores of needed articles and greatly enhanced the prices to those who were compelled to buy for their own subsistence.

It does not appear that the Legislative authority was able to check these irregularities to any great extent, and so the people themselves took up the matter and in this way sought to better the condition of things. It is possible they obtained some relief, and no doubt the traders were taught many severe lessons before they realized fortunes during these troublous times.

In December of the year 1779 the inhabitants of New Cheshier parish again discussed the desirability of trying once more to secure town privileges, and at an adjourned meeting held December 16, 1779, in New Cheshier, "Voted to Petition the town of Wallingford to Set of said Parish a Distinct town. Voted Reuben Atwater and Samuel Beach Esquiers and Timothy Hall: to Present a memorial to the old town for to set off said Parish for a Distinct Town." The meeting adjourned "to ye last Monday in ye Present Desember 2 o'clock ye afternoon."

This vote was carried by the Committee to the town of Wallingford. The further proceedings are best told in the following extracts from the records:

At an annual Town Meeting in Wallingford Dec. 21st Anno Domini 1779.

Whereas the Parish of New Cheshire by their agents brought their memorial to said Town that the Society of New Cheshire might be made into a Distinct Town with such priviledges as the General Assembly shall see cause to Invest them with as other Towns are Vested with in this state.

At an adjourned meeting of the Inhabitants of the Parish of New Cheshier held on "ye 18th day of April 1780 being convened::Voted to accept ye Doings of ye Committy appointed to assertain ye Line Between ye town of Wallingford & ye sosity of Cheshier::Now petitioning to be maid a Destinct Town.

"Voted that the Sosity will prefer a memorial to the General Assembly of this state in their present Session or in their sessions in May next to be A Destinct town:with all the Privilidges and Immunities as other towns in this state are Vested with.

"Voted Samuel Beach and Reuben Atwater Esquier agents to Transact for said sosity in Petitioning the Honorable General Assembly for Town Privilidges Mr John Peck was afterward added to this committee.

"Voted that our agents that are chosen to Prefer A Memorial to the Present Honorable General Asembly of this state::in this Present session or in May next::shall have Power to imploy Counsel if they think Proper."

This committee from New Cheshier at the May session presented to the Legislature a copy of the votes taken at the town and parish meetings and a petition stating that "the town is nearly 18 miles long, has a tax list of £50,000 contains half the lands, and half the inhabetants, and would grow to be wealthy if relieved," etc., etc.

This petition was favorably acted upon and an Act of Incorporation duly passed.

The Act of Incorporation says:

"Upon the memorial of Samuel Beach, Reuben Atwater and the Rest of the Inhabitants of Cheshire * * * *" It then enumerates all the important parts of the foregoing agreement between the Town of Wallingford and the Parish of Cheshire, gives the latter parish the name of the town of Cheshire.

It then provides for Cheshire to furnish "Soldiers in the army of the united states, in the same way as other towns."

Gives Wallingford Probate Jurisdiction

Cheshire to belong "to the 10th Regiment."

and empowers a Justice to grant a warrant "for" a town meeting which shall be holden sometime in June 1780 whe nsaid town is to choose town officers as other towns now choose in the month of December.

"May 1780" Passed in Lower House

Test Jedediah Strong Clerk

Concurred in the upper House

Test Geo. Wylls Secty

By this act the Parish of New Cheshier became a full grown town, and it would be ungracious not to remember those men, who, in the early days of the "Villiage" served without pay in the offices to which they were chosen by their associates. The dates upon the following list indicate generally the year each name first appears, the length of service was sometimes short, but in many cases men were kept in office year after year, until they finally gave up from old age or infirmity.

It is not to be supposed that this business, so important to the people of Cheshire, occasioned the natural phenomena that occurred during this session of the Assembly of which a reliable account (that of Dr. Dwight) says, "The 19th of May, 1780, was a remarkable dark day. Candles were lighted in many houses. The birds and chickens went to roost. The legislature was then in session at Hartford, and an opinion prevailed that the 'Day of Judgment' was at hand. The Lower house, unable to transact business, adjourned, and a proposal had been made in the Council to adjourn. As usual the members seperately expressed themselves.

"When Colonel Abraham Davenport of Stamford (grandson of the Rev. John Davenport, 1st minister of New Haven) was called upon, he replied. 'I am against an adjournment. The day of Judgment is either approaching, or it is not. If it is not, there is no cause for adjournment: If it is, I choose to be found doing my duty. I wish therefore that candles may be brought.' "

There is no evidence that it was by the light of those candles that the finishing touches were given to the act incorporating the town of Cheshire, but they were close enough to the time for the circumstance to be remembered in this connection.

The names of others who were active men in the Parish have been given elsewhere.

The important business of getting themselves invested with "Town Privileges" no doubt furnished the inhabitants of Cheshire with business enough for the time being. While they were providing for the soldiers, their home affairs had to be attended to, and accordingly they lost no time in having their first town meeting, as provided for by the Assembly. They bought a thin record book of seventy-five pages, and on the fly leaf Mr. Samuel Beach writes under a heading of "Oaths of Fidelity," "Names brot from Wallingford Records," a list of 54 names, of which the following are not on any previous list:

Reuben and Zealous Bristol, John and Benjamin Beecher, Warren Benham, Samuel and Obed Doolittle, Simeon Grannis, Edmund Goodyear, Isaiah, Jonathan, Andrew Jr. and Ebenezer Hulls, Reuben and Merriman Hotchkiss, Asa and Rufus Hitchcock, Rufus Lines, Isaac Bowers Moss, Elias Norton, G. Gift Norton, John Peck Jr., Reuben Preston, Stephen Parker, David Rice, Samuel Talmage, Samuel Tuttle, James Upson, Thomas Umberfield and John Williams.

There was no doubt a full attendance at the "First town meeting," which was probably held in the church building.

We have no record of any glorification on this occasion. The people were too much in earnest to indulge in anything except a prayer by Rev. John Foote, and the business of electing their town officers. The only evidence we have of their first enjoyment of town privileges is in the following record of

THE FIRST TOWN MEETING.

Voted in said meeting that the second Tuesday of December hereafter Shall be the day for the Town meeting to be attended in the Town of Cheshire at one of the clock after noon.

Voted—That the selectmen Erect a sign post as soon as may be upon the Cost of the Town.

This first town meeting had to be supplemented by another, held two weeks later (June 26th, 1780), at which it was "Voted—That the selectmen shall see that the soldiers which are Drafted and are to march to-morrow morning be provided—Each man with a horse.

"Voted that Miles Hull, Nathaniel Bunnil, and Robert Martin and David Hitchcock be a Committee for hiring the soldiers to fill up the Continental Army for the term of three years or Dureing the present war.

"Voted that the Town would Give to Each soldier which shall Inlist for three years, or During the present war to be paid Equivalent to silver at six shillings eight pence per ounce, the sum of twenty shillings per month Dureing the time of their continuance in Service—To be paid Annually.

"Voted That any that Inlist as before mentioned and are in want of Bounty money, the Selectmen shall hire money for that purpose."

The General Assembly of Connecticut at its October session passed an act requiring all town authorities to "classify its inhabitants," and at a town meeting held in Cheshire, November 15th, 1780, It was "Voted that the Town will Divide into classes for filling up the Continental Aarmy," and

"Voted that Major Reuben Atwater and Samuel Beach Esqr. be Committee to ascertain the number of men now in the Continental Service and to class the Inhabitants of the Town agreeable to the act of the general Assembly."

The regular Town meeting was held on the second Tuesday of December, 1780, at which town officers were appointed for the year ensuing. Fifteen men were chosen for a school committee this year.

This completes the first six months of the existence of Cheshire as a town; and during this time the people had imposed upon themselves taxes at the different meetings, in all amounting to twelve pence in the pound, besides providing liberal bounties, etc., for the soldiers. This tax of twelve pence would be equivalent to a tax of about five cents on the dollar at the present time. In revolutionary days such taxes were more onerous because of the difficulty in collecting debts, or raising money on anything not actually required for daily use or subsistence.

On the 2d day of January, 1781, another meeting was called which considered the joint action had by Cheshire and Wallingford in filling the army quota of the two towns; and appointing Oliver Stanley an Agent "to apply to His Excellency the Governor, and Council of Safety for the Details of the Continental Army and compare the same with the details from the said towns." It was also voted to reconsider the vote "for classing the Town" to fill up the army, and in lieu thereof the town voted "To lay a tax of three pence Lawful money, to be paid in silver or other money Equivalent for the purpose of Raising men for the continental army and the states guards," and it was "voted also that the several militia captains be a committee for the purpose of hiring said men."

On the 15th of April, 1781, another meeting was called, at which Captain Miles Hull and Captain Amos Hotchkiss were chosen "to repair to the county committee now sitting at New Haven, for the purpose of Laying Claims to the continentals now in service Belonging to this Town," and at the same meeting "Robert and David Hitchcock were appointed a committee for the purpose of hiring the additional Number of Men now to be raised for the Defence of the Coast at Horse Neck." Another tax was laid to meet the expense. Two months later, on June 27th, 1781, a town meeting was called "to Lay a tax of Four pence, Lawful money, on the pound; to be paid in Beefe cattle agreeable to the Act of assembly," etc., etc.

Men were also to be hired "for the three months of state service," and "for three months' service in the Continental Army." For this purpose the tax laid was "to be paid in silver or grain at market prices."

The meetings held in Cheshire during this year, were substantially the last at which the town was called upon to vote for men and army supplies. In September, 1781, the traitor, Benedict Arnold, attacked and burned New London. There his infamous career culminated with the unnecessary massacre of nearly every man who defended Fort Trumbull which had been surrendered. One of Arnold's darkest deeds of murder and treachery was done almost within sight of the city of his birth and upon natives of his own state.

The military companies of Cheshire were put under arms, and some of the men were detailed to New Haven, where they were on duty when the glorious news came "by express" to New Haven that on the 19th of October, 1781, the entire British army under Cornwallis had surrendered at Yorktown.

This good news was not telegraphed or telephoned to the people of Cheshire. It came to this town as if upon the air. It was known in Philadelphia, then in New York; Boston got the news a few hours before New Haven learned it. All over the country cannon belched, bonfires blazed, and church bells rang. The war was virtually over and everybody rejoiced.

During this war, the several colonies had a total of 231,791 men of all grades employed. Connecticut sent 31,939 and New York 17,781 men, a few more than half as many as the Connecticut colony; while Massachusetts sent 67,907 men or nearly one-third of the entire army. Connecticut sent the next largest number, and lost about 5,000 militia men either in battle or by wounds and illness, exclusive of those in the regular Continental army.

In the account which follows will be found the names of those men who went from the town of Cheshire, and the services they rendered, as nearly as they can be ascertained. This town during the war was so much a part of Wallingford and Meriden that its particular inhabitants are not easily identified.

Perhaps at some future time its roll of honor will be made up, and another, and, it is to be hoped, a handsomer monument be set up to their memory; which should be perpetuated to the latest generation of Cheshire inhabitants.

FIRST CALL, 1775.

The inhabitants of Wallingford, Cheshire and Meriden were aroused to the fact that hostilities had actually begun by the news which reached New Haven Friday, April 21st, 1775, by an "Express" sent from the Massachusetts Committee of Safety, informing the Connecticut committee that "On Wednesday, April 19th, 1775, a detachment of English troops had marched from Boston to Concord to sieze military stores at that place."

This is designated as the "LEXINGTON ALARM" and it created great excitement. General Wooster, in command of the militia at New Haven, issued orders to his subordinate officers to hold themselves and their commands in readiness to march at the shortest notice.

¹A letter from Hartford dated Sunday, April 23d, 1775, says: "All in motion and equipped here, with a hundred rounds of ammunition, and twenty days' provisions."

James Lockwood, the military secretary of Gen. Wooster, writing from Wallingford Monday, April 24th, 1775, says: "Colonel James Wadsworth of Durham was over at this place yesterday, and has ordered twenty men out of each company of his regiment. Some have gone, and others go this morning. Country beyond here all gone."

When the "Lexington Alarm" of 1775 came to the town of Wallingford, that town held full jurisdiction over the Parishes of New Cheshire, Meriden, and part of a parish near Northford. All the male inhabitants over the age of sixteen and under the age of fifty of the town of Wallingford and its parishes were liable to serve in the various trainbands or militia companies called into action by the military authorities of the Colony.

Whether the men called out for military duty lived in the town or in the parishes they were of one community, and either by marriages, or family relationship were so closely connected in a majority of instances that fathers living in Wallingford had sometimes four or five sons and perhaps fifteen or twenty nephews living in some one or the other of the parishes. The mothers, too, had perhaps as many relations living within the limits of the town or in its parishes. Because of this intimate connection of most of those who had been born and brought up in the town or parishes of Wallingford, it seems proper to make its Revolutionary record complete by giving the names of all who were called upon to serve in the war, without any other designation than the statements that these men belonged either to Wallingford, New Cheshire, or Meriden.

The men in the Wallingford company of Captain Isaac Cook are credited with "eight days" under arms, except Sergeant Ephraim Chamberlain and fifteen men, who are credited with "thirty-four days." The captains and officers are credited with from "ten" to "sixteen and eighteen days." The men and officers in the Wallingford company were:

It is not believed that these two companies went much farther than Hartford in their seven and eight days' service.

*Men marked with a star served 34 days.

A foot note to the official record says: Samuel Kilbourne renders an account for "ferrying across the Connecticut River at Hartford in the Lexington alarm." "Capt. Couch of Meriden, with 18 men, four horses, and one waggon." "Also Captain Cook of Wallingford ferried across at the same point."

Both companies were probably recalled very soon, there being plenty of other men from Eastern Connecticut.

There is no record that the Parish of New Cheshier Train band turned out in this "First Call." It was all over too soon, and the men from New Cheshier parish were not needed.

In the next call the New Cheshier men were among the earliest to leave for the New York frontier, and after making a good appearance there, one company was detailed for the attack on Ticonderoga, and part of the others were sent to Boston.

Their terms of service were short, and it is quite probable all were back home by the end of December, 1775, with not a man missing so far as can be ascertained.

The third call which came in June, 1776, took from the parish of New Cheshier, every available man. Rev. Samuel Hall had died in February, four months before the soldiers went away from home, and the church services were held by the Rev. Samuel Foote. It must have been a solemn occasion. This time the men and their wives and children knew that the business of war had actually commenced, and of those who shouldered the muskets, no one knew how many would live to return.

SECOND CALL, 1775-1776.

The First Regiment of Connecticut State troops was recruited by General David Wooster in New Haven and vicinity to serve from April and May to December, 1775.

By request of the authorities of New York, it encamped at Harlem, guarded stock on Long Island during the summer and fall. There was much sickness. Many men were mustered out or furloughed. Some of the companies were detailed to take part in operations on Lakes George and Champlain, Ticonderoga and St. Johns, being afterwards stationed at Montreal and the Regiment adopted as "Continental" under Generals Joseph Spencer and Israel Putnam.

The men who served in the Connecticut Militia, and who were discharged in the Northern Department November and December 1775, from Wallingford, Cheshire and Meriden were as follows: 7th Company, 1st Connecticut "State."

Amos Austin	Samuel Johnson 2d
Ira Bartholomew	Nathaniel Kimberley

Note—The enlistment rolls of these companies are missing. On the discharge of the men in this regiment in Dec. 1775, General Wooster organized and recruited in New Haven county a provisional regiment to serve until the spring of 1776 and about 150 men from various regiments enlisted, but their names have not been ascertained.

The Seventh Regiment Conn. troops raised by order of the assembly July, 1775, Col. Charles Webb of Stamford, recruited in Fairfield, New Haven and Litchfield counties.

Its companies were stationed at various points along the sound until Sept. 14th, 1775, when at the request of General Washington the regiment was ordered to Boston until expiration of its service Dec., 1775. Re-organized as "Continental" by Col. Webb for service in 1776.

The officers and men from Wallingford, Cheshire and Meriden, who belonged to 2d Co., 7th Regt. were:

Archelaus Allyn	Samuel Culver
Enos Brooks (not Zenas)	Isaac Doolittle
Corporal	Street Hall, Capt of 2d Co.
Reuben Bristol	Street Thaddeus Hall
Samuel Bunnell	his son, age 13

Note—Capt. Street Hall was afterwards appointed a colonel of the 19th Regiment and Lieutenant Commander Titus Moss (of New Cheshier) was promoted to the command of the Co.

THIRD CALL, June to December, 1776.

The Fifth Battalion, James Wadsworth's Brigade, Colonel William Douglas, of Northford, Conn.

This Battalion was raised June, 1776, to re-inforce Washington's Army at New York. It served in the city and on the Brooklyn front. It was at the battle of Long Island Aug. 27th, 1776. Retreated from New York Aug. 29-30th, 1776, was with the militia at Kips Bay, 34th St., East River, at the attack on New York Sept. 15th, 1776, and retreated at the battle of White Plains Oct. 28th, 1776. Time out Dec. 25th, 1776.

Officers from Wallingford, Cheshire and Meriden.

Ambrose Hine, 2nd Lieut. of 1st Co., afterwards promoted, parish of New Cheshire.

John Mansfield, Ensign, of 6th Co., afterwards promoted.

Dr. Jared Potter, Battalion Surgeon, afterwards served elsewhere.

Joseph Shayler (Shaler), Ensign, 2nd Co., afterwards promoted.

The 7th company, Captain Nathaniel Bunnell, of this Battalion, contained nearly all the officers and men from Wallingford, Cheshire and Meriden, except those who were in Bradley's Battalion with Captain John Couch of Meriden.

Additional records of many of our men, who served short terms in these two battalions will also be found in pages that follow the "Third Call," after which the serious business of the Revolutionary war began, and we may well believe that men who went from the parish of New Cheshier at the beginning of the war for the temporary defence of their state continued to serve to the end of the struggle for Independence.

It is to be regretted that we have no list of the casualties, for in this year of our Independence it seems to be in order to remember our Revolutionary soldiers.

THIRD CALL continued, 1776.

Col. Philip Burr Bradley's Battalion ordered to be raised in May, 1776, to serve until December 1771, for the general defense of the state, was stationed during the greater part of the summer and early fall of 1776, at Bergen Heights and Paulus Hooks, now Jersey City. In October it moved to the vicinity of Fort Lee, N. J. In November most of the regiment was sent across to the New York side of the river to assist in the defense of Fort Washington.

The Fort was captured Nov. 16th, 1776, with the entire garrison and many of the Connecticut men, who had gone to its assistance were taken prisoners.

The 4th company in this Battalion contained the following officers and men from Wallingford, Cheshire and Meriden.

Street Hall, of Wallingford (nephew of Rev. Samuel Hall), was a captain in the 7th Regiment commissioned July 6th, 1775. Discharged Dec. 19th, 1775. Re-entered the service in 1776, and was appointed Lieutenant Col. commanding of the 19th Continentals under Col. Charles Webb, of Stamford.

Nathan Hale, who was executed "as a spy" at New York Sept. 22d, 1776, was a captain of one of the companies serving under Col. Street Hall.

Note—In 1779 the rank of Colonel was discontinued and that of Lieutenant Colonel Commandant conferred on all who were appointed to Regiments serving under higher officers.

Devan Berry of W., 2d Lieut. of 6th Co., Swift's Battalion, served with Bradley's Regt. at N. Y., Bergen Heights, Paulus Hook and from July to November, 1771, on the "Ticonderoga Expedition."

Col. Seth Warner's Regiment, 1779-1781, 8th Connecticut Line. Raised by Congress at large, fall of 1776 and early 1777, served in the Northern Department, Bennington and Saratoga, Forts Anne and Fort George. In Oct., 1780, enemy came by Lake Champlain. Capt. Chipman sent a force from Fort George. It was overwhelmed and nearly all killed or taken prisoners. The following from the Conn. quota as it stood in 1780, reduced by discharges and casualties. Disbanded January 1st, 1781.

Sergeant Major John Luddington, of Wallingford, appointed April 1st, 1780; taken prisoner Oct. 11th, 1780; exchanged before January, 1783.

*Names marked with a star were taken prisoners at Fort Washington.

Col. Moses Hazen's Regt. called "Congress Own," served in main army, was engaged at Brandywine, Germantown, Monmouth and at siege and surrender of Yorktown, Va. One full company enlisted in Conn., largely in New Haven county. This is from a nearly complete roster:

Seth Smith, Corporal, Wallingford, Jan. 1st, 1777; Corporal April 15th, served to end.

Charles Heaton of Wallingford, Jan. 1st, 1777, to end of war.

Daniel Humiston, of Wallingford, Feb. 25th, 1778, to end of war.

Thomas Jones, of Wallingford, Jan. 1st, 1777, to end of war.

THE CALL FOR THE WAR.

Upon the return to Connecticut of the survivors of the men whose names were given in the last lists, the Connecticut assembly, the Committee of Safety, and the War Governor, Jonathan Trumbull, at Lebanon, determined to equip a number of Connecticut Regiments and enlist in them all those men who were willing to serve for three years or the war.

This action brought into service the men from Wallingford, Cheshire and Meriden who actually endured all the privations and sufferings of the next six years.

In the following lists will be found some of the eight months' men and some of the militia officers and men who defended Connecticut towns when they were raided by the British, but the majority of those enumerated enlisted for three years or the war. Those who were at the final surrender at Yorktown or upon the Roll of February, 1783, may be called the Wallingford, Cheshire and Meriden "veterans," most of the others, unless otherwise accounted for—having probably died in the service.

SIXTH REGIMENT CONNECTICUT LINE—"1778-1781."

Recruited mainly in New Haven county, camped at Peekskill, N. Y., in the summer of 1777. Frequently detached for service along the Hudson river. Served under General Israel Putnam; wintered 1777-1778, West Point, Connecticut huts; summer of 1778 with main army under Washington at White Plains, N. Y.; wintered 1778-79 at Redding, Conn. In 1779 served along east side Hudson river. One company detached for the storming of Stony Point July 15th, 1779; wintered 1779-1780 at "Morristown huts." In 1780, served on both sides of the Hudson river. On discovery of Arnold's treason, ordered to West Point; wintered 1780-1781 at "Connecticut village," opposite West Point, and was there consolidated in the formation for 1781-1783.

Names of the officers and men from Wallingford, Cheshire and Meriden.

Men marked with a star (*) were at the surrender of the British at Yorktown, Va., Oct. 19th, 1781.

David Atkins, enlisted April 10th, 1777, to Invalid Corps, July 4th, 1782.

FORMATION OF THE CONNECTICUT LINE, 1781-1783.

Eight regiments reduced to five regiments, went into winter quarters opposite West Point, N. Y., half a mile from the Hudson river between two high mountains. Here they erected huts. The orders read, "Each hut must be carried up square. Not less than six feet high. Rafters 9 feet long from eaves to ridge pole." This was called the "Connecticut village." Allen writing from there described the place as "not quite out of the world."

Abraham Stanley, Sr., Capt., 10th Regt.

Thomas Shephard, Capt., 19th Regt.

The names of the privates who turned out or served has not been ascertained. From Cheshire two men were killed, viz:

Eldad Parker, July 6th, 1779.

Aaron Russel, son of Nicholas Russell, July 6th, 1779.

And some were wounded who belonged in Wallingford.

General David Waterbury of Stamford, State Brigade, 1781. raised 1781 for defence of Horse Neck (Greenwich) and coast to New Haven inclusive, drafts from militia. In July it joined Washington who was encamped at Phillipsburgh, N. Y., near Dobbs' Ferry, and for some time was on the Westchester, N. Y., line.

HOME GUARDS—1776-1777.

Four battalions were voted by the Assembly, to join the army near New York to serve until March, 1777. They did not march out of the state, but remained in part on the Westchester border, under General Wooster. The record is not clear as to the service of these troops.

The Wallingford, Cheshire and Meriden men mentioned are:
 Colonel Commandant, Thaddeus Cook, of 2d Battalion.
 Amasa Hitchcock, 2d Lieut. of 2d Company.

William Law, 2d Lieut. of 4th Company.
Benjamin Fenn, Jr., Ensign of 4th Company.

The record of the privates is not given. These officers were all residents in the Parish of New Cheshier.

The 10th Militia Regiment called under arms at the Danbury raid April 25th-28th, 1777, composed of men from Wallingford and Durham. In addition to

Col. Thaddeus Cook, of Wallingford (parish New Cheshier).

Lieut. Colonel Isaac Cook, Jr., of W. (parish New Cheshier).

Major Reuben Atwater (Resigned May, 1777, known as of New Cheshier, collector of minister's rate, parish New Cheshier).

Captains John Couch, Ambrose Hine, Jesse Moss, Stephen Yale

No doubt privates from Wallingford, New Cheshier and Meriden were there.

By order of the assembly, 1781, a provisional regiment "to be ready to march on short notice."

Ensign Joseph Royce of Wallingford.

John Davis, of Wallingford, enlisted Dec. 27th, 1779.

Samuel Culver, of Wallingford, an ensign in Colonel Hooker's Regt., was a prisoner of war from June 29th, 1779, to January 2nd, 1781.

Elisha Bishop of W. or M. Reported taken prisoner at Fort Washington, Nov. 16th, 1776.

At Fishkill in the month of October, 1777, a sum of money called "Bounty" was paid to the officers of a Regiment of Militia from Conn. under the command of Colonel Jonathan Baldwin of Waterbury.

From Wallingford, Cheshire and Meriden.

Captain Ephraim Cook £24, Cheshire.

Lieut. John Hough £20.

Captain Caleb Hall £22.

Captain Jesse Moss £17, Cheshire.

Lieut. Abraham Stanley £14.

There is no record of the privates who were under these officers at that time. No doubt more than one hundred men went from Wallingford.

NAVAL RECORD, 1775-1783.

Captain Giles Hall of Wallingford under orders of the assembly chartered and commanded the Brig "Minerva," then at Middletown. She carried forty seamen and forty "mariens." There was trouble with the crew, and she was not of much service to the coast defence.

Some Revolutionary records and receipts found on the files in the Probate Office, Wallingford:

"Recd of the selectmen 2 ps and $\frac{3}{4}$ rs (2 $\frac{3}{4}$ pounds) Gun Powder out of the town stock. Also 64 Balls and 12 flints. Afterwards $\frac{1}{2}$ pound Powdr and 2 flints for five men detached to goe to Greenwich

I say recd by me Abraham Stanley

Wallingford Ct 14th June 1779 Capt."

Appraisement of arms carried by men belonging to Captain Abraham Stanley's Co. Sept. 9th 1779.

Roswell Beach gun £32

gun cartrich box £3.12.00

Blanket belonging to Joel Austin £3.12.00*

*A memorandum says "Stephen Beach for Ebenezer Moss":

There is very little upon the Wallingford records connected with the Revolutionary war. The muster rolls and officers' account books were probably kept by the men themselves, originals or duplicates being sent to the "war office" at Lebanon, Conn.

Dr. Davis in his History of Wallingford published in 1870 gives some additional names, which he says were "found in contemporaneous records, manuscript or printed," and he says "a very few have been added on the testimony of descendants, whose accounts the author deemed trustworthy."

Abner Andrews, lost the use of an arm; Silas Bellamy, died of yellow fever (?) Oliver Collins, Daniel Crane, Lamberton Clark; Joash Hall, was paid for a horse killed under him at Danbury raid April 25, 28, 1777; Enos Hall, Isaac Hall, Jr., Lieut. Commander of 3d Co. in 1st Regt. Light Horse from Oct. to Dec., 1776 (assembly in 1783 ordered this company to be paid), George Hall, killed in army in 1791; Ambrose Hotchkiss, Josiah Merriam, Asahel Merriam, Daniel Roberts, Elihu Yale, captain.

Two negroes were in the war from Wallingford, one, named "Chatham Freeman," was a slave belonging to Mr. Noah Yale, whose son was drafted. Yale offered Freeman his freedom if he would go as a substitute. He did go, returned home, became free and his descendants are now living in Cheshire and Wallingford. The other negro named "Black Boss," was a slave of Abel Curtiss. He also returned from the war.

Dr. Davis says also that the following persons from Wallingford enlisted in 1776 in the 5th Conn., commanded by Col. Philip Burr Bradley, of Ridgefield, Ct.

Samuel Abby, Asahel Deming, Thaddeus Ford, James Francis, Jonathan Hall, Jr., Jairus Wilcox, Francis Wilcox.

And in another place he gives the names of Benajah Rice, Daniel Atwater (probably Samuel), Asaph Cook, Lieut. Samuel Hart (whom we know was from Durham), and Lucian Tuttle (probably Lucius). We think some of the names given by Dr. Davis were not original enlistments from Wallingford, Cheshire or Meriden; but the men may have been residents of these towns at some time, because no other record of them, as Wallingford men, is shown.

Mr. E. R. Brown, of Cheshire, exhibits the pension paper of Enos Bunnell, of Cheshire, who enlisted at Durham under Capt. Arnold, served from Sept. to Dec., 1775, was at Crown Point and on returning was re-enlisted by Stephen Rowe Bradley* (an aid to General Wooster), marched to New York, remained there the winter and spring of 1776, when he was verbally discharged. Enos Bunnell says: (He was born in Cheshire May 15th, 1753). "In his company was Ira Smith, of Prospect," and two others from Cheshire whose names appear in our list, viz: Moses Tuttle of Prospect and Gideon Bristol of Cheshire.

Ephraim Atwater, died in camp, 1776, no date.

Bethuel Brooks, killed in battle, 1777.

Levi Bunnell, died in camp, 1777.

Eliab Hall, died in camp, 1776.

Son of John Hotchkiss, died in camp, 1781 (probably Joshua Hotchkiss, son of John).

Dr. Amos Hull, died in camp, 1776.

Asa Ives, died in camp, 1776.

Titus Ives, died in camp, 1776.

William Merriam, killed in battle, 1776.

William Monrow, died in camp, 1776, Aug. 18th.

Cæzar, "negro," died in camp, 1777. He belonged to Major Thaddeus Cook.

Son of Enos Tyler, died in camp, 1777. (This was probably Reuben Tyler, son of Enos.)

Joel Parker, died in camp, 1776.

Some of these names are not to be found in the military documents filed at Hartford. It has, however, been ascertained satisfactorily that most, if not all, of them served in the war, and were not camp visitors.

The census of 1840 gives the following pensioners as living in Cheshire:

*Stephen Rowe Bradley was born in Cheshire, had just graduated from Yale College, subsequently moved to Vermont and was U. S. senator from that state for 16 years.

Samuel Talmage, age 80, enlisted as drummer at Stratford.
Susannah Durand, age 77.
John Field, age 81.
Stephen Parker, age 81.
Lydia Clark, age 87.

In 1840 the following Revolutionary pensioners were living in Wallingford and Meriden:

Mabel Allen, age 75.
Marlin Buel, age 81.
David Barnes, age 76.
Jonathan Bartholomew, age 85.
Hannah Davidson, age 74.
Jeremiah Hull, age 77.
Andrews Hall, age 81.
Ruth Hall, age 74.
Fanny Henry, age 73.
Ichabod Ives, age 81.
Catherine Merriman, age 82.
Anna Tyler, age 78.

Living in Meriden, 1840.

Elizabeth Benham, age 81.
Jerusha Brown, age 76.
Martha Ives, age 85.
Hulda Johnson, age 86.
Amasa Meriam, age 82.
Robert Smith, age 83.
Joseph Twiss, age 79.
Abner Way, age 86.

In 1832 there were 220 Revolutionary pensioners and thirty-nine "Invalid" soldiers of the war living in New Haven county, but we have no means of ascertaining who of these persons belonged to Wallingford, Cheshire, or Meriden, because of a similarity in family names with that of persons residing in other towns.

This additional list, compiled from the names recorded in those that precede it, is believed, errors excepted, to give the names of residents of the Parish of Cheshire who served in the militia, home guards or otherwise during the Revolutionary war.

Elisha (Elijah) Wilmot, Artificer, May 18th, 1780, war.
Total—112.

From this last list it will appear that five New Cheshier men from the north part of the parish were under arms for a few days in Capt. Couch's Meriden Co. and in Capt. Cook's Wallingford Co., on the "Lexington Alarm."

The "Second Call" shows thirteen men on the list, to which might be added those who died in camp while in service—probably twenty men from Cheshier are on the lists of the second call.

At the "Third Call" the officers and men from the parish of New Cheshier numbered forty-one, to which should be added those who served in the "8 months to 1 year call." A total of perhaps 45 New Cheshier men who served an average of only six months during the war.

A longer list of "veterans" shows how many men from New Cheshier Parish came home after the surrender of the British at Yorktown.

In these lists of those who served their country during the Revolutionary period, there are possible errors and omissions, due generally to the incomplete condition of the Military Rolls on file at Washington and in the Adjutant General's office at Hartford.

In many of the applications made for pensions the applicants were old and feeble. They had lived in the "times that tried men's souls," and told their stories to the lawyers, or justices who prepared their papers and filed the record, which in some known instances was at variance with the facts.

The following items of money paid to Revolutionary soldiers are taken from the first book of selectmen's accounts after Cheshire was made an independent town in 1780.

Wallingford, Cheshire and Meriden men of 1776 may not have belonged to the ordinary run of people, and every tale of the Revolutionary war, told by any one of them, or by their admiring "women folks" should not be looked into too closely. If the good people believed the "stories of the war" that were told over mugs of "flip," at the tavern fire, it was sufficient glory for the time being; and a constant repetition at home and abroad doubtless fixed upon the minds of impressionable youngsters in many families, traditions of our struggle for Independence, which the colder and more exacting methods of later investigators, belonging to our Historical Societies, and overhauling judicial records, fail to verify or establish.

Frequently we come across printed tales of heroic deeds, marvelous captures, thrilling escapes, or prison ship experiences and hardships, very circumstantially told, with names, dates and every evidence of its truthfulness apparent to the reader who, on a later investigation, finds that the so-called facts are purely imaginary, and the individuals credited with having gone through those terrible trials, were never connected with them. This is explained by the tendency of many individuals to adopt for their own family glory the daring deeds, and perils by land and sea, of other families who may happen to have borne similar Christian names, made familiar from generation to generation, and transmitted from father to son, or from mother to daughter in almost unbroken lines.

It is a well established fact that a story originally reliable and authentic, when repeated from memory by those who heard it related, is not always an exact reproduction. When this process is multiplied through an indefinite number of people, many of whom may have been long dead, the chances are that the original narrative gets woefully mixed, according to the mental conditions of the persons through whom it has been transmitted to our day and generation.

Our ancestors, who went through the trials and tribulations incident to the eight years the Revolutionary war lasted, and who subsequently struggled with the problem of paying in good money for the destruction that had been wrought; little thought that those who were to come after them, would be erecting monuments to their memory and striving at this day and expending much money to obtain admission into associations, founded upon the evidence that the candidate is, in remote degree, related to one of those brave men who rendered more or less military service to our country in the darkest time of its greatest need.

It will be understood that the History of the Revolutionary War cannot be told here. It must be sought for in other publications and then every reader can connect the men from Wallingford, Cheshire and Meriden (whose names we have given), with some part of the conflict which resulted in detaching the Connecticut Colony from England and making us a free and independent nation.

While the inhabitants of some other towns can furnish many letters written during this war, we are not so fortunate. Only a few such documents have come down to us, but the story told by some of the men and a woman of Revolutionary times is evidence enough of the patriotism and Christian character of the people who lived in this village of ours one hundred and twenty-five years ago.

At the time these letters were written, the Connecticut troops that had been called out were of the militia companies; and were more for a show to the enemy than actual warfare, which, however, was imminent, and soldier life quite as dangerous as being under fire. The following year called into action more fighting men from this town and it is to be regretted we have so little information concerning them.

The first of these letters is as follows:

New York July ye 8 A 1775 honnered parents. After my kind Regard to you I take this oppertunety to Let you no that throu the goodness and marcey of God I am well And In good helth And Alltho my Boddey Is Absent from you yet my heart Is with you And I would have you think of me And pray for me that I may Be kept from Sin And from Sickness And from death And

I hope that God will Return me to you Again In saftey Laden with the goodness of God which time I hope we shall see and Rejoice together. It Is a time of helth In the Camp And has Benn
 All Along Mr Smith is well And desiers to Be Remembered to his wife And to you All I have Nothing Strange to Right to you
 But we Expect to march from heare prettey Soon And whare we Shall go we cant say thare is talck of going to Crown pint And i Beleve that we shall go thare if we go Any whare from hear I would have you Right me A few lines to Let me no how you Are.
 So no more At present But I remain your dutifull And Loving Son til death we part. John gallard

Harlum august the 1 Day 1775

Deare and honnoured parrents. I wold inform you that through the goodness of God I am well in helth at present as I hope that these lines will find you so to. But By the providence God John is not well he was taking to the hospittle yesterday he is not very Bad But he has not Bin well this sum Days But I hope with the Blessing of God that he will git well Before long I have not time to rite so much as I wold be glad to rite But so no more at present But we remain your loving Sons John gaylard
 My ink is poore Silas gaylard

After this letter was sent the Connecticut militia were encamped in the neighborhood of New York until their time was out in November and December, 1775.

The writer then probably came home, and was attached to those of the Connecticut contingent who were detailed to the army then in the neighborhood of Boston. His letter, written at odd times while he was gone, tells the rest of his story.

February ye A. D. 1776. My tale of the townes In going to boston from hartford Bolton Coventry Mansfield ashford woodstock Dudley Oxford Suttan Grafton Westbury Southbury Framingham Sudsbury Westown Waltham Wartertown and then Cam-

March ye 8 A. D. 1776 I was on gard at Casel Pint where I staed one Day and all most too Nites having Nothing But the heavens for a Covering Being very mody and wet and Rained

March ye 9 D. 1776 on Saturday knight there was a very heavy fier from the enemy which continued all knight we loast five men, fore of them was killed at one shot a Nother was killed on the march we picked up the Next Day Nine Hundred and more of there Shot from twenty fore Pounders to six Pounders.

they continued fiering every knight till tusday knight I was on gard they fiered all knight the Bals flied clost too me and Struck all Round us and they fierd no more and they killed no man in all this last time this knight there was one of the Enemy Desarted in a Bote and came to us our Sentrysts shot at him and shot him through his leag and Brought him tue he Brought a long Bote one 150 weat of Sugar and so much corffe and we Reseved him joyfully

March ye 10 Day 1776 the Enemy Began to Sayl out By the Cassel—there sailed a Bout one haf of them Sun or Monday and sailed No more till the 17 Day and then they all sailed of and left Bunkerhill and left there Brest work on the Neck for I se them Leave It and go on bord—there was three Boys Clymed over the Brest work and Run out and Brought the Nuse

March ye 14 D 1776 there was 2 of the Enemy Deserted from there Sentreys and came to us which inform us that the enemy is going a way¹

This letter was written to one of the New Cheshier men belonging to the detachment of Connecticut men sent to re-inforce the army at New York. The writer became a widow soon after this letter reached her husband, if indeed he ever saw it. He died in camp.

New Cheshire September the 1st 1776

Dear and Loveing husband after my (cynd) Love to you be living I take this oppertunity to inform you that I and the rest of the family are well and I should be glad to have these Lines find you So but I Dont expect tha will but I would plead with God to Spare your life and restore you to health a gain and my Desire and prayer to all mighty God is that he will spare in the time of your sore Destress and Deliver you from Sickness and from Death and keep you from sin and if you Live to be cauld in the feild of battle I hope God will shield your head in the Dav of battle.

So I must leave you in the hands of a mercyful God and kind father, who has promised to be unto all who call on him in truth. So Do remember in all your trouble to lift up your heart to God in prayer for your Self that he would spare you in this day of Distress. I have this day had the prayers of Gods people for you and I beg and pray that God will hear and answer but if this parting must be the Last in Life I desire that we may so Live and conduct ourselves in Life that when we come to Dye we may meet in heaven above So no more at present but I remain your Loveing wife Martha Ives. give my love to all my brothers.

This epistle was directed "To Mr. Jesse Preston att New Haven" who was probably serving in the "Home Guard Militia," after the attack on New Haven and while our coast was threatened.

In a box of papers belonging to the first Probate Judge of Cheshire, Hon. Silas Hitchcock, were found the following pension certificates or portions of them which seem of interest enough to be inserted here.

State of Connecticut, County of New Haven, } ss. town of Cheshire Probate District of Cheshire.

On this 23^d day of July 1832 personally appeared before the Court of Probate for the District of Cheshire, in open Court said Court being a Court of Record and having by the laws of this State a Clerk & Seal & now sitting—Aaron Hall a resident of the town of Wallingford in the county of New Haven & State of Connecticut aged seventy-one years the 11th day of November 1831 who being first duly sworn according to law—doth on his oath make the following declaration in order to obtain the benefit of the act of Congress passed June 7th 1832—That he enlisted in the army of the United States in the year 1777 on the 24th day of May of that year—in the company commanded by Captain Stephen Yale—into the Regiment commanded by Col Heman Swift in the Connecticut line—I cannot recollect the number of the Regiment because there was different arrangements made the latter part of my tour & in some cases two Regiments even united into one—Holdridge Lieut Col—Sedgwick Major for 6 or 8 months, after him Woodbridge was Major—Jedediah Huntington Brigadier General of our Brigade—I enlisted into this Regiment & company for & during the term of three years—and I served in the brigade Regiment & company aforesaid—from the time of my said enlistment to the spring of the year 1780—I think the latter part of April, cannot remember the precise day, when I was honerably discharged—Applicant recd a written discharge but he has lost the same—He was born in the said town of Wallingford—Enlisted into the service as aforesaid in that town—and has resided in said town ever since the expiration of his said term of enlistment—He was in the battles of Monmouth and Germantown—the battle of Germantown took place in October 1777—and that of Monmouth on the 28th day of June 1778—besides my other skirmishes—He joined the Army at Peekskill in June 1777—In the latter part of summer or first of September—He was marched through Jersey into Pennsylvania—wintered at valley forge—remained in New Jersey & Pennsylvania untile battle of Monmouth—one of the other winters to wit 78-9—wintered in Reading Point—and the winter of 79-80 wintered in New Jersey and during that winter crossd the ice with Lord Stirling—to Staten Island and did nothing after all the trouble—He was dischargd at Springfield, New Jersey—He is now in his seventy-second year—and from being crippled was unable to do anything for ten years past—And he is the only surviving soldier of the Revolution who served for three years now residing in said town of Wallingford—and he is induced to make this application by a sense of what is in justice & right due to him for services rendered his country in the hour of her peril—for which he never recd an equivalent—He hereby relinquishes every claim whatever to a pension or an amount except the present and he declares that his name is not on the pension roll of any Agency in any state—That his name was placed on the pension roll of the agency of the State of Connecticut—under some of the pension Laws passed since the late war (he cannot say which) and after receiving his pension for once or twice—He was stricken from the roll on account of his property & the papers proving my title to a pension can be found in the records of the Department

* * * * broke up headquarters and moved to Rye were we remained thro the winter and when our Regiment was discharged—the Regiment stationed with or near us was Col Eno's—I cannot mention his under officers We had no other brush that winter with the enemy—In this tour there were fourteen persons went with me from this town of Cheshire and not one of them except myself now survive—the Reason why so many went from here was that 2d Lieutenant Wm Law was from this place—We were verbally discharged on the last day of March 1777 & I have no documentary evidence & know of no person whose testimony we can procure who can testify my having served—My next tour was about 3 weeks—then volunteered under Capt Ephraim Cook—Col Russell of Branford commanded the Regiment—we proceeded to Danbury from thence to fishkill where Genl Putnam took command of us & proceeded with us to Redhook—at Rhinebeck we overtook a militia Regiment & at Poughkeepsie we were united to & ordered to fall in the rear of a Regiment of Regulars and with their troops we advanced up the river at the same rate with the enemy's fleet to Redhook when news reached us that Burgoyne had surrendered—The fleet had takd about & were near out of sight when we got the news—news was brot by two messengers one a quartermaster—who having delivd his dispatches to the Genl gave the following toast and washd it down from his canteen—"Here is a health to the States & the brave Genl Gates—who with courage fought so fine in the year 1777 with the blessing of heaven pulled down the haughty Burgoine." The troops were paraded when the messenger arrived on account of the taking of the enemy's ships—Gen Putnam ordered us a fatigue allowance of spirits & I think put us immediately in motion down towards fishkill where we were dischargd in October 1777—In the early part of April 1778 The Applicant again enlisted into a company commanded by Jotham Curtiss captain of Waterbury—David Hitchcock of Cheshire Lieutenant & Joseph Smith of Durham Ensign—into the service of the United States for the term of one year—Whether we were State or U. S. Troops I know not—or whether attachd to any regiment or not I am ignorant—The duty of our company consisted in guarding a portion of the Sound—After our enlistment we were marched to New Haven and joined the remainder of the company—Capt Curtis with a detachment of one half the company was stationed at West Haven & Lieut Hitchcock with another detachment including those he had raised in Cheshire was stationed at East Haven—and Seargant Crittendon of Durham County of Middlesex belonging to same company was stationed at the fort at New Haven with a corporals guard & men enough in the fort to handle the guns—we remained in this position thro the summer of 1778 & fall untill after thanksgiving which in this State is now & was then the last of Novr—I am able to fix the time of my enlistment at the first of April by my mothers tombstone—She is there stated to have died the 28th of April 1778 & on her death I was sent for to return home & had a furlough of four days & I think we had then been on duty nearly a month & I am confident I kept thanksgiving there—during the season we were frequently aroused by the enemies boats, they having possession of Long Island—When we were enlisted it was uncertain whether we should be detained the whole year and we were discharged I think about the first of December 1778—In reply to the queries put by the Department the applicant states that he was born the 2d day of February 1760—His father served his apprenticeship in Wallingford & married there & the applicant thinks he was born there—But if so his father & family removed to this place Cheshire when he was quite young & before his remembrance & so has resided here ever since—2d My father kept a family record in his bible—but when he died, I having a good family bible my brother Josiah took my fathers & before his death a separation between himself & wife took place & since that affair nothing has been heard of the family record or family Bible—This separation took place about 6 years since—I know not that there is any other record of my age unless it be found in the seating of our house of public worship which is made according to age & in which I am the next tier after the octogenarians—3 in the town of Cheshire County of New Haven State of Connt

4th the first time I was called into service I cannot say whether I was drafted or volunteered or what it ought to be called. The whole Regiment proceeded as I have stated to New York under orders from the commanding officer, upon what I call an alarm. The 2d time I was called out was very much in the same way as the first. I had joined the militia horse & the company to which I belonged as well as some if not all the others in the regiment were all ordered out & I went in obedience to the orders of my commanders—on every other tour of duty I was called out after enlistment except when in pursuit of Burgoine this time I volunteered—5th is answd in body of declaration as far as I can answer with certainty 6th I never received more than a verbal discharge & never was more than a private 7th My nearest neighbour and most intimate acquaintance is Samuel A Foot Esq Chairman of the Committee of Pensions in the U. S. Senate—Dr Thomas T. Cornwell—Burrage Beach Esq—Justice Peace & Notary Public Charles Shelton E. A. Cornville Benajah Ives Esq Justices of the Peace To these Gentlemen I refer as my neighbors & acquaintances for my character & their belief as to my having service in the Revolution To the two last terms served I have a witness & his deposition as witness this acclamation.

CHAPTER SEVEN.

CHURCH DISSENSIONS—ESTABLISHMENT OF CHESHIRE ACADEMY— BUILDING OF THE FARMINGTON CANAL.

At the time the town was incorporated nearly all the inhabitants were farmers, but the value of their property had been greatly reduced by the exigencies of the war, compelling many of the able-bodied youth to follow the army, where they endured hardships and privations unfitting some of them for steady labor at their previous occupations.

When these men returned to their homes and resumed active work upon their farms, they were unable (owing to the insufficient supply of working animals) to much more than provide for their own necessities, and in consequence town affairs had to be conducted upon the most economical basis. It is probably for this reason that the records do not furnish any evidence of the improved condition they expected would result from having cut loose from the parent town of Wallingford. It is in evidence, however, that a necessity existed for "devising ways and means for supporting the town poor" and while we have no record of any previous action, the "Report" of a committee was accepted Dec. 29th, 1783, and we learn from subsequent votes that the "Selectmen are to procure some convenient house where the Town poor shall be supported, and shall provide some person or persons who shall take charge of them."

The poor being thus provided for and better times appearing at hand, on the 30th of March, 1784, a committee was appointed "for the purpose of procuring subscriptions for building a state house in this town; to hold the courts in one-half the stated terms," and at an adjourned meeting held May 10th, 1784, it was "Voted, That the Representatives of this town be a committee to prefer a Memorial to the General Assembly at the session in May; for the purpose of having the Town of Cheshire a half shire town with the privilege of holding the Courts Superior and County Courts—the one-half of their stated terms.”¹

The Connecticut Legislature did not act favorably upon this proposition, nor does it appear that any very large sum of money was contributed by the people of Cheshire towards the project of erecting the town into so important a place as the inhabitants believed it ought to be made.

They did, however, think they were entitled to some of the good things that were being distributed to other towns and so they Voted, That the Selectmen "signifie to the county court that a Work House may be built in this town for the use of the county." It was believed that if such a building was erected in Cheshire, the importance of the town would be enhanced, and many people induced to settle within its borders. Later on it became the settled conviction of the people of Cheshire that work houses were not required in this country, where every able-bodied pauper or criminal could be better employed in tilling the unoccupied land, or cleaning up the wilderness.

It soon became evident that more highways were needed, and so they were voted. One of these votes instructs "the Selectmen to bargain with the owners for a road to the Northwest Corner, in lieu of the one laid out by the County Court."

All the highways and unemployed lands at this time were called "Commons." Cheshire did not own a public green, and it does not appear that the town had any land especially set apart for the grazing of animals in common. The highways were, therefore, the only real commons, and as such, the people from time to time regulated their occupancy. One year it was "Voted that geese well yoked, be free of ye commons." "Swine," also, "sufficiently yoked and ringed, except boars, shall be free commoners in this town." Boars over two months old were to be restrained from the commons under "penalty of 6 shillings" fine to the owner. Sheep were allowed to run at large, but rams were not permitted upon the commons. The following year this was amended, allowing rams to run with the sheep from November to August.¹

It was also "Voted Liberty to have Small Pox by Inoculation, until the middle of May next" and the town granted "permission to have a School District in the North West corner." There was also a vote providing for a "decent carriage and harness for conveying the dead to the Burying Ground."

While town matters were progressing more or less satisfactorily affairs in the Congregational church had not been so pleasant; some members being dissatisfied with the Rev. John Foot's ministrations, petitioned that a Consociation be called to hear and determine their complaints, being fearful that the church was in danger of being "broak to peases by its members going off to other Denominations" and deprecating "the Idea of sapperating & setting up alter against alter."

This petition was signed by nine members of the society and sixteen members of the church. A little earlier, at a church meeting, "sundry members expressed dissatisfaction" with three of the signers of the above petition, "because they had absented themselves from communion, encouraged meetings at a private house and attended such meetings themselves and offered their children for Baptism."

A committee, viz.: Benjamin Hotchkiss, Abel Matthews, Henry Hotchkiss and Eliakim Hitchcock were appointed to "meet and converse" with them on these subjects. Their report says that although they viewed such conduct disorderly and contrary to the covenant, "yet nevertheless as it was a day of Difficulty, controversy & Temptation with them" and they, the committee, being willing to put the most favorable construction on their conduct, recommended to the church and every dissatisfied member that "they hereby do cordially Invite sd members to Return to their duty with sd church; and accept their Return as an Implicit acknowledgment of their Error," so doing and taking part once more in the ordinances to entitle them to be cordially received into their "christian fellowship, watch & care & overlook & forgive as we hope for forgiveness of our heavenly Father." This report was accepted, but as the preceding petition shows, was of no avail; and a Consociation for the County of New Haven was held and both sides fully heard. The decision of the Consociation was that it could not be warranted in dismissing Mr. Foot, and advised the petitioners to exercise "patience and prudence" and try to bring about a reconciliation; if this failed "to set up and maintain worship in a separate congregation."

Three years later these same men petitioned to the General Assembly in behalf of themselves and the "Rest of the dissatisfied

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH, BUILT IN 1736.

Bretheren" in which they told of their former petition and the decision of the Consociation, and their acquiescence in that decision to the extent of worshipping "in a separate congregation," and asked for themselves and their adherents exemption from the payment of any taxes for Mr. Foot's support as "long as they keep a meeting among themselves," averring that they were still compelled to pay taxes for the support of Mr. Foot as well as their "own separate minister." The same date the sheriff of New Haven County, his deputy, or constable of Cheshire was commanded by order of the "Governor & Company of the State of Connecticut" to summon the "Revd John Foot and Benjamin Hotchkiss of sd Cheshire and the Rest of the Inhabitants of said society to appear before the General Assembly" to show cause, if any, why the petition should not be granted. Reuben Roys as constable attests to the citation being "A Trew Coppy."

Evidently the General Assembly granted their request, and for a time this separate society held meetings, as did also a society in the northeast part of the town which called itself the "Street Congregation" but long before Mr. Foot ceased his ministrations both of these societies had ceased "to have even a name," and when Mr. Foot, in 1811, asked for a colleague the request was unanimously granted, and his death in 1813 was most sincerely lamented by an undivided church and society.

From this time on the society seems to have flourished and a new church steeple was built, a bell bought, which it was voted should ring at 9 o'clock at night, and it was also "Voted" to ring the bell "at 12 o'clock in the day from ye first of April 6 months." A few years later necessary repairs were made and the "meting house painted," while in 1795 a committee was appointed to procure "a lighting rod for the steapel and put it up." The next year it was voted that the "Society Committy procure a decent vain for the meeting house and put it up," and also that said "Committy paint the stepel from the Beel to the Top."

Oct. 10th, 1796, the society voted to appoint Andrew Hull and Selden Spencer as agents to the General Assembly to oppose the memorial of Jared Burr and others, and in 1797 the names of George Hall and Stephen Ives were added to this committee. This memorial of Jared Burr and others prayed the General Assembly to be set off from the town of Cheshire as a distinct society "over the next mountain" [Prospect].

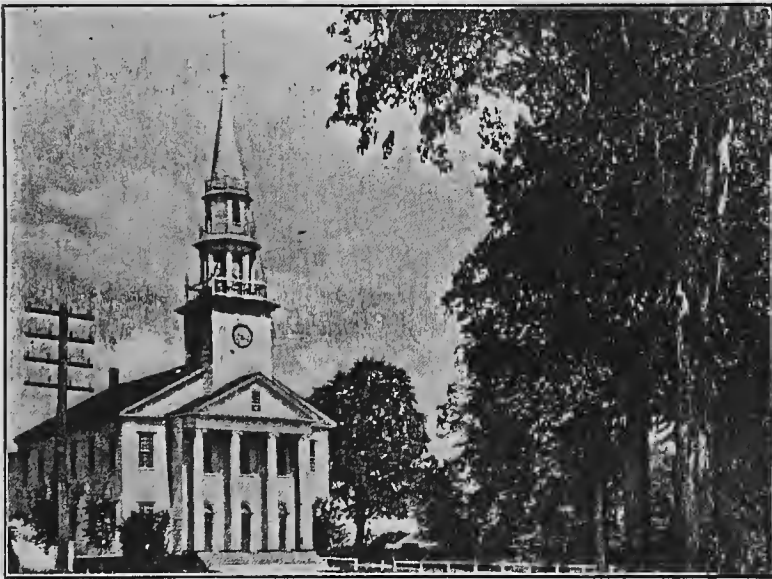

While several members of the old society had joined the Episcopal church (among them being Elnathan Beach), yet in February, 1798, ten persons separated from the "society of Columbia" and joined the 1st Ecclesiastical society of Cheshire, thus keeping their numbers up.

Much interest seems to have been taken in the singing, for in 1801 we find that a vote was passed to devote $60 for the purpose of promoting "Psalmody in 'said society.'" At this same meeting a committee was appointed to receive subscriptions for a "Public Clock" to be placed in the "steeple of the Meeting House."

In 1805 a large seating committee was appointed and it was "desired to Revise the old money that was formerly seated on into Dollars & cents & that the Meeting House be seated on the old money with the addition of two cents four mills on the dollar having Regard to age and decency to be seated on the List."

Some interest in the tenets of the Baptists seems to have been aroused among the members, for record is made of some half dozen joining a society of that faith in Meriden, and later there was some talk evidently of a Baptist church being formed here, for a record in 1815 says that about a dozen of this society say "they mean to join." No further record is found concerning this proposed society, but the old society with undiminished vigor kept on its way, looking well after the spiritual and temporal matters under its control. In 1818 members were requested to deliver stone for the "purpose of enclosing said burying groun"; later posts and 1,000 feet of pine lumber was purchased, and a fence marked out, which it was voted should be painted white; still later it was voted to "Get the bell cast over or exchange it for a new one"; and finally it became necessary to build a new church, so it was voted that a "tax of 36 cents on the dollar be laid, for the purpose of building a meeting house" "on or near the publick square." Later it was definitely voted that it should be placed "on the ground which the association of persons have already purchased & offered gratuitously to the society," or on such part of land adjoining as shall be deemed necessary, belonging to the heirs of Abijah Beach, deceased, or in part on each as expedient "provided a lease can be obtained & least to the society on same terms." It was also voted, March 7th, 1826, "to take down steeple & take out stone & use such parts of old church in the new one as wanted"; and the stipulation made that the basement be done for use the next winter.

The "seating of the meeting house," always a serious matter, was still of such moment that a committee consisting of "one from each school district" was appointed to prepare and report "a plan for seating the meeting house. The minister in charge of the society now was the Rev. Joseph Whiting, a native of Milford, who remained in charge for nine years, the longest period of any after the death of Rev. Mr. Foot in 1813. Mr. Perrine, Mr. Foot's colleague and successor, remained three years and was succeeded by different clergymen hired by the year, until September, 1820. when Roger Hitchcock was ordained (being then 53 years of age), a native of Cheshire, joining the church in 1815, serving as deacon, and being a devoted, active Christian. Unfortunately for the society his ministry was of short duration, his death occurring Jan. 30th, 1823, when again the pulpit was supplied for several years by different persons until the installation of the Rev. Mr. Whiting. From a "Fast Day" Sermon of 1840 we quote the following: "In early times the Sabbath was very strictly observed, both at home and at meeting, the attendance almost universal, likewise there was scarce a single instance of the omission of family religious worship. Here was the secret of primitive success, the religion of the Sabbath and the religion of the family.

PETER HITCHCOCK'S HOUSE.

Built from material taken from the Congregational Churches, and the birthplace of David and Amasa Hitchcock.

When these fell into neglect the church declined, and became reduced. Let retrospection and reflection, my dear brethren, bring you to that 'God who has been your dwelling place in all generations.' "

Keen interest and discriminating judgment was shown by our former townsmen in all questions of the day and we find an interesting record of a town meeting held March, 1794, "for the purpose of taking into consideration the Act of the General Assembly of Connecticut passed October last" relating to the sale of the Western Lands.

Four votes on the matter were passed as follows:

1st—"That we entirely disapprove all measures for accomplishing a sale of said land at the present period. Because—the present troubles in Europe, the probability of their continuance, the increasing emigration to America, the flourishing state of our own country, its prospects and growth of numbers, are causes that must infallibly increase the Worth of the Western District and render it far more valuable to the public at a future, than at the present time."

"Or granting an immeditate sale to be advisable."

"Voted, 2dly That we disapprove all measures for disposing of the whole territory together in an unlocated undivided State; Because a Sale of such a nature cannot but throw wide open the Door to speculation, injustice and fraud, by removing the purchase beyond the reach of ninety-nine hundredths of the people and leaving it accessible only to a few Rich, designing individuals and private powerful companies."—"Or finally, if a sale is at all Adventures to be accomplished, be the mode of Allienation as it may."

"Voted 3dly That we disapprove of the appropriation of the monies to be raised, at least as far as respects a maintenance for the Clergy; Because we believe that Such maintenance not immediately granted nor controulable by the parishioners, but created and perpetuated by the state, will eventually prove detrimental both to pastors and people. To the people by weakening, perhaps dissolving the Cement that arises from Dayly contributing to the support of the Pastor and the consequent care & controul over his conduct. To Pastors, by relaxing, perhaps destroying, their dependence on the people and the consequent motives to a faithful and conscientious discharge of their Duties; and in these ways, by implanting in the state the seeds of religious, and perhaps of Civil Tyranny."

"And 4thly Voted that we will, with a patriotic firmness, make use of all prudent means for counteracting the measures that are laking to expedite the sale of the Lands alluded to and for obtaining a repeal of the Act appropriating the avails: And 5thly Voted that Messrs. Elnathan Beech, Saml Andrew Law & Rufus Hitchcock be a Committee to confer upon the premises with such Committees as have or may be appointed by other Towns."

"Voted, That the Town Clerk cause the preceding resolutions to be made public."

Another town meeting held in December of the same year has the following record :

"By the Inhabitants of Cheshire legally convened in Town meeting on the Second Tuesday of December, 1794. The contemplated sale of the Connecticut Lands lying West of Pennsylvania and the appropriation of the avails arising under consideration—Voted, firstly, that we adhere to our sentiments publicly communicated in March Last, still continuing averse to all measures tending either directly or indirectly to effectuate any immediate Sale of The Connecticut Territory westward of Pennsylvania ; Because the tranquility of the United States, the convulsion of Other Nations, the increase of domestic populations, the influx of foreigners, the prospect of Peace with the savages, the probable surrenderry of the Western ports by The British, and the rise of landed property, especially of New Lands from New Hampshire to Georgia, form a concurrence of circumstances which force upon us a conviction that the unlocated Lands of Connecticut will be at a future period incomparably more valuable to the State than at the present time."

They also voted that they were still opposed to the plan of selling the "whole of our Western territory in a body" because they believed that "whenever strict Economy shall suggest the expediency of a sale" the "wisdom of the state" would be shown by disposing of lands in Townships or other small quantities, thus rendering purchases accessible to the general public and "preventing the accumulation of enormous Wealth in the hands of overgrown land-jobbers & greedy speculators."

And again they reiterated their dislike of the proposed appropriation of the funds "because we * * believe the same appropriations to be an introductory step towards establishing a certain & permanent civil provision for a certain & peremanent Sacerdotal order, a provision which in other ages & Nation's has * * * proclaimed that the downfall of liberty & pure Religion was hastening after, and of course a provision against which the experience of ages warns us to guard with a jealous eye."

They were in a special manner "Opposed" to the Bill passed by the upper house of the Assembly at the preceding session in October which directed an absolute division and distribution of the Funds to the several school societies "according to the sum of their Lists at the time of distribution" without making provision for the inequalities which must inevitably arise, and, also opposed it because they feared the "principle" might "be finally Lost." Affirming that they deemed it the duty of the several towns in "their corporate capacities" to express their sentiments on the subject, they voted that Andrew Hull, Elnathan Beach and Andrew Hull Junr should be a committee to confer with committees from other towns upon "prudent & proper measures" to prevent these measures from being carried into final effect, and voted also that the "Town Clerk procure the insertion of the preceding votes in the Connecticut Journal."

This was a memorable year in Cheshire's history, for beside the question of the "Western Land Sale," which so excited our forefathers, came the project of establishing an "Episcopal Academy" here.

On the 15th of February, 1792, at the Episcopal Convention at East Haddam, it was "Voted that several of the Clergy make enquiry of their neighboring towns and see what can be done towards erecting an Episcopal Academy and report to the next convocation" and in 1794 the Convention appointed a committee to prepare an address pointing out the importance of establishing an Episcopal Academy. The progressive spirits of Cheshire had seen in this proposed school an opportunity for Cheshire, and under date of June 29, 1794, we find this:

"At a meeting of the subscribers for building an Academy in the Town of Cheshire Col^d Reuben Royse was chosen Moderator and El^d Beach Clark

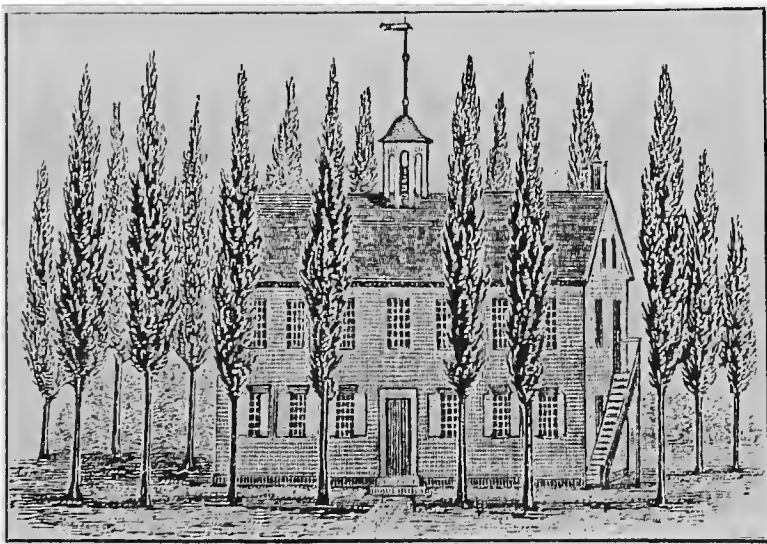

"Voted that a Committee be chose with full powers to contract with the Committee of the Episcopal convention to convene at Samuel Bellamys in Hamden on the first Day of July next—

"Voted That Messrs Andrew Hull, Will^m Law Elnathan Beech, Andrew Hull 2 and Rufus Hitchcock be the said Committee & that they be requested to attend upon the Committee of sd Convention & agree upon terms respecting said Academy.

“Test Eln Beech Clerk.”

The Rev. Dr. Mansfield of Derby was chairman of the next annual convention, at which time the subscription papers were returned and proposals received from Wallingford and Cheshire. It was decided that a committee of nine should receive proposals until the first of July following, at which time they were “to meet at Maj. Bellamy’s tavern, Hamden, and establish the Academy in that town they should consider most eligible.” The Rev. John Bowden, S. W. Johnson, and Ashbel Baldwin were appointed the committee to frame the Constitution. Cheshire was decided upon and the proprietors pledged a building for the reception of the students.

It should be mentioned, however, that after the committee had consented to the propositions from Cheshire and decided to establish the Academy in this place, the Rev. Mr. Bronson, afterward Dr. Bronson, then a young clergyman, opened a school pursuant to the wishes of the Convention in a small building that stood opposite the residence of Dr. Elnathan Beach.

The cornerstone of the new building was laid with Masonic honors April 28, 1796, the Rev. Reuben Ives making the address. In June, 1796, the annual convention was held in Cheshire, when the Constitution for the Academy was adopted and a Board of twenty-one trustees elected. Dr. Bowden was unanimously elected principal and accepted. The building completed in autumn, 1796, at a cost of £702 lawful money, was conveyed by the "Thirty" proprietors, with the grounds, "To the Trustees," who subsequently enlarged their lot by purchase.

The history of this venerable institution is so well known that only a brief resume need be given here.

Dr. Bowden, the new principal, was the son of Major Thomas Bowden, and brought to his new field his pupils from Stratford. From the first the school met with success; systematic attempts for an Endowment Fund were started, and in May, 1801, the Trustees' petition for incorporation was passed. It was reported in that year that the funds amounted to $3,000, and that the school "generally had in course of education about sixty persons."

The first hint of trouble came with Dr. Bowden's resignation in 1802; he was followed by Dr. Wm. Smith, and it was during his incumbency that the Legislature granted a lottery for $15,000, by which the sum of $12,000 was secured; and also during his term that a petition for a charter was presented to the General Assembly. The school languished under Dr. Smith, and in 1806, his resignation was accepted and Dr. Tillotson Bronson was elected his successor, remaining in charge until his death in 1826. Among Dr. Bronson's assistants were the Rev. Mr. McDonald and the Rev. Asa Cornwall.

It was during his term that young ladies were admitted as students, many coming from different towns to take advantage of this somewhat rare opportunity.

The failure of the "Eagle Bank," by which some of their precious funds were lost, and the refusal of a charter for a college were noteworthy incidents during these years.

Other of the early principals were the Reverends Henry Mason, C. T. Cruse, Bethel Judd and Allen C. Morgan. Amid these many changes the school continued to hold its own unique place, partly a college, partly a theological seminary, and at all times sending forth into the world graduates who have become prominent and honored citizens of our common country, thus justifying the faith of those "Thirty Proprietors" who gave liberally of their scanty store that this good thing might come to their beloved town.

We print herewith some interesting records concerning the Academy:

"Whereas, at a meeting of the Presbyters, Deacons & Lay delegates of Protestant Episcopal church of Connecticut holden at St. Peter's church in Cheshire," a constitution was adopted for the "Episcopal Academy established at Cheshire."

Article first provides that it shall be known by the "Name of the Episcopal Academy of Connecticut."

Article second that the government of the Academy shall be "Vested in the Hands of twenty-one Trustees," of which number were to be the Bishop of Connecticut and the "Principal" ex-officio; the other trustees were to be chosen by the Convention, seven of whom were to be "Presbyters of the Protestant Episcopal Church," the remainder "Laymen, and may be chosen from any denomination of professing Christians."

Article third provides that the trustees shall continue in office "during good behavior," and upon complaint may be "displaced by a vote of the convention."

Article fourth directed that "Nine of the Trustees shall form a Board" to meet at the Academy four times a year, "which shall be at the quarterly examinations," other meetings could be held if thought necessary when a "majority of the Trustees shall require it"—public notice to be given in one or more newspapers of the state at least two weeks before said meeting by an "advertisement signed by the Bishop, who shall be President, or Principal, who shall be Vice-President of the Board of Trustees."

Articles fifth and sixth provided for the filling of vacancies among the trustees and that the principal "who shall always be a Presbyterian in the Protestant Episcopal church" was to be elected by the Convention and the assistants by the Trustees, with a proviso for their removal, if found necessary.

Article seventh provided that "The English Language, Philosophy, Mathematics and every other Science" usually taught in colleges should also be taught here, "likewise the Dead Languages" (Greek and Latin) ; and when the finances permitted an instructor in French was to be procured and a "Library and Philosophical Apparatus." "Female Education may be attended to under this Institution by such Instructors and under such Regulations as the Trustees shall direct."

Article eighth directs that the principal shall use his own judgment about the admission of pupils, the only stipulation being that none shall be admitted who cannot "read the English language intelligibly" and that any student wishing to pursue a certain line of study, could do so without pursuing "any other studies of a different nature"; lecturers eminent in Divinity, Law or Physic were to be procured "provided Funds be provided for that purpose."

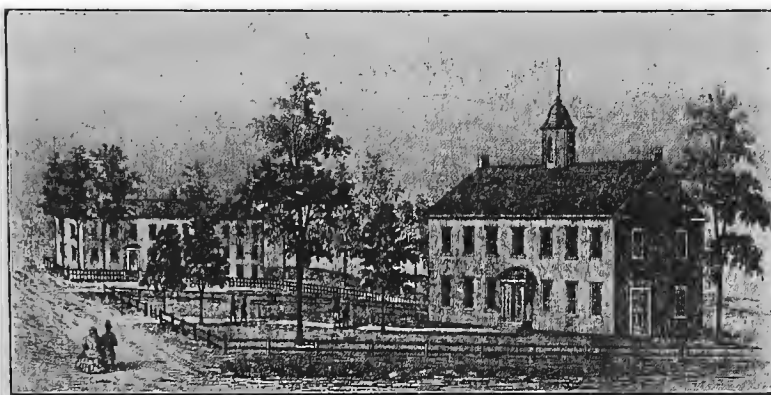

Ninthly, "No Bye Laws of the Academy shall compel the Students to attend Public worship, but at such place or places as their respective Parents or Guardians shall direct."

Tenthly provided that the adoption of these articles by the Convention made the constitution of the Academy and that they were to be "Subject to no Alteration or revision, but, by a Vote of the Convention."

The twenty-one Trustees chosen at the convention which adopted this constitution were: The Reverends Richard Mansfield, of Derby, Abraham Jarvis of Middletown, Bela Hubbard of New Haven, Ashbel Baldwin of Stratford, Philo Shelton of Fairfield, Philo Perry of Newtown, Reuben Ives of Cheshire and the Honbl Jonathan Ingersoll of New Haven, Mr. John Morgan of Hartford, Samuel William Johnson Esq. of Stratford, William Heron Esq. of Redding, Eli Curtiss Esqr of Watertown, Samuel Woodruff of Wallingford, Wm. Judd Esq. of Farmington, Mr. Samuel Hull of Derby, Saml Andrew Law Esqr., William Law Esqr., Andrew Hull Esqr. and Colo Andrew Hull of Cheshire, the Bishop of Conn. and the "Principal of the Academy for the time being."

It was about this time that the deed of the land and building was given these trustees by the following gentlemen "all of Cheshire"—namely, Andrew Hull, Andrew Hull Jr., William Law, Elnathan Beach, Rufus Hitchcock, Gould G. Norton, Benoni Hotchkiss, Selden Spencer, Lucius Tuttle, Israel Bunnell, Moses Moss, Thomas Atwater, Amasa Hall, Stephen Ives, Jared Bishop, Amasa Lewis, Jere Brooks, Dimon Barnes, Reuben Bronson, Reuben Roys, Ezra Doolittle, Ebenezer Hale, Elisha Cowles, Abraham Ives, Israel Tyler Jr., Benjamin Hull, John Beach, Charles C. Hall, Edward Goodyear, Amos Doolittle, Zechariah Ives, Hezekiah Todd, Caleb Todd, Isaac Moss, Samuel A. Law and Asa Blakeslee, they being "deeply impressed with the importance of establishing Literary Institutions in particular of aiding, supporting, and carrying into effect the Institution Established by the foregoing Constitution and Influenced by other good causes & considerations."

CHESHIRE ACADEMY BUILDINGS ABOUT 1850.

The land and buildings were to revert to the said Grantors or their heirs were the trustees to appropriate said "Land, Building and appurtenances to other purposes," or "shall prescribe a mode of Instruction materially variant from that pointed out by the foregoing constitution" or "shall remove said Academy from sd Town * * or shall cease to Occupy and Improve said Land and Buildings for the purpose of an Academy unless it be a temporary removal or cessation occasioned by the Invasion of a foreign Enemy, a Civil War, an Epidemical Sickness or other incidental necessity" "And Furthermore" the said grantors reserved to themselves and heirs "a Right to use the upper room of sd Building for the purpose of singing or keeping a Singing School in the same."

The early history of the Episcopal church was so closely allied for a time with that of the Episcopal Academy that it seems quite fitting to insert here something of its later life and influence.

The Rev. Mr. Andrews, an openly declared loyalist, was in charge of Cheshire, North Haven and Wallingford during the decade preceding the Revolution and until the close of the war. "A man of estimable character, lovable in every respect, and an indefatigable worker," so it is no wonder that we read that the church grew in numbers and in strength—so much so that the church built in 1760 proved far too small and that in 1770 a new church was built. This was forty-two feet square with galleries "and so very high though without a steeple that it loomed up from a distance as if it were a cathedral," while close at hand it presented "a very awkward appearance." At this time the congregation numbered forty-seven families with sixty-four communicants, and eighty-six persons had been baptized by the Rev. Mr. Andrews. It is not recorded that Mr. Andrews' loyalty to his "King" or rather to the vows made at his ordination caused him to exert any undue influence over his people, but it is known that Zachariah Ives was a most decided Tory as was also Amos Doolittle of this town. For a time Rev. Mr. Andrews was under bonds for good behavior and was practically confined to his house. A man of his convictions could not, of course, feel like accepting the new order of things and so with his friend and neighbor, Mr. Scoville, of Waterbury, he removed to the British provinces, living until 1818 in charge of St. Andrew's parish, Nova Scotia. His place here was unfilled and only occasional services held until 1788 when the Rev. Reuben Ives (son of Zachariah) was called to be the rector here two-thirds of the time and "the other third to Bethany or elsewhere," his salary for both places being £75. At this time the parish also agreed to pay a "Propoarshanable part of £220 annually or more for the support of Bishop Sabre" and began to keep records of its parish meetings. Moses Moss and Ambrose Barnes were its first "wordings." David Badger was for a long time its clerk and usually there were four or five choristers elected. Alterations and repairs were made to the church, a pew built in each corner (slips occupied the rest of the building); then eighteen feet was added to the length of the building, a steeple built as high as the deck; soon it was voted to complete the steeple with a spire and

"almost immediately to build a cupola instead of a spire and to finish the inside and to take out the side galleries;" its external appearance was now much improved.

The establishment of the Academy caused several diocesan conventions and ordinations to be held here and the "scholarly men who were principals and assistants at the academy," took great interest in the church and to Dr. Wm. Smith with Mr. Ives we owe it "that this parish was one of the first places in the land in which the psalms and canticles were sung and anthems were rendered"; really "the original home of American church music."

ST. PETER'S EPISCOPAL CHURCH AS BUILT IN 1839.

In 1820 a serious disagreement arose between Mr. Ives and his people (after thirty-two years' service) and he resigned. It was then that the custom began of inviting the principal of the Academy or one of his assistants to serve also as rector of the parish, doing such work among the people as was consistent with the school duties. It is probably for this reason that the history of both school and parish show a decided backward step. This connection continued until 1835, when E. E. Beardsley assumed charge of the parish. Almost immediately a change was noticed and so rapid was the growth and interest that in 1839 the corner stone of the third church, "a substantial brick edifice," was laid, and to him the parish owes its new inspiration of life and encouragement to do the work set before them, that the patience and bravery of their forefathers might not be in vain.

It was in this notable year of 1794 that the town turned its attention to its own school districts and voted "That the doings of the School Committee in Dividing the school Districts be accepted & that the same be Recorded."

These "Doings" consisted in forming fourteen school districts and giving their boundaries, the report being signed by Asahel Hitchcock, Amasa Lewis, Bela Andrews, Lucius Tuttle, Ephraim Hotchkiss, Reuben Roys, Jonth Hall Junr, Josiah Talmage, Amasa Clark, John Williams, Andrew Hull Junr and Diman Barnes, and it was about this time or a little later that the highway question again came up, and at a special town meeting called for and held on Sept. 21, 1795, passed the following: "Voted that the Selectmen be directed to oppose the opening a Road through the Southern part of Cheshire & to stand a Trial at Law if necessary." At this meeting Daniel Hicox was appointed "Surveyor of Highways for the Eastern District;" and in March, 1796, a special Town Meeting appointed Andrew Hull, Jr., Wm. Law, Israel Bunnel, Andrew Hull, Stephen Ives and Lucius Tuttle a committee to confer with a committee appointed by the General Assembly to view and lay out a direct road from the court house in New Haven to the court house in Litchfield.

The town officers elected annually included Selectmen, Constables, "Grandjurors," "Listers," "Tythingmen," Surveyors of highways, whose duties included the collecting of the highway tax of one cent on the dollar (usually); poundkeepers, who had liberty to erect "pounds at their own expense"; Sealers of Leather, Sealers of Weights, Sealers of Measures and the Collector of the State Tax, who usually also collected the Town tax. A vote of the town allowed the "rateable Inhabitants * * liberty to pay their highway tax in Labour."

It seems rather odd in these days to read that Andrew Hull, Burrage Beach, Reuben Roys, George Hall, Israel Bunnell and William Law were appointed a committee by the town "to make a Draught of a bye Law or bye Laws for regulating or restraining geese and swine from Going at large"; and that the "Bye Laws," reported by them to the town and adopted, covering quite two pages of legal cap size, were ordered to be "legally Published." In 1799 it was voted that the "Annual Town Meeting be holden in future, on the second Tuesday of November & that the Selectmen be authorized to warn the same accordingly."

A "Turnpike" from New Haven through Cheshire to Southington was now being talked of, and apparently the project did not appeal to our town fathers for at a special town meeting held in September, 1800, "for the purpose of taking up the matter of the Turnpike Road" "on motion whether this Town will do anything respecting the Turnpike Road—it was Voted in the negative." The promoters of this "Turnpike Road" were not discouraged by the action of Cheshire, for a company was chartered in 1800 and was called the Cheshire Turnpike Co. and shares were taken by Cheshire people.¹ Roads and bridges were to be built by the company and maintained, assessed damages to be paid. Two toll gates were erected, one between Hamden and New Haven, the other between Cheshire and Southington. Commissioners were appointed to inspect the road, and accounts were presented yearly to the General Assembly. When the company had received enough in tolls to repay the money spent with interest at 12 per cent. the road was to be discharged from tolls. The charter was not subject to revocation or amendment by the General Assembly. Tolls were not to be paid by those attending public worship, by funerals, those attending town meetings, military trainings (i. e., members of the companies), those going or coming from grist mills, or by persons going within one mile to or from gate to attend farm business. This turnpike gave great impetus to business; stage coach companies were formed, which did a thriving business; and traffic so increased that the company was finally able to discontinue the toll gates, having received its stated interest, we suppose.

In 1803 a petition and citation from Columbia society respecting the laying out of a new highway came before the town, and Andrew Hull, Esq., was appointed Agent for the town "with discretionary powers"; and at another meeting Burrage Beach was appointed to act with Mr. Hull in the matter. Evidently the idea of having agents to represent the town with full powers to "institute suits at law and to prefer memorials," etc., seemed a wise thing, for we find these same men appointed for that purpose at a town meeting held in November of that year. Committees were now appointed to remove "encroachments" on the highways and also to report on what highways might well be discontinued. In 1805 Ebenezer Hough, Jared Bishop and John Peck were appointed "to view the Ground from the Turnpike road, near the meeting house to the highway which runs by the dwelling house of Joseph I. Doolittle for the purpose of locating a highway between said Roads and to obtain proposals from the proprietors of Lands: and make report to the next annual Town meeting." The determination to keep these highways in proper shape is shown by the purchase soon after of twelve scrapers for work on highways "to be used for that purpose and for no other."

"Floods of Water & Ice" caused much trouble in 1807, for at a special town meeting in February a tax of "one cent five mills on the dollar" was voted to be levied upon the "List of the Polls and Rateable Estate of the Inhabitants & non-resident proprietors of sd Town" for "repairing the Bridges, & other charges." Joseph Platt was the collector of the tax in Columbia Society. In 1808 some trouble arose regarding a highway near Mr. Lyman Hall's and a committee of twelve men was appointed at the annual town meeting to inquire into and report the facts "with their opinion thereon" to some future meeting. "The six last named persons on the aforesaid committee if called out to be at the expense of Mr. Lyman Hall." The town in 1814 voted to lay out a road "from the notch of the mountain near Mr. Jesse Huniston's to intersect the Waterbury road near Mr. Enos Moss's" but Henry Brooks and others petitioned for a special town meeting which was called when a motion was offered to reconsider the "vote passed at the Annual Town meeting" to lay out this new road. Gen. Andrew Hull, Jr., and Amos Baldwin Esq. opposed the motion and after "considerable debate upon the question of order the motion was withdrawn." However, a second motion on the assessment of damages, and directing the selectmen to "open said road in due time" was voted in the negative.

For several years a controversy concerning "the old highway from the Episcopal church * * to the Turnpike Gates," had been waged, and an appeal made by Wm. Law, Esq., to the county court of New Haven, who appointed Messrs. Aaron Bradley, Jared Ives and Russell Pierpont "a committee to examine the old highway and make such alterations," etc. Later this committee reported verbally to the agents of the town that they had made "sundry alterations" in the road and assessed damages to certain individuals—all this was reported to a "special" town meeting which declared that in its opinion "neither public necessity or public convenience" required such alterations and directed its "agents" to remonstrate to said county court, and if necessary employ counsel in the matter. At this same meeting it was reported that some evil-minded person had committed a trespass upon the property of Wm. Law and the following vote was passed: "That this meeting condemn and reprobate the base conduct of the person or persons whoever they may be, or whatever may have been their motive * * * * * who did wantonly and wickedly girdle & thereby destroy a number of valuable apple Trees in the Orchard of Wm. Law, Esq.," and expressing their "most unqualified disapprobation and reprehension of the atrocious deed" voted $50 reward for the discovery of the perpetrator. Later "Jared Ives & others, Reuben Page & others, Jared Burr & others, Stephen Parker and others," prayed for "sundry alterations & new location of highways;" and finally in 1817 the great controversy regarding the changes made by the county court committee was settled by the following vote, namely: "That the Selectmen be empowered to make the road laid out by the county court from the Turnpike Gates to the Episcopal church in Cheshire, either by contract or in the usual method of repairing highways as they shall judge most conducive to the Interest of the Town." Later the Town re-deeded to Lyman Hall land taken from him for a highway and peace reigned once more.

During the following years the road from the "Notch of the Mountain" to the Waterbury old road was widened and improved, a road from Joshua Ives' to Prospect Line laid out, and the highway from the notch of the mountain to Waterbury authorized, and from time to time other highways were opened or the old ones repaired and improved as seemed most for the interest of the town, without very much discussion.

"Road taxes" were paid in money or "worked out," the following scale of prices having been adopted:

For man and team 1.50 per day during spring

Single man .75 per day during spring

Man and team 1.00 per day during fall season

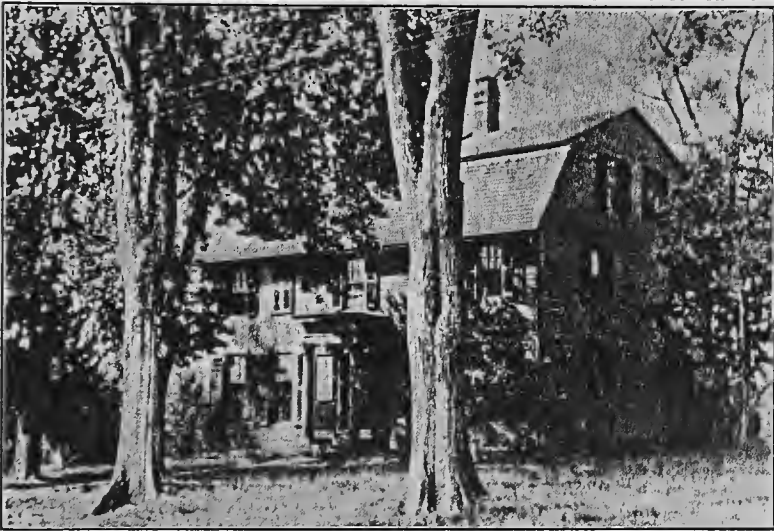

Single man .50 per day during fall season

Other votes of interest passed by the Town during these years were: "That the Letter C be the sealing mark for the Town of Cheshire"; "That the SelectMen shall sell to the Inhabitants of the Town only, the several sets of the Statutes of this state and of the United States, now in their possession; for the benefit of the Town, with the exception of one set of each, to be reserved for the use of the Town Officers, and to be deposited with the Town Clerk."

The amount received from such sales seems not to have been recorded and a fair guess is that few, if any, were ever sold.

In 1817 the question of a "State" Constitution was the topic of the day, and as usual Cheshire was ready with its opinion, and at the annual meeting in November passed the following Resolution: "Resolved, that our Representatives to the General Assembly to be holden at Hartford in May next be, and they are hereby instructed to use their influence to procure a recommendation to the people of this state, to choose delegates to form a Constitution of Civil Government, to be submitted to the People for their consideration and adoption—and the Town Clerk is directed to furnish to each of them a copy of this resolve"—and at another "Special" town meeting held in July, 1818, in pursuance of a "Resolution of General Assembly" "Messrs. Andrew Hull and Charles Shelton, Esquires, were elected delegates to attend the general convention to be holden in Hartford on the fourth Wednesday of August next"; and finally Oct. 5, 1818, a special town meeting was held "in conformity to the direction of the general Convention of the state" (and of which the HON. SAMUEL A. FOOT was Moderator). "When the constitution of civil government for the people of Connecticut, framed by a convention of their delegates, & by their order, signed by the president and clerks on the 15th day of September, 1818, was submitted to the consideration of the qualified voters assembled in said meeting for their approbation and ratification—and the votes being taken by yeas and nays, there was in the affirmative two hundred and one yea's, in the negative twenty nine No's."

THE GOVERNOR FOOT HOUSE.

During these years the town poor had been each year practically sold to the lowest bidder, no one person keeping them all, but different families taking usually one, an exception being made where there was a man and his wife, who were scarcely ever separated. In one or two cases, there seems to have been land which the owners were too feeble to work themselves, or where a widow had only the life use of it, and no money to hire help to work it; in these cases, the Town paid very little for the "keep," expecting those who took care of the land owner to get their pay from the land.

But Cheshire people disliked this method and attempts were made now and then to change. Finally it was voted that the "Selectmen be authorized to make a contract with some person belonging to this town, to keep the whole of the town poor if in their opinion it can be done for the advantage of the town," and in February, 1821, a special town meeting held "to take into consideration the expediency of establishing an Asylum, for the admission of such town poor and other destitute persons as may be judged proper," and to "establish such laws as may be judged proper relative to the persons to be admitted, and for the well ordering and governing thereof," voted to establish such an Asylum, "until the last day of December next" and appointed Burrage Beach, Rufus Hitchcock, Charles Shelton, Jared Burr and Silas Hitchcock a committee "to draft a system of By-Laws" and adjourned until "April next." At this meeting the committee reported such laws for the governing and well being of the town poor as they thought proper and the report was accepted and these regulations, after reading and discussion, "passed in the affirmative."

The town had contracted with Mr. Joel Moss to maintain the town poor for the consideration of $800 from the first day of January A. D., 1821, to the last day of December, 1821, and by these rules he was allowed to employ such of the poor under his charge as were able to labor, in "some work suitable to their respective age, sex and capacity, to and for his own use and benefit"; provided, however, that it met with the approval of the "Agents and Select-Men of the town" whose duty it was to be, to visit the poor once in three months, or oftener, if necessary.

In 1836 at a town meeting held in the "basement story of the Congregational church," it was voted that "the select men be directed to furnish a suitable supply of clothes for the poor at the expense of the Town" and the selectmen were directed to "contract for the support of the poor from Jan. 1837 to May 1st, 1837, and for one year from May 1st."

considered and this vote passed: "That the Selectmen be empowered to contract for the support of the poor in the town not exceeding 16 months, & that whoever contracts for keeping them shall not transfer said contract to any one, but shall fulfill the same himself & said disposal of the poor shall not be at public auction." Finally, many years later, a farm was purchased and a permanent abiding place made for these unfortunate people who had been "put up at auction" and moved with their goods and chattels from one place to another year after year."¹

The time of the annual Town meetings was changed this year (1821) to the "first Monday in October in each year"—and the Representatives of the Town were instructed to oppose the granting of the petition of Levi Langdon and others "praying for an alteration in the boundary line between the towns of Cheshire and Southington," but a short time afterward the town instructed Messrs. Samuel A. Foot and Silas Hitchcock its Representatives to present a petition to the General Assembly for straightening the line between the towns of Cheshire and Meriden.

Again was a "special" town meeting called on the 1st day of April, 1822, with Samuel A. Foot as Moderator. "It having been represented to this meeting that an application will be made to the next General Assembly, to be held at New Haven on the first Wednesday of May next, for the establishment of a Canal, from the tide waters in New Haven to the north line of this state, by Farmington and from Farmington to Berkshire county through the town of New Hartford. This meeting having taken into consideration the subject matter of said application and believing that the laying out of said canal will be highly honourable to this state and greatly beneficial to a large proportion of the people of the same;—whereupon Voted, that this town do consent that the same may be done, and do hereby wholly wave all objections on account of not being cited before said General Assembly."

This canal was built and proved a most successful venture, eventually monopolizing nearly all the carrying trade of this part of the state and Western Massachusetts, and continued in existence until the building of the New Haven and Northampton Railroad, which being built upon the old "Tow Path," has been commonly known as the "Canal Road."

For many years West Cheshire was known as Beachport, in compliment to Richard Beach who owned a warehouse on the canal and was there engaged in business. The building he occupied was a low frame, projecting over the canal basin, and thus permitted the boats to load and unload inside the building. Several owned boats which plied the canal. James V. Fields owned a boat for carrying barytes; Nathaniel Newell a general freight boat; very few of the boats were supplied with cabins.

"Beachport" was a busy place during the days of the old canal; for until the building of the Naugatuck R. R., all products were brought over the hills from the Naugatuck Valley to Beachport for shipment.

Between New Haven and Southington there were twenty-two locks; but between Southington and Simsbury, a distance of twenty-five miles, there were none.

CHAPTER EIGHT.

THE SEPARATISTS—METHODIST SOCIETY FORMED—BARYTES MINES
—SOME OLD ACCOUNTS—ADDITIONAL NAMES OF SOLDIERS.

In 1775 a number of people living on the "West Rocks" desired to have a church society of their own, so those living on the west side petitioned Waterbury, while those living on the east side petitioned Cheshire, but obtained no satisfaction. In 1778, however, a church was built on the Cheshire mountains and called Columbia church or "Society of Columbia" and the Rev. John Lewis was their first pastor; the second the Rev. Benjamin Beach, who remained until 1798. This society was a "strict Congregationalist," allowing "no frivolities."

A deed dated the 26th day of March, 1795, from Abraham Hotchkiss of Waterbury quitclaims for the consideration of six pounds * * * to the "strict Congregational church and people on Cheshire mountain" * * * "for the term of nine hundred and ninety-nine" [years] "two certain pieces of Land lying on Cheshire mountain, one piece containing one acre with a meeting house standing on it, the other piece containing sixteen rods of Land which is at present improved as for burying Ground near by."

"To have and to hold * * * unto the said Church & people to be improved by them in their present Order and if the major part of the people should see cause to have Society lines & set up on the Congregational or Calvinistic Order it is the understanding of me the Releasor that they are stil to hold the same privileges of the house & Land * * * to be undisturbed by me or my heirs & Assigns for the above said term."

This was acknowledged before "John Lewis, Just Peace," and after his signature comes N B "It is the understanding of the above Grantor and Grantee that whenever the people shall think best and do actually get Established with Society Lines then the above named Abraham Hotchkiss is to Receive from the people the sum of seventeen pounds Lawful Money."

The old church building of 1778 faced the north, standing near the sign-post on the north end of the green; it was "rude as a barn, the floor boards not being nailed down and the seats being but slab benches. There was neither pulpit, steeple nor bell in it, and the only fire was brought in foot stoves." The plot of land "improved as for a burying ground" lies between the present Grange Hall and the road on the east of it. There are no tombstones now and nothing to indicate that it was ever used as a cemetery. In 1829 a record of the leasing of this old burying ground was made.

The "Separatists" or "strict" Congregationalists started in Eastern Connecticut about 1740. Their ideas were "That the standing churches were not true churches, but anti-Christ; that hypocrisy was encouraged by them and they could have no communion with hypocrites. They maintained that the church should be pure. They held that the whole power of ordination was in the church. They objected to the pastor using notes, and at the same time praying for assistance in preaching. Because ministers studied their sermons they called their exercises 'preaching out of the head' and declared they could not be edified by it. They maintained that if a man had the spirit of God it was no matter whether he had any learning at all. They believed in special revelations." The first Separatists in Stonington, Conn., elected their first minister by revelation. The result of this revelation was that they "chose, ordained, silenced, cast him out and delivered him up to Satan," all in less than one year. None of these Separatist churches are now in existence.

In 1797 a tract of land, which includes very nearly the present boundaries of Prospect, was surveyed, in order that all living within these boundaries might be taxed for the support of the "Congregational Ecclesiastical Society," the first meeting of which was held November 2, 1797. Besides supporting a church, "a society had charge of the schools and all matters connected with the welfare in general of those living within its boundaries." At their first meetings we find Jared Burr appointed constable, Jesse

Ford grand juror, Robert Hotchkiss tithingman, John Ford lister, Asahel Chittenden, Asa Wilmot, highway surveyors. Also four persons were appointed "choristers on the Lord's day in public worship," and a petition was sent to the honorable Assembly for a "military company in this society."

The Congregational church was organized May 14, 1798, with sixteen who entered into covenant with each other; viz.: Ephraim Smith, Joseph Matthews, Abraham Hotchkiss, Ira Smith, Eben Hotchkiss, Asahel Hotchkiss, Thankful Smith, Lois Matthews, Hannah Hotchkiss, Phebe Hotchkiss, Esther Ford, Mehitable Byington, Damaris Tuttle, Olle Byington, Hannah Doolittle and Jerusha Hotchkiss; soon after this the old "Separatist" society dissolved and many of its members joined this church. In 1799 the land occupied by the parsonage was purchased of Eliphalet Hotchkiss by the Columbia Company; the deed describes the land as bounded upon the west by "Columbia Green and Abraham Hotchkiss, his land and the burying ground."

The Congregational church after its organization continued to worship in the old building for three years, when it was repaired and the old slab benches replaced by the ancient style of square pews. These were twenty-four in number, twelve forming the body of the house, divided by the main aisle, running from the east large double door to the pulpit on the west side. There were also doors on the north and south sides, giving entrance to the side aisles. The pulpit was like a great goblet, hexagonal in shape, supported by a pillar. The steeple was a square structure built on the center of the north end of the house with stairs in it leading to the galleries which extended around on three sides.

In 1800 the church adopted the Saybrook platform and became a member of the consociation of the western district of New Haven county.

Pastors of this church during the years 1798-1827 were: Rev. Oliver Hitchcock, Rev. David Bacon, Rev. Gideon Burt, probably the Rev. Mr. Sanborn, Rev. Samuel Rich and the Rev. John E. Bray; the first Sunday School record is found in 1822 when the church voted to appropriate $5, to be laid out by the deacons of the church in useful books to be distributed to the scholars of the Sunday school according to their proficiency. The first superintendent of this school was G. Mills Hotchkiss; the first teachers Hannah Hotchkiss, Benjamin Hotchkiss and Sally Payne.

A tankard and two flagons were given this church by its sister church in Cheshire during the Rev. Mr. Hitchcock's ministry and a communion service by Deacon Gideon Hotchkiss, one of the most prominent men in the early history of Columbia, and first deacon of this church.

Other family names prominently connected with the early history of this church and society are Smith, Ford, Clark, Tuttle, Tyler, Sanford, Peck, Platt, Payne, Morse and Gillette.¹

As their numbers increased they petitioned Cheshire to allow them to be a distinct parish, and later for town privileges; but, unmindful of its own experience, Cheshire sternly voted to oppose any and all petitions of this kind until on May 1st, 1827, when at a special Town meeting it was unanimously "Voted that this meeting approve of the granting of the prayer of the Petition of the inhabitants of the Society of Columbia, to be incorporated into a town; provided that a disinterested committee be appointed to apportion the support of the Paupers of the town, and that part of the society of Columbia which now belongs to the town of Cheshire, and also that the town of Cheshire shall retain their present right to two Representatives in the General Assembly of this state." No further record of any movement in regard to this important step appears, and Columbia Society at the May session of the General Assembly was incorporated as a town under the appropriate name of Prospect.

After the incorporation of Prospect a new Probate District was formed, May 27, 1829, to consist of the towns of Cheshire and Prospect and the first Judge elected was Silas Hitchcock.

In 1831 Rufus Hitchcock, who had served the town faithfully as Town Clerk from Dec. 11, 1792, until Oct. of this year, declined to serve longer, and it was voted at a town meeting held in Nov., 1831, "That the thanks of this meeting be returned to Mr. Rufus Hitchcock for his correct and faithful discharge of the duties of the office of Town Clerk, while he officiated in said office."

For some time a new religious sect had been holding meetings in the town and many members of other denominations had joined their society, and in Dec., 1832, in Town meeting it was "Voted, That if it should be found that the Town of Cheshire has a good title to the land laying between the Turnpike road and the road running from Amasa Hitchcock's House to the House of Elias Dudley, and that they have full power to convey the same, they then agree to convey to the Society of Methodists in said town, so much of said land as said Society of Methodists may require to erect a house of Public Worship upon." Another meeting for the purpose of considering "the propriety of granting the Methodist Society of said Town the privilege of Erecting a House for Public Worship upon the Public Green" was held a week later, the former meeting having "been considered illegal." At this meeting the petition of the members of the Methodist Society was presented, also the opinion of William Bristol "whether the land asked for belonged to the Town or the Congregational Society"—he having decided in favor of the latter "On motion Voted that this meeting take no order upon the subject."

For a time the Methodists here were included in with other appointments, but in 1834 the membership had so increased that Cheshire was made a separate appointment and a church building was needed; so April 22, 1834, Amasa Preston, Elias Dudley, Joseph Doolittle, David Brooks, William Hotchkiss, Delos Hotchkiss and A. M. Hitchcock were appointed a building committee.

A lot of land centrally located was purchased of Jairus Bunnell, on which was built a brick structure at a cost of $3,000. This was dedicated Nov. 22, 1834, by Rev. Schuyler Seager. During the working of the bartyes mines, the congregation greatly increased and the church and finances were in a flourishing condition; the decrease in numbers caused by the removal of so many families has made the work of the (comparatively) few left much harder; but no diminution of ardor or enthusiasm has ever been noted.

METHODIST CHURCH, BUILT IN 1834.

In 1834 a committee appointed at a town meeting the previous year reported verbally in favor of establishing a Work House or House of Correction in town and recommended the passage of a vote that the dwelling house of Wm. Peck be purchased for this purpose, that the selectmen be the overseers of the same and appoint some meet person to be the "Master and keeper of said Work House"; this vote was passed. This vote was passed a second time in 1835, with the insertion that "suitable cells should be erected at the expense of the town."

But for all this no work house was built, and we find in 1837 that the selectmen were directed to make enquiry and report at the next annual town meeting "the propriety and expense, etc., of purchasing a House & farm for a Work House."

At a special Town meeting held Jan. 16, 1837, it was voted that this Town receive the public deposit appropriated to each town by the Legislature of this state upon the terms specified in said Act; that an agent be appointed by ballot to care for this money; that the half of said deposit money not appropriated for common schools be for the usual expenses, and that "no sum be loaned to any one to exceed five hundred dollars."

The Act of the Legislature spoken of above was entitled "An act accepting the deposit of a portion of the surplus funds belonging to the United States providing for the safe keeping thereof & appropriating the interest arising therefrom for the promotion of education & other purposes." This Act passed by Congress had caused much discussion and ill feeling in the United States—President Jackson did not believe the Government should have a surplus, and urged upon Congress the passage of this Act, which divided the accumulated funds in the United States Treasury among the different states.

Our town elected Edward A. Cornwall agent to receive from the state Treasurer and receipt for this money and during all these years the town has received the interest from its "Town Deposit Fund" without remembering or knowing possibly when or how it came into the Town's possession.

It was also during this year (1837) that the Town voted "to receive the Arms from the state according to an Act passed by the Legislature in 1836, and Benajah Beadle was appointed Commissary to receive and care for the arms; the selectmen were instructed at this meeting to obtain from the commanding officer of each company "his roll for the benefit of the commissary in distributing the Arms."

An additional "Ballot Box" was now provided for representatives and "every voter may put into said Box the names of both representatives on one piece of paper, and said box shall be kept open the same time that the other box for state officers is, viz from 11 o'clock a. m. to 5 o'clock p. m."

The majority of Cheshire's inhabitants were farmers; but many industries flourished also. Wooden bottles or kegs were made, there were carding, dressing and fulling works, grist and saw mills, fanning mills, and tanneries; threshing machines, wagon wheels and tin ware was manufactured; maps and pictures were painted. In 1880, Mrs. Wealthy (Stockwell) Bishop (b. 1786) remembered the long trains of carts that carried the products of this place to New Haven. It has been said that after the completion of the turnpike in 1801-2 it was no unusual sight to see a half mile string of carts wending their slow way with mighty loads of kiln dried grains for shipment abroad.

ENTRANCE TO BARYTES MINE AT GINNY HILL.

The opening of the barytes mines in 1835 gave new impetus to Cheshire's business interests. During the time these mines were in operation, the company opened over four miles of underground tunnels and sunk shafts to the depth of 480 feet, excavating a million and a half square feet of earth and rock. They mined one hundred and sixty thousand tons of barytes, which was sold in the market for about four and one-half millions of dollars. This work gave employment to hundreds of native and foreign miners, who were paid more than two millions of dollars for their labor. For sixteen years the operations of the mine were most successfully managed by James Lanyon as superintendent.

In the latter part of the preceding century and during the early years of 1800 many of Cheshire's younger men started out to make new homes for themselves. Some settled in Vermont, some "out west" (as New York state and Pennsylvania were called), and still later very many went out to Ohio. Titus Smith and his six brothers, Rufus Lines and Friend Tuttle with others went in 1797 to Lawsville, Pa., so called, because Samuel Law's influence was instrumental in causing so many of his townspeople to emigrate to this place. The first clearing in Lawsville was made in 1797 by James Clark; others from this town who became noted citizens of this and other places are Samuel A. Foot, Seabury Ford, Peter Hitchcock, Stephen Rowe Bradley, Kensett, Seymour, Mallory, Micah Brooks, Lyman Hall, Samuel Beach, Commodore Hitchcock, Andrew H. Foot, and many more whose personal history will later be told.

The War of 1812 seems to have caused very little excitement here; no public or town records regarding it are to be found, but Cheshire was represented by Rodney Smith, Moses Bellamy, Samuel Bellamy, Silas Nelson, Micah Ward, Rufus Cook, Merriam Cook, Azariah Winchell, Leverett Carrington, Samuel Atwater, and it is related that about one hundred men under the leadership of Gen. Andrew Hull went to New Haven and helped repair the fortifications.

The closing words of Mr. Beach's centennial address of 1880 would seem to serve as an appropriate ending for this, his later work:

"We have now reached the closing chapter of Cheshire in the past; the record presented is comparatively commonplace. Our early ancestors lived in an age eminently practical, their powers of invention were limited. They subdued a stubborn soil, and overcame a rank wilderness, peacefully ending their days, trusting in God and knowing that the results of their labors would be enjoyed in the future by their children.

The new generation was more progressive. As schools and colleges increased, invention was stimulated, railroads and steamboats multiplied. Enterprising men made their mark in the world.

Let us then occasionally look back upon our ancestors, not to smile at their errors, or to criticize their prim, precise Puritan language or ways.

Let us rather receive a lesson from our forefathers and resolve to imitate their good works; covering with the veil of charity that portion of the past history of our progenitors we may not approve or desire to perpetuate."

Of interest, as showing some of the things for which our ancestors spent their money and what they cost are these items taken from the account book of Phineas Truman Ives, kept during the years between 1810 and 1834.

Names of men found in later Historical Collections who are credited to Wallingford and Cheshire; and as nearly all these same names are found also on the Land Records, Marriage Records and Church Records of these towns, we may reasonably believe that they were actual residents who volunteered to serve their country.

Parson Hall's Records

BAPTISMS.

Note—In this list it will be observed that some parents on joining the church became members for the first time and were then entitled to have their children baptized. They had not previously owned the "covenant" and therefore could not have the ceremony of baptism administered to their children. This ruling of the early churches was a prolific cause of dissension and continued until 1660 or later when it was finally settled that all infants might be baptized, whether their parents owned the "covenant" or not.

All these people and thare fammelys, seventy years ago ; and upwards, in plesant wether filled the meeting house
Even to crowding—

And in summer Time I believe as many as sixty boys sat on the galre and pulpit stares and a bents befoar the first seats.

I can trace a number of the Decendance of those ancient fathers down to the sixth generation

Samuel A. Foot
Hannah Brown
Samuel Thomson
Marshal Ives

The children of those persons named are of the 6th generation. the foregoing Narative is the Recollections of Amasa Hitchcock in his old age ; he can say that eighty-three years have pased there Rounds to furrow my cheakes and cloth my head in snow.

Drops his pen with his Teers.

Sence from one to the seventh generation I will trace

- 1—Capt John Hotchkiss.
- 2—James Hotchkiss, son of John Hotchkiss.
- 3—The wife of Andrew Durand, daughter of James Hotchkiss.
- 4—Samuel Durand, son of Andrew Durand.
- 5—The wife of Alling Gaylord, daughter of Samuel Durand.
- 6—The wife of Jesse Warner, was the daughter of Alling Gaylord.
- 7th—The children of Jesse Warner are of the 7th Generation.

I will trace the Decendents of one of those fathears I have mentioned.

- 1—Mr. Caleb Mathes.
- 2—the wife of Dr. Benjamin Lewis was the daughter of Mr. Mathes.
- 3—Mr. Bela Lewis was the eldest son of Dr. Lewis.
- 4—The wife of Andrew Hull Esq. was the daughter of Bela Lewis.
- 5—Mrs. Hannah Brown was the daughter of Andrew Hull Esq.
- 6—Mrs. Brown's children.

The house that Mr. Caleb Mathese built, lived and died in is now standing and ocepied by Job spery.

Rote Janeuary A. D., 1823.

Those names marked * are those men who moved out of Cheshire afterwards, in number 32.

The foregoing record of Amasa Hitchcock, copied by me ("verbatim et literatim") obtained from Augustus Hitchcock, a descendant of Amasa. On a separate sheet of paper I found the following notes in the old man's hand writing:

"John Hitchcock, one of the first settlers, of Cheshire, died May, 1760, aged 72.

Note—It was his father, John Hitchcock, Senior, who was the first settler.

Jotham Hitchcock died September 25th, 1769, aged 45.

Titus Hitchcock, by fatal accident, died April 25th.
